PUBLISHERS' NOTE TO VOLUME III

THE difficulties of producing a work of this magnitude und war conditions require no explanation. The Publishers hav however, been fortunate in some respects. Mr. Erskir Simes, the senior editor, has, as the result of disabilities co tracted in the last war, been found unfit for active servic and consequently has not been called up as a member of th Emergency Reserve of Officers. Mr. Charles Scholefiel although he was commissioned far in advance of the date o which he could have been called upon to register under th National Service (Armed Forces) Act, 1939, was available fc some months, and was responsible for a substantial proportio of this volume. Mr. A. N. C. Shelley, who in September, 193 was recalled from practice to resume his former position in th Local Government Division of the Ministry of Health, wa nevertheless authorized by H.M. Government to continue givin such time as he could find to work as one of the editors c Lumley.

There can be no question about the vital importance c Local Government in normal times, and that importanc has increased greatly in these war days. "Lumley," as th standard work for local government, must comprehend th subject in the fullest detail, and to deal with it in a less com plete manner would be a fundamental mistake and unworth of its standing as the great reference work to which all officer of Local Authorities turn. The Publishers, therefore, feel the are interpreting the wishes of all the subscribers in sparing n pains to make "Lumley" complete and comprehensive.

The Editors referred in their prefaces to Volumes I and I to the problems attendant on the production of this edition while the work of consolidating the Local Government statute was still in progress. At the time of the outbreak of wa they had made some progress with the editing of the forme Appendix I (subsidiary statutes) and the former Appendix I (Statutory Rules and Orders, etc.). It soon became apparen however, that the original scheme of four volumes woul not meet the case, as that number of volumes could nc contain the statutes, the Statutory Rules and Orders, and th consolidated index. The Editors and Publishers, after fu consideration, decided upon the following plan for the publication of the work. The Statutory Rules and Orders, formerly Appendix II, were obviously most urgently needed, as many of them are supplemental to statutes in Volumes I and II; they are published in the present Volume III. It was then proposed to print in chronological order the remainder of the statutes whether formerly contained in the main text or in Appendix I; the distinction between the Public Health Acts and the subsidiary statutes had often been hard to draw and it was felt reasonable to abandon it for the present. These statutes, together with the consolidated index, it was proposed to issue in two volumes, IV and V.

Since those decisions were made, early in 1940, the war situation has entirely changed, and in addition, as stated at the beginning of this note, Mr. Scholefield's services are no longer available. For these reasons no undertaking can be given as to the date of publication of these further volumes, although every effort is being made to expedite them; but it was necessary to indicate the plan in order that the modification of the cross-references in earlier volumes might be understood. The cross-references in Volumes I and II must be adapted as follows: References "post," or to "Appendix I, post," should be read as references to Volume IV or V, according to the date of the Act; references to "Appendix II, post," should be read as references to the present Volume III.

This volume may be regarded as containing all Statutory Rules and Orders, Circulars and Memoranda, relevant to the subject, issued up to January 1, 1940, though one important Order since that date is included in the Addenda. In considering the relevance of Orders to "Lumley" the Editors have as a rule excluded material of a temporary nature, arising out of war conditions. For this reason portions of the Defence (General) Regulations, 1939, which affect Public Health have not been included; these and other emergency orders can be referred to in Butterworth's Emergency Legislation Service (Annotated).

In conclusion the Publishers would like to repeat the invitation of the Editors in the previous volume, welcoming corrections or criticisms.

ACCOUNTS AND AUDIT.

See also RATING AND VALUATION.

By s. 235 (1) of the L. G. A., 1933, ante, p. 1082, the Minister of Health may make regulations generally with respect to the preparation and audit of accounts which are subject to audit by a district auditor, including (inter alia) the mode of keeping the accounts of the authority and their officers, and the form of those accounts. Although this provision is a re-enactment of previous powers (see ante, p. 1082), the only regulations which have been made relate only to the accounts of boroughs and metropolitan boroughs (S. R. & O., 1930, No. 30, post, p. 2350), although it is understood that the form of accounts there prescribed have been followed, in whole or in part, by other authorities. As regard district councils, the Local Government Board stated in a circular of December 24th, 1894, that, pending the issue of an Order for Accounts, rural district councils should keep their accounts in the form adopted by their predecessors the rural sanitary authorities. As regards the accounts of urban district councils, in previous editions there has been included the General Order of March 22nd, 1880; this order is still applicable to urban authorities, but is, for all practical purposes, now obsolete and it has accordingly been omitted.

PURCHASE OF PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS—MEMORANDUM.

MEMORANDUM AS TO THE LEGALITY OF EXPENSES INCURRED BY LOCAL AUTHORITIES IN PURCHASING PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS.

The Local Government Board have recently had under consideration the question of the legality of the purchase by local authorities, at the cost of the funds under their control, of periodical publications which contain reports of decisions of the courts of law, or other information connected with matters subject to their jurisdiction

Hitherto the Board have generally considered that the local rates could not legally be expended in the purchase of the publications referred to.

Recently, however, they have seen reason to doubt whether this view could be supported, and they have therefore consulted the law officers of the Crown upon the point. The effect of the opinion given by the law officers is, that if the publications referred to contain information so immediately connected with the discharge of their duties by the local authorities as to be likely to enable them to discharge those duties more efficiently than they could without such publications, the local authorities may legally make the purchase at the cost of the rates.

CIRCULAR OF MINISTRY OF HEALTH TO LOCAL AUTHORITIES, DATED DECEMBER 20TH, 1921.

I.—AUDIT STAMP DUTY.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to forward the enclosed copy of an Order made by the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury in pursuance of section 61 (1) of the Finance Act, 1921, fixing a new scale of stamp duty to be charged on local authorities in respect of the audit of their accounts by District Auditors. The Associations representing the principal classes of local authorities have been consulted on the subject.

The Order, which is termed the Audit Stamp Duty (Local Authorities) Order, 1921, comes into force on the 24th instant, and, with the exception specified in Article 3 (b), will apply to the accounts of local authorities for any financial period ending on or after the 30th September last. The old scale will apply to all accounts for periods ended before that date.

It will be observed that under the new scale deduction may be made from the expenditure comprised in the financial statement, as audited and allowed by the district auditor, of the following items in calculating the net expenditure on which stamp duty is payable:—

(1) Sums paid in pursuance of a precept;
(2) Grants paid to other local authorities in conformity with a statutory requirement or direction of a Government Department;
(3) Repayment of loan made out of money reborrowed or out of funds which will be replaced by money reborrowed;
(4) One half of any expenditure (exclusive of any repayment of loan as in (3)) met by loan during the period to which the financial statement relates; and
(5) Payment to the Motor Tax Account of sums payable into the Exchequer by virtue of the Roads Act, 1920.

No deductions other than the above are allowable.

II.—STATUTORY FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

In connection with the new scale of audit stamp duty it has been found necessary to revise the form of statement in which the expenditure of the principal classes of local authorities should be presented to the district auditor for certification. After consultation with representatives of the Institute of Municipal Treasurers and Accountants, a new Order, entitled the Financial Statements Order, 1921, has been made by the Minister, a copy of which is enclosed. This Order, which comes into operation on the same date as the Audit Stamp Duties (Local Authorities) Order, 1921, prescribes the form of financial statement to be used by local authorities in respect of such of their accounts as are audited by the District Auditor, and, with the exception mentioned in Article 3 (4), will apply to any statement for a financial period ending on or after 30th September last.

The only instructions appended to the form of statement in the new Order are as follows:—

(1) For the purpose of ascertaining the figures to be entered in the financial statement, the officer responsible for the statement shall make up from the ledger a schedule setting out the total amount credited and debited to each account, but so that no one item is included more than once in such Schedule, and shall include all the expenditure under each heading without deduction of any income connected therewith.
(2) The schedule shall be submitted to the District Auditor at the audit, and preserved for future reference.

The direction in these instructions that the same item is not to be included more than once is of importance in connection with deduction items, which appear as credits in expenditure accounts, such as—

(a) correcting or adjusting transfers,
(b) recoveries of overpayments, or
(c) discounts obtained.

On the other hand, the direction that expenditure is to be entered in full without deduction of income connected therewith, will preclude the deduction of credit entries appearing in expenditure accounts when the items represent actual income arising out of the expenditure, and not transfers of expenditure to other accounts or corrections of overpayments. Thus, items of the following classes which sometimes appear as contra credits are to be treated as income—

(a) charges for work executed,
(b) contributions in aid of expenditure, or
(c) proceeds of sale of any kind.

There does not appear to be any difficulty in applying these principles in distinguishing between the cases which demand net entry and those which demand gross entry. The same principles should be applied on the income side. Thus, abatements of charge should always be treated as deductions from income, but costs connected with income and its collection should be treated as expenditure.

Under the Financial Statements Order, 1918, now rescinded, contributions to sinking funds and other similar funds, as well as payments out of such funds, were treated as expenditure. The new Order contemplates that transfers from one fund to another fund of the same authority should not be regarded as expenditure of the authority, and therefore provides that only the final payments out of the fund shall be treated as expenditure. The change will secure uniformity in the treatment of contributions to reserve funds, sinking funds, pension funds, trading revenue accounts, housing (assisted scheme) revenue accounts, &c., where there is now great diversity of treatment. The effect of the change will be that in all cases stamp duty will be charged only on the final expenditure of the funds, and not, as hitherto, sometimes on the contributions to the fund, sometimes on the fund expenditure, and sometimes on both.

Payments in respect of rate or rent charges, services rendered, or supplies made by one fund to another, should not be treated as contributions but should rank as expenditure of the authority.

The new form of financial statement has been so arranged as to provide for the exclusion of any duplication, while at the same time allowing the charges falling upon the several funds or revenues to be shown at their correct amounts.

Moneys invested and remaining as part of the unexpended balances of the authority, including loans advanced by them, should not be treated as expenditure. Conversely, the proceeds of sale of investments and the repayment of loans advanced by the authority should not be treated as income. Profits and losses on such transactions, however, should be treated as income or expenditure, as the case may be, and costs connected with the transactions should also be treated as expenditure.

Where the new form of epitome of accounts is in use for the purposes of the Local Taxation Returns it will take the place of the schedule referred to in the instructions. It will be found that the totals required for the financial statement can be readily extracted from the epitome.

In connection with the stamping of the statement the Commissioners of Inland Revenue require that in every case, where the duty chargeable exceeds £5, it shall be denoted by an impressed stamp. In no such case should an adhesive stamp be used for the purpose.

THE CLERK OF THE PEACE (TAXATION ALLOWANCE) ORDER, 1922, DATED SEPTEMBER 1ST, 1922, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH.

Whereas by an Order dated the 21st day of November, 1844, issued in pursuance of section 39 of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1844"), the Poor Law Commissioners declared that the Clerk of the Peace of every county or place in England and Wales should be allowed for the taxation of every bill due to any solicitor in respect of business performed on behalf of any parish or union after the rate of fourpence per sheet or folio of seventy-two words;

And whereas by an Order dated the 20th day of April, 1877, issued in pursuance of section 249 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1875"), the Local Government Board made similar provision in regard to the taxation of every bill due to any solicitor in respect of legal business performed on behalf of any local authority whose accounts are required by the Act of 1875 to be audited;

And whereas the Master of the Crown Office has fixed the rate of allowance to Clerks of the Peace in respect of taxations under section 39 of the Act of 1844 and under section 249 of the Act of 1875 as herein declared in lieu of the rate hereinbefore recited:

Now therefore the Minister of Health in pursuance of his powers under the Act of 1844, the Act of 1875 and any other statutes in that behalf, hereby orders and declares as follows:—

1. This Order may be cited as "The Clerk of the Peace (Taxation Allowance) Order, 1922," and shall come into operation forthwith.

2. A Clerk of the Peace shall be entitled to remuneration after the rate of sixpence per folio of seventy-two words for the taxation of bills under section 39 of the Act of 1844 and section 249 of the Act of 1875.

3. The said Orders of the 21st day of November, 1844, and the 20th day of April, 1877, are hereby rescinded.

(Section 229 et seq. [ante, p. 1074])

DECISIONS OF A DISTRICT AUDITOR.

INSTRUCTIONS AS TO THE MODES OF APPEALING AND OF APPLYING FOR A DECLARATION.

A.—Appeals or Applications to the High Court or the Minister of Health.

1.—(a) Any person aggrieved by a District Auditor's decision on any matter with respect to which he made an objection at the audit, and any person aggrieved by a disallowance or surcharge made by a District Auditor may appeal, where the decision relates to an amount exceeding five hundred pounds, to the High Court and, in any other case, to the High Court or to the Minister of Health. The Court or Minister, as the case may be, upon the receipt of the appeal is empowered to confirm, vary or quash the Auditor's decision.

(b) Any person surcharged by a District Auditor, whether or not he appeals as above, may apply to the High Court or to the Minister of Health, as the case may be, for a declaration that in relation to the subject matter of the surcharge he acted reasonably or in the belief that his action was authorised by law, and the Court or Minister, if satisfied that there is proper ground for doing so, may make a declaration to that effect and may, if satisfied that the person surcharged ought fairly to be excused, relieve him either wholly or partly from personal liability in respect of the surcharge.

(c) In any case in which an appeal is made to the Minister of Health, he may, and shall, if so directed by the High Court, state in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court any question of law arising in the course of the appeal, but otherwise the decision of the Minister shall not be subject to appeal to any Court. An appellant may apply to the Court to direct the Minister of Health to state a special case.

2. The procedure in respect of appeals and applications to the High Court, including applications to that Court for an Order directing the Minister of Health to state a special case in accordance with paragraph 1 (c) above is laid down by Rules of Court. The general effect of these Rules is as follows:—

(i) Appeals and applications are to be made to a Divisional Court of the King's Bench Division by an originating notice of motion.

ACCOUNTS AND AUDIT

(ii) The evidence is to be by affidavit except so far as the Court may otherwise direct.

(iii) The notice of motion is to be served within 6 weeks after the District Auditor's decision, and is to be served upon him and upon the Local Authority to whose accounts the matter relates, if they are not themselves the appellants.

(iv) The notice of motion is to state the grounds of the appeal or application, and the date mentioned in the notice for the hearing shall be not less than 28 days after the service of the notice.

(v) Within 7 days after the service upon the District Auditor of the notice the appellant or applicant is to file at the Crown Office a copy of the notice and an affidavit setting out the reasons stated by the Auditor and the facts on which the appellant or applicant intends to rely. If this is not done either the Local Authority or the District Auditor may apply for an order discharging the notice of motion.

(vi) In the case of an application (but not an appeal) notice is to be published by the applicant in a local newspaper in two successive weeks, one publication at least to precede the filing of the notice of motion. The published notice is to state the nature of the application, the right of local government electors to be heard upon it, and the address from which copies of the relevant documents may be obtained.

(vii) Local government electors may be heard or may file affidavits.

(viii) Copy of any affidavit by appellant or applicant to be furnished to the Local Authority and to the District Auditor, and of any affidavit in opposition to be furnished to appellant or applicant.

(ix) Notice of appeal and of application in respect of the same surcharge may be combined in one notice of motion, and the facts relevant to either may be contained in one affidavit.

(x) An application for an Order directing the Minister to state a special case is to be made to a Divisional Court of the King's Bench Division by way of an ex parte motion for a rule nisi supported by affidavit. Motion not to be entertained unless the Minister has been asked to state a case before decision and has declined. The motion must be made on one of the first three days on which the Court sits for hearing ex parte motions after the Minister's refusal to state a case has been communicated to the appellant.

(xi) A copy of any special case stated by the Minister is to be served on each party to the appeal and filed at the Crown Office.

The Rules form an addition to Order LV.B. of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, and are included in the Rules of the Supreme Court (No. 1), 1928, dated the 19th March, 1928, as amended by the Rules of the Supreme Court (No. 747), 1934, dated the 17th July, 1934.

They are printed in Statutory Rules and Orders and may be obtained (price 2*d.*) from His Majesty's Stationery Office at any of the following addresses: York House, Kingsway, London, W.C.2; 120, George Street, Edinburgh; 26, York Street, Manchester; 1, St. Andrew's Crescent, Cardiff; 80, Chichester Street, Belfast; or through any Bookseller.

[These Rules are set out at p. 2349, post.]

B.—Appeals or Applications to the Minister of Health.

3. Any person appealing or applying to the Minister of Health under paragraphs 1 (a) or 1 (b) above should do so within six weeks from the date of the Auditor's decision. He may also apply for a personal hearing by a person appointed for the purpose by the Minister.

4. Any person desiring to appeal, should, unless the Auditor has already entered his reasons in the book of account in which his certificate is entered, apply to him to enter his reasons in that book; and for this purpose the book should be submitted to the Auditor.

5. When the Auditor has entered his reasons, an exact copy of them and also a copy of his certificate, including his signature and the date of the entry, should be forwarded to the Ministry with the appeal.

An application for a declaration under paragraph 1 (b) above, in any case in which an appeal is not made, should also be accompanied by these documents.

6. The appeal and/or application should be by letter on foolscap paper, addressed to the Secretary, Ministry of Health, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, and must be signed by the appellant in his own handwriting. Where two or more persons are mentioned in the Auditor's certificate, the appeal and/or application should be signed by each of those desirous of appealing or making an application.

7. The appeal and/or application should contain a full statement of the facts which the appellant or applicant may desire to lay before the Minister; and the grounds upon which the appeal or application is made should be explicitly set out. If there are any documents bearing upon the matter, they should be forwarded to the Ministry; and where there are resolutions of the local authority with reference to the subject-matter of the expenditure, copies of the resolutions should also be sent.

Unless an appeal and/or application be made against the Auditor's decision, the sum certified by him to be due should be paid within fourteen days from the date of his certificate, to the Treasurer of the Authority, or, in the case of an Authority having no Treasurer, to the person or persons who receives money on their behalf.

ANIMALS: DISEASES OF.

THE DISEASES OF ANIMALS ACTS, 1894 TO 1927 (a).

(a) The Diseases of Animals Acts are not printed in this work, as they are outside the scope of the work and the local authorities for the purposes of the Acts are the county and borough councils. In view, however, of the interrelation between the diseases of animals and the public health of the inhabitants it has been considered desirable to print this summary of the Acts prepared and published by the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries.

ANIMALS: DISEASES OF

The suppression of contagious and infectious diseases in animals is of primary importance to the agricultural industry of every country, and practically every country in the world has adopted measures of some kind for that purpose.

Records exist of serious loss suffered for several centuries past from animal epidemics, but no organised attempt at control was made in Great Britain until 1848, when the prevalence of sheep-pox, introduced from the Continent, led to the passing of two Acts of Parliament under which that disease and the cattle-plague outbreaks of 1865 were dealt with. These Acts proved insufficient to prevent the spread of cattle plague throughout the country until the Cattle Diseases Prevention Act, 1866, was passed; this required the compulsory slaughter, with compensation, of all affected animals, and empowered the slaughter of animals in contact therewith. This measure succeeded in eradicating the disease by September, 1867, and the experience of these two diseases led to the passing of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, which conferred extensive powers upon the Privy Council and local authorities to deal with animal diseases, including pleuro-pneumonia and foot-and-mouth disease, as well as cattle-plague and sheep-pox. The Act of 1869 also imposed the first effective restrictions on the importation of animals from certain foreign countries where disease was prevalent. Agricultural opinion was not, however, favourable to the full exercise of the powers conferred by the Act of 1869, and the country had to experience two more outbreaks of cattle-plague (1872 and 1877), and very extensive outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease and contagious pleuro-pneumonia of cattle, before the Act of 1869 was revised by the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, which laid the foundation for the methods now in force. The Act of 1878 and its subsequent amendments were consolidated by the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, which, with its nine amending Acts of 1896 to 1927, confers the powers upon which State action at the present time is based.

Main Objects of the Acts; Central and Local Organisation.—Generally speaking, the Acts impose upon the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, as the central authority, the duty of devising and putting into operation measures for the control and eradication of contagious diseases amongst animals in England, Wales and Scotland. They confer upon the Minister wide powers to make Orders for these and other specified purposes, including—

(a) The declaration of infected places and areas;
(b) The prohibition or regulation of the movement of animals into, out of, or within such places and areas, and of the exposure of animals at markets, sales and exhibitions;
(c) The control of the importation of foreign animals, carcasses, fodder, etc., for the purpose of preventing the introduction of disease from without;
(d) The muzzling and control of dogs; and (e) The protection of animals and poultry from unnecessary suffering during transit by land or sea.

Thus, while indicating the general lines of the procedure to be adopted, the Acts empower the Minister to prescribe the details by administrative Orders which have the full force of an Act of Parliament.

For the discharge of these duties the Minister has established the Diseases of Animals Division of the Ministry, under the direction of the chief veterinary officer, assisted by a professional staff consisting of a deputy chief veterinary officer, 9 superintending inspectors, 32 divisional inspectors and 63 inspectors, and also by a lay administrative and clerical staff numbering 40. The professional staff is distributed between the head office, general field work, inspection of animals at ports and the Ministry's laboratory. Two of the senior inspectors are stationed in South America.

With certain exceptions, the Acts require the local authorities and the police generally to execute and enforce the provisions of the Acts, and of the Orders of the Minister thereunder. The local authorities constituted for the purposes of these Acts number 332, and comprise the county councils, the county borough councils and the councils of certain other boroughs and burghs. All these authorities are required to appoint their own veterinary and other inspectors to carry out the duties imposed upon them, and the expenses of the local authorities, with certain exceptions, have to be defrayed out of the local rate. In most of the counties the police have been appointed as inspectors. An inspector of the Ministry or of a local authority has special powers of entry upon any premises or on any vessel on which he has reason to believe that disease exists, or that the Acts or Orders of the Minister, or the Regulations of a local authority, are being infringed. In addition, an inspector of the Ministry may enter any premises to ascertain whether pleuro-pneumonia, foot-and-mouth disease or swine fever exists thereon.

Diseases dealt with under the Acts.—The Acts and Orders of the Minister at the present time require the notification of cases or suspected cases of the following twelve diseases: cattle plague, contagious pleuro-pneumonia of cattle, foot-and-mouth disease, sheep-pox, swine fever, sheep scab, anthrax, rabies, glanders, epizootic lymphangitis, parasitic mange in horses, asses or mules, and certain forms of bovine tuberculosis. These may be divided into two classes:—

(1) Those in which the diagnosis is in the hands of the Ministry's officers, i.e. cattle-plague, pleuro-pneumonia, foot-and-mouth disease, sheep-pox and swine fever; and

(2) Those in which the diagnosis is carried out primarily by officers of the local authorities, i.e. anthrax, sheep scab, glanders, rabies, epizootic lymphangitis, parasitic mange of equines and bovine tuberculosis. In anthrax and rabies, however, the diagnosis is subject to confirmation by the Ministry, and in sheep scab, glanders and tuberculosis the owner has a right of appeal to the Ministry against the diagnosis.

Of the above diseases, no outbreaks have occurred in Great Britain of cattle plague since 1877, pleuro-pneumonia since 1898, sheep-pox since 1850, epizootic lymphangitis since 1906, or of rabies since 1922. The efforts of the authorities are therefore directed mainly against other diseases.

Responsibilities of Stock Owners and Veterinary Practitioners; Reporting of Disease and Separation of Affected Animals.—Every person having in his possession or under his charge an animal or carcass affected with or suspected of any of the notifiable diseases above-named is required:

(a) As far as practicable to keep that animal or carcass separate from animals not so affected; and

(b) With all practicable speed to give notice, to a police constable, of the fact that the animal or carcass is so affected or suspected.

Section 57 (1) of the Act of 1894 provides that the owner or person in charge of an animal, charged with an offence against the Act relative to disease, shall be presumed to have known of the existence of the disease or illness, unless and until he shows to the satisfaction of the Court that he had not knowledge thereof, and could not with reasonable diligence have obtained that knowledge.

Any veterinary surgeon who finds any notifiable disease is likewise required to report such cases to the local authority.

An important provision contained in the Orders of the Minister dealing with the specified diseases is the prohibition of the exposure of any affected or suspected animal in a market, fairground, saleyard or place of exhibition, and of the movement or grazing of such an animal on a highway, road or lane, or on common or unenclosed land, or of its movement by rail or water.

The Acts and Orders impose upon stockowners and the public generally an obligation to afford inspectors and police all necessary facilities for the performance of their duties, and any obstruction is an indictable offence. Persons guilty of an offence in respect of these or other matters referred to in the Acts and Orders are liable to a penalty of £50, or £5 in respect of each animal where more than 10 animals are concerned, and in certain cases to imprisonment.

Slaughter and Compensation: Remedial Treatment.—In the case of cattle plague and pleuro-pneumonia the Acts render it obligatory upon the Ministry to slaughter all affected animals, with payment of compensation. In the case of sheep-pox slaughter by the local authority is compulsory.

In foot-and-mouth disease slaughter is not obligatory, but may be carried out at the discretion either of the Ministry or of the local authority. In practice, in cases of foot-and-mouth disease, slaughter of affected and in-contact animals, accompanied by stringent restrictions on movement of animals in infected areas, is adopted by the Ministry as being the most effective and economical method of maintaining the comparative freedom of this country from the disease, regard being had to present pathological knowledge. This disease is the subject of investigation by a scientific research committee appointed by the Minister of Agriculture.

In the case of swine fever also, slaughter is within the discretion of the Ministry. As a "stamping out" policy, slaughter in swine fever was given a prolonged trial over many years at considerable public expense, but without success. The attempt to stamp it out was abandoned in 1915 in favour of control by isolation of infected herds, and slaughter is now carried out only where necessary to provide a means of diagnosis by post-mortem examination.

Of the other notifiable diseases, slaughter of affected animals is obligatory upon the local authority in cases of glanders and certain forms of bovine tuberculosis, with compensation to the owners; and also of dogs and cats (but without compensation) found to be affected with rabies, or known to have been bitten by a rabid dog or cat.

Cases of sheep scab and parasitic mange in equines are dealt with by the application of remedial measures; sheep scab by the dipping of the affected sheep twice with a short interval (not less than 7 days and not more than 14 days) between the two dippings; and mange by a dressing or other remedy approved by a veterinary surgeon. Anthrax in animals is nearly always fatal, and slaughter is expressly avoided, as the spilling of the blood, which swarms with anthrax bacilli, is attended with great danger both to other animals and to human beings. All stockowners and butchers are cautioned against the cutting of the carcasses of animals which have died of anthrax or suspected anthrax. Cremation is the usual method of destruction of the carcasses.

The above measures are accompanied in every case by restrictions on the movement of the animals on the infected premises, with the object of preventing the spread of infection to other stock.

Principles of Compensation.—The amount of compensation payable for animals slaughtered by the Ministry or local authority varies with the disease and according to whether the animal is diseased or not. The object of the provision made in the Act of 1894 for the payment of compensation is frequently misinterpreted. Compensation is not provided for the purpose of reimbursing an owner for losses incurred through outbreaks of disease amongst his stock; such losses are ordinary trade risks connected with the live stock industry, and are to some extent insurable. Compensation is provided to enable the Ministry or local authority compulsorily to acquire the ownership of any animals which it considers should be slaughtered in the public interest. These animals become the property of the Ministry or local authority, and the owner is paid compensation according to a prescribed scale based upon the market value of the animals when slaughtered. The Ministry and the local authority have power, however, to withhold compensation, either wholly or partially, in respect of an animal slaughtered under the Acts and Orders where the owner or person in charge of the animal has, in the judgment of the Ministry or the local authority, as the case may be, been guilty, in relation to the animal, of any offence against the Diseases of Animals Acts or Orders made thereunder. This power to withhold compensation is sometimes exercised, more particularly in cases in which the owner or person in charge has been convicted for the very serious offence of failing to report disease.

Other Diseases: Provision for Research.—The Act of 1894 empowers the Minister, by Order, to add other diseases to the list of those to be dealt with by State action. Some of the more serious diseases in animals, such as contagious abortion in cattle, Johne's disease, etc., are not suitable for addition to the list of notifiable diseases, either because the nature of the disease renders this impracticable, or because the imposition of such measures of control as would be necessary would interfere unduly with the industry and thus make the remedy worse than the disease. Such diseases, therefore, are not notifiable, but the more important are dealt with in leaflets of advice which are available for the use of farmers.

In addition, scientific research is conducted into various contagious and infectious diseases of animals, including foot-and-mouth disease, contagious abortion in cattle, mares and ewes, various sheep diseases such as louping ill and scrapie, tuberculosis, Johne's disease, mastitis in cows, quarter evil in cattle, etc. These researches are conducted either at the Ministry's Veterinary Laboratory (New Haw, Weybridge, Surrey) or at various institutes aided by Government grants.

Measures for Preventing Introduction of Infection from Abroad.—One of the most important aspects of the problem of keeping Great Britain free from disease is the prevention of the introduction of disease from abroad. Our insular position gives us special advantages in this respect, but these are limited by the fact that we are not self-supporting either in regard to foodstuffs or various raw materials for manufacture, etc. Without undue interference with these necessities, it has been possible to provide a considerable measure of protection against the introduction of infection by live animals, carcasses, hay, straw, packing materials and animal foodstuffs by the following action :—

(i) Prohibition of landing of live animals from abroad, except—
- (a) From Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, subject to certain conditions ;
- (b) Canadian store cattle for feeding purposes, subject to the provisions of the Act of 1922 ; and
- (c) Fat cattle or sheep from Canada, the United States, the Union of South Africa (including the Mandated Territory of South West Africa), Southern Rhodesia, Iceland and the Faroe Islands, subject to slaughter at an imported animals' wharf at the port of landing within 10 days after landing.

(ii) Prohibition of the landing of fresh carcasses and animal products from the Continent of Europe, with certain minor exceptions.

(iii) Prohibition of landing of hay and straw from countries infected with foot-and-mouth disease.

(iv) Requirement that packing materials used for goods and meat, whether imported or not, shall not be brought into contact with animals and shall be destroyed when their use as packing material is finished.

(v) Requirement that all waste animal foodstuffs or swill containing animal matter, whether of foreign or home origin, shall be boiled before being fed to or brought into contact with animals.

(vi) Prohibition of landing of dogs and other canine animals from abroad, except by licence from the Ministry and subject to six months' quarantine on approved premises, as a protection against rabies.

(vii) Control of importation of horses, asses and mules, which are required to be accompanied by a veterinary certificate in specified terms, as a protection against glanders, epizootic lymphangitis, dourine, and certain other diseases of equines.

Protection of Animals and Poultry from Avoidable Suffering during Transit.—In addition to the measures above described for the suppression and prevention of animal diseases, the Ministry is charged under the Diseases of Animals Acts with the duty of making such regulations as may be considered necessary for protecting animals and poultry from avoidable suffering during transit on land or by sea, and for securing to them a proper supply of food and water. Orders with this object in view have been made as follows :

(a) Transit of Animals Order of 1927, dealing with the carriage of animals between ports in Great Britain and between Great Britain and Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, and also the carriage of animals by rail in Great Britain. This Order includes requirements as to the nature of the fittings for vessels engaged in the trade, and also the method of construction of railway vehicles carrying animals by railway.

(b) Conveyance of Live Poultry Order of 1919, to protect live poultry during transit by sea, road or rail, or during exposure for sale, from exposure to bad weather or excessive heat, and to prevent overcrowding or the use of unsuitable receptacles.

(c) The Exportation and Transit of Horses Order of 1921, which regulates the traffic in horses exported to the Continent or elsewhere, prevents the export of decrepit horses, i.e. horses unfit to travel or work, lays down stringent provisions as to the construction of the stalls in which the horses are to travel, and requires the provision of an adequate supply of food and water at all stages of the journey.

ANIMALS : DISEASES OF

The Dogs Act, 1906.—Section 2 of the Act of 1906 is the only part of the Act with which the Ministry is directly concerned as the administering authority. That section adds to the purposes for which the Ministry may make Orders under the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, the following :—

(a) For prescribing the wearing by dogs, whilst in a highway or place of public resort, of collars bearing the name and address of the owners ; and

(b) For preventing dogs from straying during the hours of darkness, the object being to prevent the worrying of cattle and sheep.

Collar Regulations are now in force throughout Great Britain, and local authorities are empowered to make regulations requiring dogs to be kept under adequate control during the hours of darkness. These powers have been exercised in nearly every county in Great Britain.

ALTERATIONS OF BOROUGH BOUNDARIES.

(LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1933, SECTIONS 140 AND 285.)

PROVISIONAL ORDER INSTRUCTIONS * FOR TOWN COUNCILS.

PART I.

Procedure.

1. Form of Application.

(i) The application, called in the Act proposals should be in the form of a memorial of the council under the corporate seal.

(ii) It should be either printed or neostyled and in foolscap size.

(iii) For facility of reference, the information in the memorial should be arranged strictly in the order and manner set out in Part II. of these instructions.

* In the case of County Boroughs these Instructions apply subject to the provisions of section 140 (3) of the Local Government Act, 1933. A County Borough can proceed by way of a Provisional Order only if no objection to that procedure is made by any Local Authority concerned.

2. Maps.

The following maps should accompany the memorial:—

(i) A key map, on a scale of 1″ to the mile (Map A) showing the main outlines of the proposals and the whole of any district of which part is scheduled for inclusion, and showing as much of the adjoining districts not so scheduled as can be conveniently shown.

(ii) An ordnance map on a scale of 6″ to the mile (Map B) mounted on linen and folded to about 12″ by 9″, showing clearly the proposed alterations of boundary. The colouring and notation defined in Appendix A should be employed, and the items should, in so far as applicable, be clearly indicated.

(iii) If the proposals involve the constitution or alteration of wards the proposals can probably be readily indicated on Map B. If not, a separate map on a scale of 6″ to the mile (Map C) will be required which need not include the particulars shown on Map B.

(iv) A map on a scale of 1″ to the mile (Map D), showing the existing County electoral divisions and petty sessional divisions affected by the proposals, and the alterations proposed.

(v) A small-scale diagram in distinctive colours showing the Borough and each of the areas which it is proposed to include. This diagram should be bound with or otherwise incorporated in the memorial.

AREAS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT

3. Presentation of the Memorial.

In the consideration and making of Provisional Orders time is an essential factor. Intervals must be allowed for the notification of possible objections, the publication of notice of the local Inquiry by an Inspector, the proceedings at the Inquiry, the preparation by the Inspector of his report, the consideration of the report at the Ministry, and the drafting of the Order. The time at which the confirmation Bill must be introduced is regulated by the Standing Orders of Parliament.

It is accordingly very desirable that the Department should be informed at as early a date as possible of any intended application for an Order and that the application itself should be submitted in good time before the commencement of the Parliamentary Session. The early submission of an application may also allow of an unopposed extension order being brought into operation in April of the following year instead of six or twelve months later.

4. Deposit and Distribution of Documents.

Simultaneously with the transmission of the memorial and maps to the Ministry, a duplicate of the map or maps should be deposited in—

(i) The Town Clerk's Office, and be open to inspection without payment at all reasonable hours by all Local Authorities or persons affected.

(ii) Further copies of the memorial and maps should be distributed as follows:

Ministry of Health. . . .	14 copies of memorial.
Home Office	1 copy of memorial, list of Electoral Divisions and Maps A (B) * (C) * and D.
Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries	1 copy of memorial and Map B.
County council(s)	1 copy of memorial and Map B.
All other Local Authorities affected .	1 copy of memorial.

NOTE.—The lists and documents referred to in sections 15 and 16 below must accompany the copy of the memorial to the Ministry of Health but need not be furnished with the other copies, except that the Home Office should be furnished with a copy of the list of Electoral Divisions.

* Only the Ward Map B or C, as the case may be, need be sent.

5. Advertisement, Notice, Objections, etc.

(i) The purport of the application and the deposit of the maps in the Town Clerk's office should be advertised in the London Gazette and in one or more local newspapers circulating in the areas affected. The advertisement in the local newspaper(s) should appear within seven days after the date of the deposit. A model form of advertisement is given in Appendix B.

(ii) Notice in writing of the deposit of the maps should be given to each Local Authority affected at the time when the memorial is forwarded to them.

(iii) Each Local Authority should at the same time be informed that, if they intend to put forward objections to the proposals, they must notify the Ministry and the Town Council within two weeks and forward a full statement of their objections to the Ministry and the Town Council within a further period of four weeks.

6. Certificate.

The Town Clerk should furnish the Ministry with a certificate in the form given in Appendix C, as soon as practicable after the deposit of the maps and the advertisement referred to in paragraph 5 (i) above.

7. Parliamentary Fees.

The following fees are charged on Provisional Order Confirmation Bills:—

(i) On the second reading in the House of Lords, a fee of £15 to be paid on demand to the Accountant, House of Lords, S.W.1, direct or through Parliamentary Agents. Cheques to be made payable to the "House of Lords Fee Fund" and be crossed "Bank of England, Western Branch."

(ii) On the second reading in the House of Commons of a Bill for the confirmation of a Provisional Order a fee of £15 is charged to the applicants in respect of each Provisional Order, to be paid on demand to the Clerk of the Fees, House of Commons, S.W.1, direct or through Parliamentary Agents. Cheques to be made payable to the "Clerk of the Fees," and crossed.

In addition, in the case of an Unopposed Provisional Order a fee of £5 is payable in respect of each day on which the Unopposed Bills Committee of the House of Commons is occupied in considering the Confirming Bills this fee also is payable to the Clerk of the Fees, House of Commons, S.W.1.

No other Parliamentary fees are charged in the case of unopposed Provisional Orders.

17. The official mark shall be kept secret.

Admission to polling station.

18.—(1) No person shall be admitted to vote at any polling station except at the one to which he is allotted.

(2) The presiding officer shall regulate the number of electors to be admitted to the polling station at the same time, and shall exclude all other persons except the officers appointed under these regulations, the police officers on duty, and any person accompanying a blind elector for the purpose of assisting him to vote.

Ballot boxes to be sealed.

19. Immediately before the commencement of the poll the presiding officer shall show the ballot box empty to such persons, if any, as may be present in the polling station, so that they may see that it is empty, and shall then lock it up and place his seal upon it in such manner as to prevent it being opened without breaking the seal, and shall place it in his view for the receipt of voting papers, and keep it so locked and sealed.

Questions to be put to electors.

20.—(1) The presiding officer may, and, if required by two electors shall, put to any person applying for a voting paper at the time of his application, but not afterwards, the following questions, or either of them, that is to say:—

(a) Are you the person registered in the register of local government electors now in force for this [Borough] [Urban District] as follows—

[read the whole entry from the register].

(b) Have you already voted in the [Borough] [Urban District] at the present poll?

(2) A voting paper shall not be delivered to any person required to answer the above questions, or either of them, unless he has answered the question or questions satisfactorily.

(3) Save as by this regulation authorised, no inquiry shall be permitted as to the right of any person to vote.

Marking of voting papers.

21. A voting paper shall be delivered to an elector who applies therefor, and immediately before delivery—

(a) the voting paper shall be marked with an official mark, either embossed or perforated;

(b) the number, name and description of the elector as stated in the copy of the register shall be called out;

(c) the number of the elector shall be marked on the counterfoil, together with the distinctive letter of the parliamentary polling district in which the elector is registered; and

(d) a mark shall be placed in the register against the number of the elector to denote that he has received a voting paper, but without showing the particular voting paper which he has received.

22. The elector, on receiving the voting paper, shall forthwith proceed into one of the compartments in the polling station and there secretly mark his paper and fold it up so as to conceal his vote, and shall then show to the presiding officer the back of the paper, so as to disclose the official mark, and put the voting paper, so folded up, into the ballot box in the presence of the presiding officer. The elector shall vote without undue delay, and shall leave the polling station as soon as he has put his voting paper into the ballot box.

23.—(1) The presiding officer, on the application—

(a) of an elector who is incapacitated by blindness or other physical cause from voting in manner directed by these regulations; or

(b) if the poll is taken on a Saturday, of an elector who declares that he is a Jew, and objects on religious grounds to vote in manner directed by these regulations; or shall cause the vote of the elector to be marked on a voting paper in manner directed by the elector, and the voting paper to be placed in the ballot box.

(c) of an elector who makes a declaration that he is unable to read (in these regulations referred to as "the declaration of inability to read").

(2) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is marked in pursuance of this regulation, and the reason why it is so marked, shall be entered on a list (in these regulations called "the list of votes marked by the presiding officer").

24.—(1) Where an elector who is accompanied by another person makes application to the presiding officer to be allowed on the ground of blindness to vote with the assistance of the person accompanying him (in these regulations referred to as "the companion"), the presiding officer shall require the elector to declare orally whether he is so incapacitated by his blindness as to be unable to vote without assistance.

(2) If the presiding officer is satisfied that the elector is so incapacitated and is also satisfied by a written declaration made by the companion (in these regulations referred to as "the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector") that the companion is a qualified person within the meaning of this regulation and has not previously assisted more than one blind person to vote at the poll then being taken, the presiding officer shall grant the application, and thereupon anything which is by these regulations required to be done to or by the said elector in connection with the giving of his vote, may be done to, or with the assistance of, the companion as the case may be.

(3) For the purposes of this regulation a person shall be qualified to assist a blind elector to vote, if that person is either—

(a) a person who is entitled to vote at the poll; or

(b) the father, mother, brother, sister, husband, wife, son or daughter of the blind elector and has attained the age of twenty-one years.

(4) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is given in accordance with this regulation and the name and address of the companion shall be entered on a list (in these regulations called "the list of blind electors assisted by companions").

25.—(1) The declaration of inability to read and the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector—

(a) shall be respectively in the forms Nos. 7 and 8 in the schedule to these regulations; and

(b) shall be made before the presiding officer at the time when the elector applies for a voting paper or applies to vote with the assistance of the companion, as the case may be, and shall forthwith be handed to the presiding officer, who shall attest and retain it.

(2) No fee, stamp or other payment shall be charged in respect of the declaration.

For forms, see respectively Sched. Forms Nos. 8 and 9, post, p. 2407.

As to misnomers therein, see para. 35, post, p. 2405.

Spoilt voting papers.

26. An elector who has inadvertently dealt with his voting paper in such manner that it cannot be conveniently used as a voting paper may, on delivering it to the presiding officer and proving the fact of the inadvertence to the satisfaction of the presiding officer, obtain another voting paper in the place of the voting paper so delivered up (in these regulations called "a spoilt voting paper"), and the spoilt voting paper shall be immediately cancelled.

BILLS IN PARLIAMENT

Packets of voting papers etc. to be sealed.

27. As soon as practicable after the close of the poll the presiding officer shall make up into separate packets sealed with his seal—

(a) each ballot box in use at his station, sealed so as to prevent the introduction of additional voting papers and unopened, but with the key attached;

(b) the unused and spoilt voting papers, placed together;

(c) the marked copies of the register of electors and the counterfoils of the voting papers;

(d) the list of blind electors assisted by companions, the list of votes marked by the presiding officer, a statement of the number of electors whose votes are so marked by the presiding officer under the heads "physical incapacity," "Jews" and "unable to read," the declarations made by the companions of blind electors, and the declarations of inability to read;

and shall deliver the packets to the returning officer to be taken charge of by him.

28. The packets shall be accompanied by a statement made by the presiding officer showing the number of voting papers entrusted to him, and accounting for them under the heads of—

(a) voting papers in the ballot box;

(b) unused and spoilt voting papers.

The count.

29. The returning officer, while counting and recording the number of voting papers and counting the votes, shall keep the voting papers with their faces upwards, and take all proper precautions for preventing any person from seeing the numbers printed on the back of the papers.

30. The returning officer shall, so far as practicable, proceed continuously with counting the votes, allowing only time for refreshment, and excluding (except so far as he may otherwise determine) the hours between eight o'clock in the evening and nine o'clock on the succeeding morning. During the excluded time the returning officer shall place the voting papers and other documents relating to the poll under his seal and shall otherwise take proper precautions for the security of the papers and documents.

Void voting papers.

31. Any voting paper—

(a) which does not bear the official mark; or

(b) on which anything is written or marked by which the elector can be identified except the printed number on the back; or

(c) which is unmarked or void for uncertainty

shall not be counted:

Provided that where more than one resolution is voted on, the voting paper shall not be deemed to be void for uncertainty as regards any vote as to which no uncertainty arises, and that vote shall be counted.

The decision of the returning officer is final on any question arising in respect of any voting paper (L. G. A., 1933, Sched. 9, paras. 14, 15, ante, pp. 1267–8, and para. 4 of these regulations, ante, p. 2400).

The proviso relates to cases within L. G. A., 1933, Sched. 9, para. 12, ante, p. 1267.

Declaration of result.

32.—(1) When the result of the poll has been ascertained the returning officer shall forthwith declare the result of the poll in the form No. 9 in the schedule to these regulations.

(2) The returning officer shall forthwith cause a copy of the declarations to be affixed to the front of the building in which the votes have been counted.

(3) The returning officer shall cause public notice to be given of the result of the poll as declared and shall announce the result to the council.

For form, see Sched. Form No. 9, post, p. 2408.

As to method of giving public notice, see para. 4, ante, p. 2400.

Equality of voting means loss of the resolution (L. G. A., 1933, Sched. 9, para. 17, ante, p. 1268).

General provisions.

33. The returning officer may, if he thinks fit, preside at a polling station, and the provisions of this part of these regulations relating to a presiding officer shall apply to a returning officer so presiding with any necessary modifications.

34. A presiding officer may do, by the officers appointed to assist him, any act which he is required or authorised to do by these regulations.

35. No misnomer or inaccurate description of any place named in any notice under these regulations shall hinder the full operation of that notice with respect to that place provided the description of that place is such as to be commonly understood.

This paragraph only applies to misnomers, etc., of places: cf. L. G. A., 1933, s. 70 (2), ante, p. 819.

BYELAWS.

PRINTING OF BYELAWS.

MEMORANDUM OF MINISTER OF HEALTH ISSUED NOVEMBER, 1938.

1. Local or central printing.

At the suggestion of several Local Authorities, inquiries were made as to putting them in touch with the contractors who print the model byelaws for His Majesty's Stationery Office. It has also been strongly pressed upon the Minister that stocks of byelaws should be set up in stereotype, so that Local Authorities could insert merely such alterations as were required and have the local byelaws printed from stereotyped plates. This second suggestion has been found to be technically impracticable, for reasons too long to be stated here. The former suggestion is also found not to be advantageous to Local Authorities.

Some London firms doing local government work specialize in printing byelaws, but most printed copies received in the Ministry have been printed locally.

2. Tenders.

Whether printing locally or not Local Authorities should (unless they have standing contracts which will have been based on competition) secure competitive tenders. Often they will be able to check these by ascertaining from other Local Authorities the prices charged for similar work.

It is not always economical to have a number of copies typewritten to be sent to different printers for tendering: it may be quicker and cheaper to make copies on the model form with manuscript alterations for this purpose.

3. Deferring printing.

Local Authorities sometimes defer the printing required by statute until they have several series ready. Although there may be some slight saving of first cost, the practice is undesirable. Section 250 (7) of the Local Government Act, 1933, gives any person a statutory right to a copy of any particular byelaws on payment of a small charge. Printing should therefore be done as soon as possible.

4. Binding.

Byelaws on different subjects should not be bound together. A person who desires to buy a series containing two or three clauses only should be able to buy it without taking also the other series bound with it, which may run to many pages. The price should be shown on the cover.

5. Size and type.

Local Authorities nearly always use an octavo page with long primer or small pica type—a preference no doubt dictated by experience. Among the octavo sizes "crown" is rather small and "royal" (which is now the standard size for Government publications and is used for the octavo model byelaws) is rather large for general use. "Demy octavo" is the most usual, but the instructions to the printer for the page and for the type should depend upon careful comparison of the cost and upon practical convenience in every day use. Practical convenience will nearly always rule out anything bigger than "royal octavo": the "foolscap folio" size is the best for drafts (it is used for printing the model series in draft) but is inconvenient to carry and handle, and so is unsuitable for final copies.

No standard size or form has been laid down for the collections of confirmed byelaws held for reference in the Ministry, but "demy octavo," being the usual size adopted by most Local Authorities, facilitates uniform binding and shelving—matters of practical importance when thousands of series of byelaws have to be stored and handled.

6. Copies for sealing.

The Minister's seal and certificate of confirmation under section 250 of the Local Government Act, 1933, may lawfully be affixed to byelaws in any form (printed or manuscript or typewritten) but as the byelaws must be printed to comply with section 250 (7) of the Act of 1933 it is obviously simplest to supply a print. Local Authorities therefore almost always send in for formal confirmation the final proof, i.e. a print of the series exactly as it will ultimately appear except that their seal appears in original, properly witnessed, and that a blank space is left where the Minister's seal and certificate of confirmation will be placed. A blank page at the end of the series, or (better) a final page on which a few lines of print appear, is a convenient place on which to impress the Council's seal, leaving space (which should be ample) for the Minister's seal and certificate. Where an appendix to the byelaws is printed, this should follow the space left for sealing. A few Local Authorities have the confirmation copy or copies printed on vellum or parchment or some superior paper. This costs more and is not necessary.

Section 252 of the Local Government Act, 1933, should render unnecessary the confirmation of byelaws in duplicate or triplicate as has occasionally been desired by Local Authorities. Confirmation in duplicate or triplicate involves an appreciable and unnecessary charge upon the taxpayer, and will not be given unless special reason is shewn.

Unless there is some special reason for asking the Minister to confirm a copy containing manuscript alterations, much the safest course is to let him have the final revised print as stated above. Apart from any other reason, he cannot confirm a series containing manuscript alterations unless these are all initialled by the person or persons who attest the Local Authority's seal—a troublesome and untidy process.

7. Number of copies printed.

Sections 250 (7) and 252 of the Act of 1933, and practical experience of local needs, supply the only safe guidance as to the number of copies to be printed. Obviously unnecessary stock is to be avoided, but the resetting of type which has been broken up is much more costly than running off extra copies at first. Section 250 (7) requires that stocks of byelaws in force MUST NEVER be allowed to be exhausted.

CANAL BOATS.

REGISTRATION, ETC., OF CANAL BOATS—GENERAL ORDER OF 20TH MARCH, 1878 (AS AMENDED BY ONE OF 9TH JUNE, 1925).

To obtain the net cubical capacity or free air space of the cabin, deduction from the gross cubical capacity should be made in accordance with the following directions:—

1. If the cabin have only the following shut-up cupboards or lockers, viz.: a table cupboard, a side bed-locker or cupboard, a cross bed-locker or lockers, and a cupboard above the cross-bed,—

CANAL BOATS ACTS.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1.

December 20th, 1920.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to draw attention to section 3 of the Canal Boats Act, 1884 (a), which provides that every Sanitary Authority within whose district any canal or part of a canal is situate, shall make an annual report to the Ministry as to the execution of the Canal Boats Acts, 1877 and 1884, and of the Regulations made thereunder, and as to the steps taken by such Authority during the year to give effect to the provisions of the said Acts and Regulations.

This section also prescribes 21 days after the 31st day of December in each year as the period within which such annual report shall be made; and the Ministry trust that they may be furnished within that period with the report of the Authority with respect to any canal within their jurisdiction.

It appears to the Ministry to be desirable that the report should include information, inter alia, as to

(1) The arrangements made for the inspection of boats and the name, address, and remuneration of the inspector:

(2) The number of inspections of canal boats made in 1920, and the condition of the boats and their occupants as regards the matters dealt with in the Acts and Regulations:

CANCER.

CIRCULAR 1813.

County Councils.
County Borough Councils.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
31*st May*, 1939.

SIR,

CANCER ACT, 1939.

1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to draw the attention of the Council to the provisions of the Cancer Act, 1939 (a), which received the Royal Assent and came into operation on the 29th March last.

(a) See Vol. V, post.

GENERAL.

2. The primary object of the Act is the establishment of a service under which facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of cancer will be available to all who are, or are suspected to be, suffering from the disease. The Minister is advised that the term "cancer" should be interpreted as including all forms of malignant new growth irrespective of the site of origin, e.g., carcinoma, sarcoma, and rodent ulcer, as in the classification adopted by the Registrar-General which is based upon the International List of Causes of Death.

3. Duty of Local Authorities.—Section 1 of the Act places on County and County Borough Councils the duty of making arrangements to secure that the facilities are adequate. These arrangements are subject to approval by the Minister, and before making them the Council must consult with such committees or other bodies as they consider representative of the voluntary hospitals providing services in or for their area, and with representative local organisations of medical practitioners. The Minister will be pleased to arrange for officers of the Department to confer with representatives of the Council on any points of difficulty which may arise.

4. The arrangements must be finally submitted for approval within a year from the commencement of the Act, i.e., not later than the 29th March, 1940, or within such longer period as the Minister may allow in individual cases (a).

(a) Postponed by reason of the outbreak of war to 31st March, 1941, by circular 1884, dated 16th October, 1939 (not reproduced).

5. Treatment.—Adequate facilities for the treatment of cancer must be provided, both by surgery and by radiotherapy, including treatment by radium and by deep X-rays. Facilities for radiotherapy are already provided at some of the large voluntary and municipal hospitals, and in the Minister's view this treatment must necessarily be concentrated in those comparatively few hospitals which have on their staffs skilled radiotherapists and physicists as well as surgeons, which possess all the requisite specialised departments and which contain enough beds to keep the radiotherapeutic department, with its expensive equipment of radium and apparatus, fully employed.

6. The Minister hopes that there will be full co-operation between the Authorities and the voluntary hospitals, in order both that the existing beds may be used to the best advantage and also that any additional beds which may be needed may be provided in, or in association with, those hospitals which are so staffed and organised as to give the best prospect of cure or alleviation to the sufferers for whom provision is desired.

7. The hospitals which already hold supplies of radium and otherwise possess adequate facilities should be utilised to the greatest possible extent, and the Minister contemplates that the normal procedure will be for a number of Local Authorities in a region comprising several administrative counties and the associated county boroughs to base their arrangements on one of these hospitals. On the other hand there may be areas in which it will be found best to make arrangements with two or more large hospitals each of which also serves a number of other areas.

8. Surgical operation still remains the only practicable, or the most suitable, form of treatment for a large proportion of cases, and for this purpose it may be found necessary to make use of some hospitals in which radiation treatment is not available. Where use is made of such a hospital, a patient should be treated there only when it has been decided, after consultation between the appropriate specialists, that surgery without radiation is the proper form of treatment for the case.

9. Where a voluntary hospital needs to be extended in order to provide the additional accommodation required, a Local Authority may, in suitable cases, make a contribution under section 181 (3) of the Public Health Act, 1936 (a), or section 226 (3) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1936 (b), towards the capital cost of the extension and the provision of the necessary additional equipment, in addition to any periodical payments in respect of the maintenance and treatment of patients. The loan charges on any such capital contributions, as well as the periodical payments, will, if approved by the Minister, rank for the Exchequer grant to which reference is made in paragraphs 18 to 25 below.

(b) 30 Halsbury's Statutes 568.

10. Diagnosis.—In order to facilitate the diagnosis of cancer in its early stages, a sufficient number of suitable places for consultation will be needed, where persons suffering or suspected to be suffering from the disease can receive expert examination and advice. These places should, wherever possible, be in existing hospitals and they should be so situated as to serve those areas which are inconveniently distant from the treatment hospital, since the necessity to travel a long distance may contribute to a patient's reluctance to attend. In general the consultations should be arranged in conjunction with the treatment hospital, and the consultants (all of whom could visit several consultation clinics as required) should be the appropriate members of the staff of that hospital.

11. Observation after Treatment.—It is important that patients, after treatment, should be kept under observation by means of periodical examinations, to provide opportunity for detecting and treating any recurrence of the disease, as well as for ascertaining and recording the results of treatment. To minimise the inconvenience to patients, these examinations should, where practicable, be held in the consultation clinics referred to in the previous paragraph. It is generally desirable that they should be carried out by or under the direction of the practitioner who had treated the patient.

12. Where, as will usually be the case, more than one Authority proposes to make use of a voluntary hospital, agreements with that hospital may be concluded by each Authority individually, or by all the Authorities acting in combination.

13. Record-keeping.—Clinical records relating to each patient should be kept so as to show clearly and accurately the history of the case, and they should be in a form readily susceptible of statistical analysis. It is to be expected that collation and examination of the records of the patients who seek advice and treatment, in conjunction with other information which is at the disposal of, or can be acquired by, Local Authorities, will furnish valuable information for improving the quality and facilitating the administration of the service. The Minister is considering the form of records in consultation with the Cancer Sub-Committee of his Medical Advisory Committee, and he will, in due course, address a further Circular to Local Authorities on this subject.

14. Publicity.—In order that the facilities for diagnosis and treatment may be sufficiently known, it will be necessary to give publicity to the arrangements by such means as appear desirable. There are two aspects of this matter to which attention must be given. On the one hand it will be necessary to keep medical practitioners informed of the arrangements which are made, and in particular of the hospitals, clinics, etc., to which their patients may be sent for diagnosis. On the other hand, it will be necessary to reassure the general public and encourage them to utilise the available facilities, whether or not they have previously consulted their own practitioners. It should, therefore, be possible for any person readily to ascertain where application should be made for advice or treatment. It is probable that some persons will show a certain hesitation in availing themselves of the facilities provided, but judging from the experience of the early days of the tuberculosis service the Minister hopes that this may to a large extent be overcome by suitable and persuasive propaganda.

15. The carrying out of the arrangements will be under the general direction of the Medical Officer of Health, who will need to co-operate closely with the medical practitioners and hospitals of the area.

16. A technical memorandum, designed to be of assistance and guidance to Medical Officers of Health, is in course of preparation, and it is hoped to issue this memorandum at an early date.

17. In the Appendix to this Circular will be found a number of model clauses on which the arrangements of Local Authorities might conveniently be based.

Exchequer Grants.

18. The provisions with regard to Exchequer grants are contained in section 2 of the Act. As from the beginning of the fifth fixed grant period, i.e., from the 1st April, 1947, Exchequer assistance will be given by way of an addition to the General Exchequer Contribution from which are derived the General Exchequer grants payable to Local Authorities under the Local Government Acts, 1929 and 1937 (a).

(a) See Vol. V, post.

19. Amount of Grant.—For each of the eight years which make up the period from the 1st April, 1939, to the 31st March, 1947, an ad hoc Exchequer grant will be payable to the Councils of Counties and County Boroughs towards the estimated additional cost of the new service as compared with the year 1937–8. This grant will be based on one-half of the net amount of the Authority's estimated additional expenditure on the new service, scaled up or down in proportion to the extent to which the relative needs of the area, as measured by the grant formula for weighted population used for the calculation of grants under the Local Government Acts, 1929 and 1937, are respectively greater or less than the average needs of all Counties and County Boroughs in England and Wales as determined by that formula. The Act provides that the grant shall not exceed 85 per cent. of the estimated additional expenditure of an Authority for the year.

20. Method of Calculation.—The method of calculation of grant can conveniently be illustrated by the following specimen cases:—

The "average weighting factor" of all Counties and County Boroughs in England and Wales as provisionally calculated for the third fixed grant period under the Local Government Acts, 1929 and 1937, is approximately 2·5. If it is assumed that the additional expenditure imposed by the Cancer Act is £1,000 per annum for each of six Authorities, A, B, C, D, E and F, and that for those Authorities the "weighting factor" is respectively 5, 4, 3, 2·5, 2 and 1·5, the grants payable in each case (which are to be calculated to the nearest pound), will be as follows:—

A, $\frac{1,000}{2} \times \frac{5}{2·5} = £1,000$ but grant is to be limited to 85% of the additional expenditure, so that the grant payable in this case will be £850.

B, $\frac{1,000}{2} \times \frac{4}{2·5} = £800$

C, $\frac{1,000}{2} \times \frac{3}{2·5} = £600$

D, $\frac{1,000}{2} \times \frac{2·5}{2·5} = £500$

E, $\frac{1,000}{2} \times \frac{2}{2·5} = £400$

F, $\frac{1,000}{2} \times \frac{1·5}{2·5} = £300$

21. Subsection (8) of section 2 provides that the estimate of the additional expenditure imposed by the Act on an Authority shall be made to the satisfaction of the Minister in accordance with directions given by him after consultation with Associations of Local Authorities and any individual Council. These directions may require that expenditure incurred by any Council for the purpose of the Act shall be subject to the Minister's approval, and that for the purpose of calculation of Exchequer grant the amount of the expenditure of a Council in respect of any part of the service may if the Minister so directs be determined on a "unit" basis, i.e., by reference to the estimated average net annual expenditure of all Councils or of Councils of the same class on that part of the service.

22. Pending the submission of arrangements by Local Authorities, it is not possible to say whether, and, if so, to what extent, it will be practicable to adopt units of expenditure for the calculation of Exchequer grants. In so far as the "unit" basis of calculating expenditure is not adopted, the Exchequer grant will be calculated by reference to the expenditure of each Council approved by the Minister.

23. Conditions of grant approved by the Treasury.—The Act provides that the Exchequer grants towards the expenses incurred by Local Authorities under the Act shall be subject to such conditions as to records, certificates, audit or otherwise as the Minister, with the approval of the Treasury, may determine. The formal conditions as approved by the Treasury will be communicated to Local Authorities at a later date. Pending the issue of such conditions, Local Authorities should take steps to keep such records as will enable estimates to be made of the income received in respect of the treatment of cancer patients and the cost of out-patient treatment in the hospitals of Local Authorities. The average cost of maintenance of an in-patient per week in each hospital will be available from the Costing Returns Forms H2(G) and H.2(P), and provided that Local Authorities keep records of the number of in-patients treated for cancer in each of their own hospitals and of the duration of treatment, it will be possible to estimate the total cost of in-patient treatment of cancer in those hospitals. It is assumed that particulars of the expenditure of Local Authorities in respect of the treatment of cancer patients in voluntary hospitals will be readily available.

24. Payments on account of Exchequer Grants.—With the approval of the Treasury, payments on account of Exchequer grants due may be made to Local Authorities on application each half-year. Ordinarily, these advances will be approximately 90 per cent. of the amount estimated to be due and the balance will be paid after audit. Forms will be supplied to Local Authorities for the purpose of claiming grants.

25. Default of Local Authority.—By subsection (5) of section 2 of the Act the grants payable under the section are, for the purposes of section 104 of the Local Government Act, 1929, to be deemed to be made under Part VI of that Act. Section 104 of the Local Government Act, 1929, will therefore empower the Minister to reduce the grant payable to an Authority under Part VI of the Act of 1929 or under the new Act, if the Authority fail to show reasonable efficiency and progress in the establishment and maintenance of a cancer service adequate for the needs of their area.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

26. Prohibition of advertisements relating to cancer.—The attention of the Council is drawn to section 4 of the Act, which prohibits advertisements containing an offer to treat cancer, or to prescribe any remedy for it, or to give advice in connection with its treatment, or referring to any article in terms calculated to lead to its use in the treatment of cancer.

27. Savings.—Subsections (4) and (5) of the section exclude from the prohibition certain advertisements, among them advertisements published only to members of a Local Authority or of the governing body of a voluntary hospital, and advertisements published by a Local Authority or by the governing body of a voluntary hospital or by any person acting with the Minister's sanction.

28. Prosecutions.—Under subsection (7) the duty is imposed on County and County Borough Councils to institute proceedings for offences but under subsection (6) proceedings may not be instituted without the consent of the Attorney-General or the Solicitor-General.

29. A copy of this Circular is being sent to the Medical Officer of Health, and an additional copy is enclosed for the use of the Financial Officer of the Authority. Further copies may be purchased through any bookseller or directly from His Majesty's Stationery Office at any of the addresses given on the next page.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

J. N. BECKETT.
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk of the Council, or
The Town Clerk.

1. The Council will provide all necessary facilities so that every person in the [county] [borough] who is or is suspected to be suffering from cancer may obtain advice and that every such person who is found to be so suffering may obtain adequate treatment. In particular the Council will provide the facilities set out in the following paragraphs.

2. They will arrange for the attendance of consultants at these places at such times as may be necessary. These facilities will be available for persons who are suffering or suspected to be suffering from cancer.

4. The Council will by agreement with [hospital] [laboratory] arrange for the examination of pathological specimens in all cases where such examination is considered necessary for purposes of diagnosis or treatment.

CANCER

5. In addition to the general arrangements set out above the Council may provide for the diagnosis and treatment of any individual case at such hospital or other institution and in such manner as seems desirable.

6. The Council will in such cases as they consider necessary pay all or any of the travelling expenses (including the travelling expenses of a companion) reasonably incurred by persons for the purpose of availing themselves of the services provided under these arrangements.

7. The Council will arrange for records to be kept, in such form as the Minister of Health may from time to time approve, of treatment provided under these arrangements and its results, and will send such records or copies thereof to any person for the time being designated by the Minister.

NOTICE.—[As in Order of September 9th, 1907.]

RATS.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1.

January 30th, 1923.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to the Ministry of Health (Rats and Mice Destruction, Transfer of Powers) Order, 1922, and to state that a general survey of the sanitary administration of Port and Riparian Sanitary Districts in England and Wales has recently been carried out by Medical Officers of this Department, who have reported that the authorities of many of these districts are experiencing difficulty in dealing with the question of rat destruction.

Among the more important functions of Port and Riparian Sanitary Authorities under the Public Health Acts is the prevention of the introduction and spread in this country of ship-borne plague. For this purpose it is desirable that, in addition to their powers under the Public Health Acts, they should be able to take measures under the Rats and Mice (Destruction) Act, 1919, for the destruction of rats both on board ship and also on the quays, wharves and warehouses abutting upon the port.

I am to point out, however, that a Riparian Authority which is not a county borough council is unable to take any measures under the Act of 1919 unless the powers of the county council under that Act have been delegated to them by the county council. Moreover the jurisdiction of port sanitary authorities is, as a rule, confined to the shipping and the waters of the ports, and unless a port sanitary authority is also a county borough council, or a sanitary authority to whom powers under the Act of 1919 have been delegated, they are unable to deal effectively with rats in the wharves and warehouses.

In this connection I am to draw attention to the circular letter issued by the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries on the 5th May, 1921, with reference to the delegation of powers under the Rats and Mice (Destruction) Act, 1919, and to state that the Minister would be glad if the county council will take into consideration the question of delegating their jurisdiction under that Act to each of the sanitary authorities within the administrative county which are named in the list enclosed herewith, and inform him of the result.

I am to add that the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries concurs in the terms of this circular letter.

I am, etc.

The Clerk of the County Council.

Circular 1296.

PORT SANITARY REGULATIONS, 1933.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1.

February 13th, 1933.

SIR,—

1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose for the information of the Sanitary Authority a copy of the Port Sanitary Regulations, 1933, which will come into operation on May 1st, 1933.

General Observations.

2. These Regulations will replace the several general and special Cholera, Yellow Fever, and Plague Regulations of 1907, the Port Sanitary Authorities (Infectious Diseases) Regulations, 1920, and the Public Health (Deratisation of Ships) Regulations, 1929, and they also include provisions for carrying out obligations assumed by His Majesty's Government under the International Sanitary Convention of Paris, 1926, for preventing the access of rats to ships, and for the control of persons embarking in outward bound ships who are suffering from infectious disease or who have been in such relations with persons so suffering as to render them liable to transmit the disease. The aim has been to consolidate in one code the whole of the Regulations relating to the sanitary control of shipping in ports, with the exception of the Order of 1912 which (as extended by the present Regulations) relates to the cleansing and disinfection of ships.

3. The general quarantine procedure prescribed in the Regulations of 1907 has been modified to take account of the modern methods of international interchange of information relating to epidemic diseases and of the fact that in most ports incoming vessels are not now boarded afloat by Officers of the Customs.

4. It will also be observed that, in accordance with the provisions of the International Sanitary Convention, special measures are prescribed for dealing with ships infected with typhus fever or smallpox, in addition to those infected with plague, cholera or yellow fever.

5. The new Regulations require the Sanitary Authority to establish, with the consent of the Customs Officer and the harbour master, at least one mooring station within the docks for ships which are "infected" or "suspected" or which may otherwise require to be specially dealt with to prevent the risk of the spread of disease. An additional mooring station outside the docks is also to be established where this can be done satisfactorily. Every mooring station must be in such a situation as to enable a ship to be moored without coming into contact with other ships or with the shore.

6. Under the new Regulations the master of a "foreign-going ship" (as defined in the Regulations) arriving from foreign is required to ascertain the state of health of all persons on board and to complete a "declaration of health" in the prescribed form. The declaration must be handed to the Customs Officer or the Officer of the Sanitary Authority, whichever first boards the ship, and in the former case it is to be forwarded to the Sanitary Authority.

7. If the Customs Officer, on receiving the declaration of health, finds evidence of infection he will detain the ship and have it sent to a mooring station unless the Medical Officer otherwise allows. Provision is made, however, in Articles 12 and 14 for the ship to be dealt with at her ordinary berth if the Medical Officer allows, and it is contemplated that with the co-operation of the dock authorities and the masters of vessels in securing the observance of the Regulations, and especially in preventing unauthorised persons from boarding or leaving the ship, it will be possible for the great majority of unhealthy ships to be dealt with by isolation at their ordinary berths. For the purpose of Article 14 (1) it is suggested that the Medical Officer should grant a standing exemption (subject to such conditions as may be desirable in local circumstances) for cases likely to be of frequent occurrence, such as the arrival of a ship having on board a case of tuberculosis or of one of the commoner infectious diseases such as scarlet fever or measles, which would call for the isolation of the ship in exceptional circumstances only. The Minister would be glad to receive particulars of any such exemption for transmission to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise, in order that they may give the necessary instructions to their officers.

8. In some ports the procedure of dealing with ships having infection on board would be much facilitated by the use of wireless messages, and Article 6 of the Regulations requires that where a port has been specially designated by the Minister by means of a notice published in "The London Gazette," a ship fitted with transmitting apparatus and approaching that port must send a wireless message if there are any circumstances requiring the attention of the Medical Officer. In other cases in which such circumstances exist this information must be sent to the Sanitary Authority by such means as are available either before, or forthwith on, the arrival of the vessel.

9. The Minister understands that in a few ports the use of wireless messages has already been tried with a view to ascertaining the best means of securing and using the requisite information, and he will be prepared to entertain applications for a declaration putting Article 6 into operation in ports in which the Sanitary Authority are able to show that the administration of the Regulations is likely to be facilitated thereby.

10. The Minister understands that the Association of Port Sanitary Authorities has recommended that the uniform telegraphic address "Porthealth" followed by the name of the authority should be generally adopted by Port Sanitary Authorities.

Observations on particular provisions.

11. Article 2 (definition of "valid" and interpretation of "home port"). The provision (which follows that of the existing Regulations) that the period of validity of a deratisation certificate or deratisation exemption certificate is extended from six to seven months where the ship is proceeding to her home port, is based on Article 28 of the International Sanitary Convention of 1926.

12. The Quarantine Commission of the Office International recently considered the interpretation of the expression "home port" in that Article and reported as follows:—

> The Commission finds that it is generally agreed that this term should not be limited to the "port of registration" of the ship, but that it may also be applied to the port where in fact it is "at home" ("port d'attache," "Heimatshafen"), in which it lays up at the expiration of its voyage ("terminal port"), or makes the necessary repairs, or usually enrols its crew before leaving, an idea which corresponds in French to that of the "port d'armement."
> A ship therefore may not continue indefinitely to have the same "home port"; in particular, if it is chartered on routes other than its ordinary routes, it may claim the benefit of the extension referred to in Article 28 of the Convention for the purpose of visiting a port which for the time being fulfils for it the conditions above indicated.
> It would, however, be well for the master of any ship claiming this benefit to sign and deliver to the authority of the port in which the extension is granted a declaration specifying which is its "home port" and stating his intention to to go there within a month in order to have the necessary deratisation carried out.

In the circumstances the Minister has not thought it practicable to insert a definition of the expression "home port" in the Regulations, but he considers that Sanitary Authorities may properly act on the report quoted above.

13. Articles 4 (1), 28 (b), etc. It will be seen that the Regulations confer and impose certain specific powers and duties on the "Medical Officer," who is defined as "the Medical Officer of Health of a Sanitary Authority or a registered medical practitioner acting under the direction of a Sanitary Authority whether in place of or as an assistant to the Medical Officer of Health for the purpose of executing these Regulations or any of them," and that under Article 4 (1) the duty of enforcing and executing the Regulations and of making enquiries, etc., is placed on every officer of a Sanitary Authority in so far as he is directed to do so by the Authority.

14. Under Article 28 (b) the Sanitary Authority are empowered to give directions as to which of the duties assigned to the Medical Officer by the Regulations are to be performed by any medical practitioner appointed by them (including the Medical Officer of Health), but they may direct only the Medical Officer of Health himself, or in his absence the medical officer acting for him, to sign and issue certificates and statements. The Regulations also contain references to "other authorised officers" of the Authority in places where the duties in question would not necessarily be carried out by the Medical Officer of Health or other registered medical practitioner.

15. It is desirable that the Sanitary Authority should at an early date direct the Medical Officer of Health and such assistants as they think fit to act in execution of the Regulations, and also declare all (or such as they think fit) of their sanitary officers to be authorised officers for the purpose of the Regulations. In any allocation of the duties assigned to the "Medical Officer" by the Regulations to officers other than the Medical Officer of Health regard should be had to the limitations imposed by Article 28 (b).

CHOLERA, YELLOW FEVER, AND PLAGUE

16. Article 11. The issue of the "Weekly Record of Infectious Diseases at Ports at Home and Abroad" will be continued, in order to assist Medical Officers in preparing the lists referred to in this Article.

17. Article 13. Steps should be taken to secure that so far as possible the Master of every foreign-going vessel approaching a port is supplied with copies of the form of declaration of health. For British ships and other ships regularly visiting the port arrangements should be made with the shipping agents to secure that supplies of the form are carried. The Minister understands that, in ports where it is customary for ships to be boarded by pilots, the pilots will generally be willing to assist the Sanitary Authority by handing to the Master of any foreign-going ship which they board a copy of the form and explaining shortly the master's duty to ascertain the health of all persons on board, to complete the form of declaration and, where the conditions on board require the attention of the Medical Officer, to give the required information by wireless message or otherwise. In some ports it may be found useful to prepare a small leaflet which the pilot can hand to the master along with the form of declaration to avoid the necessity for oral explanation.

18. Article 13 (2). The Minister is informed that it would be of assistance to the Officers of Customs in carrying out their duties under the regulations if, when the Medical Officer (or other officer of the Sanitary Authority) boards the ship before the Customs Officer and receives a satisfactory declaration of health, he would leave on board a written notice in the following or similar terms:—

"To the Preventive Officer,
H.M. Customs and Excise.

This is to certify that I have examined the.....
and that I find no medical reason for withholding pratique.

Signed....."

19. Articles 14 and 15. Attention is called to what is said in paragraph 7 above as to the action to be taken in cases likely to be of frequent occurrence. The Sanitary Authority should note that the responsibility for the detention of a ship by a Customs Officer is strictly limited to a period of twelve hours. It is, therefore, essential that every ship whose detention is necessary should be visited by the Medical Officer within twelve hours of its arrival.

20. When a ship arrives which has on board the body of a person who has died during the voyage, the master should furnish the Medical Officer with a certificate signed by the ship's surgeon specifying the cause of death. If the ship does not carry a surgeon, the Medical Officer should examine the body, with a view to satisfying himself that the cause of death was not associated with any infectious disease. In either case, the Medical Officer, after satisfying himself as to the cause of death, should give such directions to the master of the ship as he may think necessary.

21. Article 16 (1). This paragraph contains the important new provision that where a ship (whether "foreign-going" or not) arrives from a foreign port no unauthorised person may board or leave the ship until it is free from control. To meet the case of the daily packet boats, it is suggested that standing permission might be given to the master for the disembarkation of passengers, subject to his undertaking, if he suspects the presence of infectious disease, either to delay disembarkation until the Medical Officer permits or to consult the Medical Officer by wireless, as may be most suitable to the circumstances of the service or of the individual ship.

22. Article 16 (2) and (3). It is the practice on many passenger lines to ask passengers to complete cards giving (inter alia) the information required in Article 16 (2), and where this is done the work of dealing with passengers in an infected or suspected ship will be expedited. In such cases, however, it will still be necessary either by the issue of printed postcards or otherwise to inform passengers of their obligation under Article 16 (3) to report if they go to any address other than that stated on disembarkation.

23. Article 21. The Minister directs that deratisation and deratisation exemption certificates shall be in the same form as at present (Form Port 11) and he determines that the fee payable to the Sanitary Authority for every such certificate shall as at present be the sum of £2 2*s*. 0*d*.

24. Article 22 (2). The information necessary to enable the Medical Officer to take action under this Article will be communicated to the Authority by the procedure set out in Circular 1021 of the 8th July, 1929.

25. Article 29. This Article, which is similar to Article 3 of the Regulations of 1920, empowers the Medical Officer to board any ship for the purposes of the Regulations, and to cause the ship to be brought to, and, if necessary, moored or anchored in some safe and convenient place while it is visited and examined. It will not as a rule be necessary to exercise this latter power except in those Ports in which it is customary for the Medical Officer to board the ship before it is brought into dock, and even there only in exceptional circumstances; and the Minister, as stated in Circular 107 of July 20th, 1920, is anxious that all practicable steps should be taken by the Sanitary Authority and their Medical Officer to obviate any undue delay to shipping.

26. Article 30. This Article, which also follows the Regulations of 1920, authorises the Medical Officer to examine any person on board a ship (1) who is suffering from infectious disease, or (2) who is reasonably believed to be verminous, or (3) where the Medical Officer has reason to suspect that infection exists on the ship. For the purpose of the examination, the Medical Officer may detain any such person, either upon the ship or at some appointed place on shore. In deciding whether the examination should be carried out on board ship or on shore, the Medical Officer must have regard to the circumstances of the case, and the action necessary to prevent the introduction of infectious disease into this country, but he should bear in mind what is said above as to the importance of avoiding all undue delay to shipping.

27. In deciding whether he shall use his powers to board a particular ship and examine persons on board, the Medical Officer must to a large extent exercise his discretion; but the Minister considers that the fact that a vessel, during the period of three weeks before its arrival in port, has sailed from, or called during the voyage at, a port or country in which dangerous infectious disease is known to be prevalent, will constitute reasonable ground for action being taken by the Medical Officer under Articles 29 and 30 of the Regulations. In such cases verminous conditions, by reason of their close connection with typhus fever and other infectious diseases, require to be carefully looked for. The more common infectious diseases such as scarlet fever and measles do not, in the Minister's opinion, save in exceptional instances, call for special action.

28. The Medical Officer is empowered to cause any person who has been in contact with infectious disease on the ship, or who is discovered to be verminous, and the clothing and other articles belonging to any such person, to be cleansed or disinfected; and to prohibit any such person from leaving the ship, or from leaving the ship except upon specified conditions. These conditions must be such as appear to the Medical Officer to be reasonably necessary to prevent the spread of infection either in the district of the Sanitary Authority or elsewhere. It will usually only be necessary to prohibit such persons from leaving the ship until the requisite arrangements have been made for their cleansing or disinfection as soon as they land. The conditions specified in giving permission to leave the ship will, in the case of persons who need cleansing or disinfection, include the condition that they shall proceed to the place appointed for that purpose. Provision is made in Article 16 (referred to in paragraphs 21 and 22 above) for the action to be taken on the disembarkation of persons who have been in contact with infectious disease.

29. It will, of course, be desirable to enlist the co-operation of the master in order to secure the carrying out of the measures described above, and Article 30 (1) (g) authorises the Medical Officer to require the master of a ship to take, or assist in taking, such steps as in the opinion of the Medical Officer are reasonably necessary to prevent the spread of infection by any person on board; and also such steps as are necessary for the removal of conditions on the ship which are likely to convey infection, including the destruction of vermin and the removal of conditions which harbour vermin. Article 32 requires the master to comply with instructions so given.

CHOLERA, YELLOW FEVER, AND PLAGUE

30. Article 31 empowers the Medical Officer to cause any person on a ship who is suffering from any epidemic or acute infectious disease to be removed, if his condition so permits, to some hospital or other suitable place appointed for that purpose by the Sanitary Authority. If the condition of the person does not permit of his immediate removal from the ship, the Medical Officer is empowered to serve on the master a notice in writing prohibiting the removal or departure of the patient from the ship except with the consent in writing of the Medical Officer. This provision is, of course, necessary primarily in order to prevent the spread of infection, but the Medical Officer will naturally be anxious to secure the removal of the patient to hospital or some other suitable place as soon as his condition permits.

31. Article 34 provides that Article 3 of the Port Sanitary Authorities (Assignment of Powers) Order, 1912, which relates to the cleansing of berths and cabins, shall be extended so as to apply to the whole or any part of a ship. It will therefore be competent for the Clerk to the Port Sanitary Authority, where the Medical Officer certifies that the cleansing and disinfecting of a ship, or any part of a ship, would tend to prevent or check infectious disease, to give notice to the master that such cleansing and disinfecting will be carried out by the Port Sanitary Authority at the cost of the master, unless the master informs the Port Sanitary Authority within six hours of the receipt of the notice that he will forthwith cleanse and disinfect the ship, or the part thereof, to the satisfaction of the Medical Officer. The Order of 1912 does not apply to the Port Sanitary Authority of the Port of London, but similar powers were conferred upon that Authority by an Order made by the Local Government Board on March 25th, 1892. These powers for securing the cleansing or disinfection of a ship, which were included in the Regulations of 1920, are now supplemented by the provisions of Article 12 of, and the Fourth Schedule to, the new Regulations, and Article 35 (1) empowers Port Sanitary Authorities to undertake this or similar work on behalf of, and, if they think fit, at the cost of, the master.

32. Third Schedule. It will be seen that the prescribed signals are required to be shown until the ship is free from control under the Regulations, e.g., from January 1st, 1934, a healthy ship coming into dock will fly the flag Q until pratique is granted by the Customs Officer.

33. A copy of this Circular and a copy of the Regulations are being sent to the Medical Officer of Health.

provisions of the regulations relating to deratisation and deratisation exemption certificates, their medical officer shall have authority to grant such certificates in that district.

PART II.—SHIPS ARRIVING.

Health Conditions on Board.

5. The master of a foreign-going ship approaching a district from a foreign port shall ascertain the state of health of all persons on board.

6.—(1) Where the Minister has by a notice published in the London Gazette declared that the provisions of this Article shall apply to any district specified in the notice, the master of any foreign-going ship fitted with a suitable wireless transmitting apparatus, on approaching such a district from a foreign port, shall, if any person on board has symptoms which may be indicative of infectious disease other than tuberculosis or if there are any circumstances requiring the attention of the medical officer, send to the sanitary authority, either directly or through an agent approved by the sanitary authority, a wireless message embodying such of the items of information set out in the Second Schedule to these regulations as are applicable.

(2) Any wireless message so required to be sent shall be sent so as to reach the sanitary authority not more than twelve and not less than four hours before the time at which the ship is expected to arrive in the district.

(3) Any message in wireless code delivered to the sanitary authority shall unless otherwise provided in the notice published pursuant to paragraph (1) of this Article, conform with the section relating to routine quarantine messages of the 1931 International Code of Signals.

7. If, when a foreign-going ship which is fitted with a suitable wireless transmitting apparatus is approaching from a foreign port a district to which the last preceding Article does not apply or when a foreign-going ship not so fitted is approaching any district from a foreign port, any person on board has any symptoms which may be indicative of infectious disease other than tuberculosis or there are any circumstances requiring the attention of the medical officer, the master shall, whenever practicable before the arrival of the ship and otherwise forthwith on arrival, notify the sanitary authority in regard to the health conditions on board:

Provided that if a wireless message is sent, it shall contain such of the items of information set out in the Second Schedule to these regulations as are applicable, it shall be sent in accordance with the provisions contained in paragraph (2) of the last preceding Article and, if in code, it shall conform with the section of the International Code of Signals aforesaid.

8. The sanitary authority, upon receipt of information that a person on board a ship approaching their district has symptoms which may be indicative of infectious disease other than tuberculosis or that there are circumstances in relation to any such ship requiring the attention of the medical officer, shall forthwith notify the customs officer to that effect.

Use of Flags and Signals.

9. The master of a ship coming from a foreign port shall comply with the provisions as to flags and signal lights contained in the Third Schedule to these regulations: Provided that this provision shall not extend to a ship engaged in the regular daily packet boat traffic between Great Britain and ports or places in the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, Ireland, Belgium, France or the Netherlands.

Mooring Stations.

10.—(1) In every district one or more mooring stations within the docks shall be established by the sanitary authority with the concurrence of the customs officer and the harbour master in such a situation as to enable a ship to be moored without coming into contact with other ships or with the shore:

Provided that the medical officer with such concurrence as aforesaid may designate as a special mooring station for any particular ship some place so situate as aforesaid other than an established mooring station, and any special station so designated shall in relation to that ship be deemed to be a mooring station.

CHOLERA, YELLOW FEVER, AND PLAGUE

(2) An additional mooring station outside the docks shall be established by the sanitary authority with the concurrence of the customs officer in every district in which a satisfactory mooring station can be so established.

(3) Such additional mooring station shall be established within the district of the sanitary authority unless the Minister otherwise consents, in which case the place so established shall for the purposes of these regulations be deemed to be within that district.

List of infected ports and seaboards.

11. The medical officer shall from time to time prepare and keep up to date a list of foreign ports and seaboards which are infected or believed to be infected or which serve an area infected or believed to be infected with plague (human or rodent), cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever or smallpox, and shall supply copies of every such list and any amendment thereof to the pilots and customs officers employed in the district. In the preparation and amendment of such lists, the medical officer shall take into account all information sent to him from time to time by the Minister.

Infected or suspected Ships and other Ships which may be unhealthy.

12.—(1) In any of the cases hereinafter specified the master of a ship arriving in a district shall cause the ship to be taken to a mooring station unless the medical officer or other authorised officer of the sanitary authority allows the ship to be isolated at its place of mooring, discharge or loading, or otherwise directs, that is to say where—

(a) the ship is an infected or suspected ship or has a case of typhus fever or smallpox on board; or

(b) during the voyage (or where the voyage has lasted more than six weeks during the last six weeks)—

(i) there has been on the ship a case or suspected case of plague, cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever or smallpox; or

(ii) plague has occurred or been suspected amongst rats or mice on the ship; or

(iii) sickness or death not attributable to poison or the employment of other measures for destruction has occurred amongst the rats or mice on the ship; and the ship has not since any such condition supervened been subjected to the prescribed measures.

(2) The master shall also cause the ship to be taken to a mooring station if the medical officer, having reason to believe that the ship falls within any of the categories specified in the preceding paragraph, so directs.

(3) If it is yellow fever which causes the ship to be an infected or suspected ship or which brings it within sub-paragraph (b) (i) of paragraph (1) of this Article such of the measures prescribed in relation to that disease by the International Sanitary Convention of Paris, 1926 as the medical officer considers necessary shall be carried out; in any other of the cases there specified such of the measures set out in the Fourth Schedule to these regulations as are appropriate shall be carried out.

(4) Any ship which has become subject to the provisions of paragraph (1) or (2) of this Article shall remain subject to control under these regulations until it has been examined by the medical officer and until any measures which may be required to be carried out in pursuance of paragraph (3) (other than measures in relation to any person who has disembarked from the ship) have been completed.

Declarations of Health.

13.—(1) The master of a foreign-going ship arriving in a district from a foreign port shall fill in and sign a declaration of health in the form set out in the Fifth Schedule to these regulations. If the ship carries a ship's surgeon he shall countersign the declaration.

(2) The master shall deliver the declaration of health to the customs officer or the officer of the sanitary authority, whichever shall first board the ship, and that officer shall peruse the answers to the questions in the declaration and make such further enquiries of the master as appear to him to be necessary.

(3) The officer receiving the declaration of health shall forward it to the sanitary authority, and in any case in which the customs officer has detained the ship pursuant to these regulations the sanitary authority shall furnish him with a copy of the declaration, if he so requires.

Detention of Ships.

14.—(1) Where a ship (whether a foreign-going ship or not) arrives in a district from a foreign port and it appears to the customs officer from answers to questions in a declaration of health or from answers to enquiries made by him or otherwise—

(a) that during the voyage (or, where the voyage has lasted more than six weeks, during the last six weeks) there has been on the ship a death from illness suspected to be of an infectious nature or a case of such illness; or

(b) that the ship has called at a port or seaboard included in the list referred to in Article 11; or

(c) that during the voyage (or, where the voyage has lasted more than six weeks, during the last six weeks) plague has occurred or been suspected amongst rats or mice on the ship or sickness or death not attributable to poison or other measures for destruction has occurred amongst the rats or mice on the ship;

he shall direct that the ship shall be taken to and detained at a mooring station unless the medical officer or other authorised officer of the sanitary authority otherwise allows.

(2) The medical officer may also direct that a ship arriving from a foreign port shall be detained for medical examination, and may hand a notice in writing to that effect to the customs officer who, if he is the first officer to visit the ship, shall deliver the notice to the master.

15.—(1) If the ship is detained under paragraph (2) of Article 14 it shall be allowed to proceed to or remain at its place of mooring, discharge or loading unless the medical officer otherwise directs, but the medical officer shall visit the ship as soon as possible.

(2) The detention of any ship by a customs officer under these regulations shall cease as soon as the ship has been duly visited and examined by the medical officer or, if the examination has not commenced within twelve hours after the ship has been moored, on the expiration of that period:

Provided that nothing in this paragraph contained shall affect the exercise of any powers of the medical officer in regard to the detention of ships.

Restriction on boarding or leaving Ship.

16.—(1) Where a ship arrives in a district from a foreign port no person other than a pilot, a customs officer, an immigration officer or a person acting in the execution of these regulations shall, without the permission of the medical officer or other authorised officer of the sanitary authority, board or leave the ship until it is free from control under these regulations, and the master shall take all steps necessary to secure compliance with this provision.

(2) Before granting permision to any person to leave a ship, the medical officer may require him to state his name and his intended destination and address, and to give any other information which the medical officer may reasonably think necessary for transmission to the local authority of the area within which the intended place of destination of the person is situate.

(3) If a person who, having been required to state his intended destination and address before being permitted to leave a ship, either is unable to do so or arrives, within a period, not exceeding fourteen days after landing, to be specified to him by the medical officer, at a place other than that which he has so stated, he shall immediately after his arrival forward particulars of his actual place of arrival and his address to the medical officer of the district in which he left the ship.

CHOLERA, YELLOW FEVER, AND PLAGUE

Ships arriving from infected ports and seaboards and Ships at mooring stations.

17. The medical officer shall—

(a) inspect, on arrival in the district, any ship which has come from or called at any foreign port or seaboard which is included in the list prepared pursuant to the provisions of Article 11, and any other ship which has come from or called at a foreign port and on which there has occurred during the voyage any case of illness which was or may have been plague, cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever or small pox or on which rodent plague has occurred or been suspected during the voyage:

Provided that a ship shall not be deemed to have called at a foreign port or seaboard if, without having been in communication with the shore, it has landed only mails and passengers and their luggage, or it has taken on board only mails or passengers with or without their luggage from another ship which has also not been in communication with the shore;

(b) within twelve hours after the arrival of a ship at a mooring station or after the detention of a ship by a customs officer or as soon as possible thereafter, board and examine the ship; and if the ship is liable to be subjected to further control under these regulations continue the detention or detain the ship, as the case may require;

(c) where a ship has been detained at or sent to a mooring station, or isolated at its place of mooring, discharge or loading, on account of the discovery or suspicion of plague-infected rats, cause all practicable steps to be taken to prevent the escape of rats from the ship.

Removal of Ship to mooring station after arrival in district.

18. If plague-infected rats are discovered, or plague, cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever or smallpox occurs, on any ship after it has come into a district the medical officer may if he thinks fit require the master to remove the ship to a mooring station.

Deratisation and Deratisation Exemption Certificates.

19.—(1) On the arrival of a ship from a foreign port at an approved port, whether or not the first port of call in England or Wales, the medical officer shall, unless a valid deratisation certificate or valid deratisation exemption certificate is produced in respect of the ship, take such steps as he may consider necessary to ascertain whether the ship is maintained in such a condition that the number of rats on board is kept down to the minimum.

(2) If, after the ship has been inspected, the medical officer is satisfied that the ship is free from rats or is maintained in such a condition that the number of rats on board is kept down to the minimum, he shall sign and issue a deratisation exemption certificate.

(3) If, after the ship has been inspected, the medical officer is of opinion that the ship is not maintained in such a condition that the number of rats on board is kept down to the minimum, he shall require the ship to be deratised in such manner as may be specified or approved by him, and the master shall forthwith make arrangements for the deratisation of the ship to be carried out to the satisfaction of the medical officer.

(4) After the deratisation has been completed to his satisfaction, the medical officer shall sign and issue a deratisation certificate.

20. Upon receipt of an application in writing from the owner of any ship in an approved port, or from the master of the ship acting for and on behalf of the owner, for a deratisation exemption certificate or a deratisation certificate in respect of the ship, the medical officer shall take such steps as he may consider necessary to satisfy himself that the ship is maintained in such a condition that the number of rats on board is kept down to the minimum, or give directions for the deratisation of the ship, as the case may require, and, on being satisfied as to the condition of the ship or that the deratisation of the ship has been properly carried out, he shall issue the appropriate certificate.

21.—(1) All deratisation and deratisation exemption certificates shall be in such form as the Minister may from time to time direct. CHOLERA, YELLOW FEVER, AND PLAGUE

(2) A copy of every such certificate shall be retained in the office of the sanitary authority, and a copy shall be forwarded to the Minister unless he otherwise directs.

(3) The owner or the master of the ship shall pay to the sanitary authority such fee for the inspection of the ship and for the issue of a certificate as the Minister may from time to time determine.

PART III.—SHIPS IN PORT.

Embarkation of Persons.

22.—(1) The medical officer may examine any person proposing to embark on a ship whom he suspects to be suffering from plague, cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever or smallpox and if, after examination, he is of opinion that the person shows symptoms of any of these diseases he may prohibit his embarkation.

(2) If severe smallpox (variola major) exists in any part of Great Britain, the medical officer may prohibit any person coming from such part who has been in such contact with any person suffering from the disease as to render him liable to transmit infection and who is not, in the opinion of the medical officer, adequately protected against smallpox, from embarking on any ship going beyond Great Britain, Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man.

Application.

23. Where the Minister has, by notice published in the London Gazette, declared a district to be infected with plague, cholera, or yellow fever, or to be a district in which typhus fever or smallpox exists in an epidemic form, the following provisions of this Part of these regulations shall operate in that district until the notice is revoked by a subsequent notice published in the London Gazette.

Examination of Ships and persons on board.

24.—(1) The medical officer may at any time, and shall within twelve hours after receiving a request from the master so to do, visit any ship and may medically examine any person on board or proposing to embark on the ship.

(2) The medical officer or other authorised officer of the sanitary authority may and on the request of the master shall examine any clothing bedding or other article of personal use which belongs to or is in use or is intended for use by the master or a member of the crew or any person who proposes to embark on or is on board any ship and which, in the opinion of the medical officer or other authorised officer as aforesaid, may have been exposed to infection, and may required the disinfection or destruction of any such clothing bedding or article of personal use.

(3) The medical officer or other officer as aforesaid may require any parts of a ship which, in his opinion, may be infected to be disinfected to his satisfaction.

(4) No person shall take or cause to be taken on board a ship any body linen, clothing or bedding or any article whatsoever which, in the opinion of the medical officer or other officer as aforesaid is capable of carrying infection, unless that officer is satisfied that it has been efficiently disinfected.

Plague.

25. If any part of the district is declared to be infected with plague, the medical officer may, and shall if so required by the Minister—

(a) take steps to secure the deratisation of any ship on which he has reason to believe that there are rats, and for that purpose the provisions of Articles 19, 20, and 21 so far as they are applicable to the circumstances of the case shall apply; and

(b) require the master of a ship, under the direction of the medical officer and to his satisfaction, to take all such precautions and employ all such means for effectually stopping the access of rats from the shore to the ship, as in the opinion of the medical officer, are necessary for the prevention of the conveyance of infection by means of the ship.

CHOLERA, YELLOW FEVER, AND PLAGUE

Cholera.

26. If any part of the district is declared to be infected with cholera, the medical officer may, and shall if so required by the Minister—

(a) take steps to secure that all tanks and filters used in connection with the supply of drinking water on a ship shall be emptied, cleansed and disinfected and that the tanks shall then be refilled with wholesome water;

(b) prohibit any person from taking foodstuffs on board a ship: Provided that the prohibition may be applied, as the medical officer may see fit, either generally to all foodstuffs or to any specified foodstuffs or any class or classes of foodstuff or to foodstuffs obtained from any specified source or sources of supply; and

(c) require that the bilges and any water used as ballast shall be disinfected.

Typhus Fever.

(2) The medical officer shall forthwith communicate to the sanitary authority any directions given to him by the Minister under this Article.

(2) If the condition of any such person does not permit of his removal as aforesaid, the medical officer may, by notice in writing to the master, prohibit the removal of the person or his departure from the ship, save with the consent in writing of the medical officer.

Duties of Master.

32. The master of a ship in a district shall—

When the sanitary authority cause any such requirement to be complied with at the cost of the master they may, if they think fit, require the amount of the charge for the work or a part thereof to be paid to or deposited with them before the work is undertaken.

(2) The amount of the charge for any work so to be undertaken by the sanitary authority shall be such reasonable sum as to the exclusion of any charge or claim in respect of profit represents the actual or estimated cost to be incurred by the sanitary authority in undertaking the work, so, however, that it shall not exceed the sum of twenty pounds unless notice of the proposed charge has been given to the master before the work is undertaken.

(3) The sanitary authority or the medical officer shall, on the request of the master of any ship in regard to which action required of the master in pursuance of these regulations has been taken, furnish the master free of charge with a statement in writing recording the particulars of any such action (including the measures of disinfection which have been taken) in regard to which the master may reasonably require such a statement: Provided that no such statement in regard to deratisation measures shall take the form of a deratisation certificate unless such a certificate could be issued under Article 19 or 20 of these regulations.

Recovery of fees and charges.

36. Any fee payable to the sanitary authority in pursuance of paragraph (3) of Article 21 and every charge authorised by Article 35 shall be recoverable by the sanitary authority as expenses or demands within the meaning of section 251 or of section 261 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and those sections and the enactments referred to in or applied by those sections shall apply and have effect for the recovery of the said expenses as if the said sections and enactments were herein re-enacted and in terms made applicable to the case.

37. Subject to the provisions of Articles 21 (3) and 35 any expenses incurred by a sanitary authority in the execution of these regulations shall be defrayed in the same manner as the expenses incurred by them in the execution and discharge of their existing powers and duties.

Saving for mails.

38. Nothing in these regulations shall render liable to detention, disinfection, or destruction any article forming part of any mail (other than a parcel mail) conveyed under the authority of the Postmaster General, or of the postal administration of any other government, or shall prejudicially affect the receipt on board and delivery in due course at the port or place of destination of any such mail (other than a parcel mail) in accordance with the provisions of the Post Office Acts.

Saving for Ships putting to sea.

39. The master of a ship in or approaching a district who does not desire to submit to any requirements of these regulations which may be applicable shall be at liberty to put to sea without being subjected to control under these regulations if he notifies the medical officer of his intention: Provided that if he desires to land goods, to disembark passengers or to take on fuel, foodstuffs or water, the medical officer may grant him permission so to do subject to such conditions, in conformity with the provisions of Article 54 of the International Sanitary Convention of Paris, 1926, as the medical officer thinks fit; and the master shall proceed accordingly and put to sea with due despatch.

COMMONS.

THE COMMONS ACT, 1899.

INSTRUCTIONS OF THE MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES WITH RESPECT TO SCHEMES FOR THE REGULATION AND MANAGEMENT OF COMMONS UNDER PART I. OF THE COMMONS ACT, 1899 (62 & 63 VICT. c. 30).

1. The council of an urban or rural district are empowered by the above Act to make a scheme for the regulation and management of any common, town or village green within their district, with a view to the expenditure of money on the drainage, levelling and improvement thereof, and to the making of byelaws and regulations for the prevention of nuisances and the preservation of order.

2. The scheme is to be in the form prescribed by the Regulations of the Minister made under the Act, and is to identify, by reference to a map, the common or green to be thereby regulated.

The map, in the preparation of which accuracy is essential, should be made on the latest available edition of the 1/2500 scale Ordnance Survey Sheets supplemented, where necessary, by dotted red lines to show such of the limits of the land to be regulated as are not defined by Ordnance Survey detail. The whole area proposed to be regulated should be tinted light green and its limits sharply defined by an edging of dark green. Great care should be taken to avoid the inclusion by the colour edging of ponds, drains, streams, paths, shaws or other features lying against the boundaries of the land but outside the area proposed to be regulated. Where a parish boundary forms part of the boundary of the land, the dark green edging should not go beyond the parish boundary characteristic shown thus: . . . on the Ordnance Survey Sheet. The following note should be conspicuously written on the map: "The green colour includes the whole of the lands, ponds, paths, and streams, forming parts of the common (or commons or town or village green), but is not intended to include any boundary ditches forming parts of adjoining properties."

3. Not less than three months before the making of a scheme the council are to give such notice of their intention to make it as is prescribed in the Minister's Regulations, and are to state thereby where copies of the draft of the scheme may be obtained, and where the map therein referred to may be inspected. They are also to send to the Ministry as soon as possible two copies of the draft-scheme and a copy of the deposited map.

4. During the three months any person may obtain a copy of the draft scheme on payment of a sum not exceeding sixpence, and may inspect the map at the prescribed place, and may make in writing to the Ministry any objection or suggestion with respect to the scheme or map.

5. At the expiration of the three months the council by their clerk or other responsible officer are to send to the Minister the deposited map, and a Statutory Declaration—

(a) that the notice (in the form prescribed in the Minister's Regulations) has been advertised as required in a newspaper or newspapers having a wide circulation in the neighbourhood;

(b) that it has been served and published in several ways indicated in the Regulations;

(c) that the draft-scheme with the map has been deposited for the prescribed period at the office of the council; and

(d) that the officer making the declaration is informed and believes that the person (whose name should be given) served with a notice as being entitled to the soil of the land, either as lord of the manor or otherwise, is the person so entitled.

6. The Minister will, upon receipt of the Declaration and map, take into consideration any objections or suggestions that have been made during the three months, and may, if he thinks fit, direct that an inquiry shall be held by an officer of the Ministry, and for this purpose may require the deposit of a sum of money sufficient to cover the expenses likely to be incurred by the Ministry in connection with the inquiry.

7. After the consideration of such objections or suggestions and of the report of the officer holding the inquiry (if any), the Ministry will inform the council whether the scheme will require to be modified before it can be approved.

8. When the final form of the scheme is settled the council will be asked (unless a deposit of a sufficient sum has been previously made) to pay the statutory fee of £2 and any additional expenses (e.g. cost of maps). On receipt of the money the Ministry will prepare two copies of the map mounted on linen, and send them to the council, for sealing in due course, with two copies of the scheme, which the council will prepare on parchment or tough paper. Copies of the scheme and map when sealed by the council should be sent to the Ministry. One of the copies will be returned with the Ministry's seal affixed, and the other will be retained by the Ministry for purposes of record.

9. Two printed copies of the approved scheme as prepared for issue to the public should be sent as soon as possible to the Ministry, and also two copies of any byelaws made from time to time under the scheme. It should be noted that any such byelaws must be confirmed by the Minister of Health and not by the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries.

10. The Act contains a proviso that if, at any time before the Ministry has approved of the scheme, a written notice of dissent is received either—

(a) from the person entitled, as lord of the manor or otherwise, to the soil of the common; or

(b) from persons representing at least one-third in value of such interests in the common as are affected by scheme, and such notice is not subsequently withdrawn, the Ministry is not to proceed further in the matter.

11. The management of any common regulated by scheme made by a district council is to be vested in the district council.

12. A rural district council may delegate to a parish council any powers of management thus conferred on the district council in relation to any commons within the parish, and thereupon the Public Health Acts will apply as if the parish council were a parochial committee (see Public Health Act, 1875, s. 202).

13. A parish council may agree to contribute the whole or any portion of the expenses of and incidental to the preparation and execution of a scheme for the regulation and management of any common within their parish (including any compensation paid under the Act) but subject to the restrictions on expenditure imposed by section eleven of the Local Government Act, 1894.

14. The Act provides that no estate, interest, or right of a profitable or beneficial nature in, over, or affecting any common shall, except with the consent of the person entitled thereto, be taken away or injuriously affected by any such scheme without compensation being made or provided for the same by the council making the scheme, and such compensation is, in case of difference, to be ascertained and provided in the same manner as if it were for the compulsory purchase and taking, or the injurious affecting of lands under the Lands Clauses Acts.

15. A district council may acquire, by gift or by purchase by agreement, the fee simple or any estate in or any rights in or over any common regulated by a scheme under the Act, and hold the same without licence in mortmain for the purposes of the scheme, and the expenses thus incurred by the district council will be part of their expenses of executing the scheme.

16. When a common is regulated by a scheme under the Act, the restrictions imposed by section twenty of the Commons Act, 1876, on the digging of gravel for the repair of the highways, will apply, so that no road authority will be able to take material for roads from any part of the common without the consent of the district council, or in default of such consent without an order of the justices in petty sessions.

17. The power to make a scheme includes power to amend or supplement a scheme.

18. The provisions with respect to byelaws contained in sections one hundred and eighty-two to one hundred and eighty-six, both inclusive of the Public Health Act, 1875, and any enactment extending those sections, will apply to all byelaws made in pursuance of a scheme under the Act, and any fine imposed by any such byelaw will be recoverable summarily and be payable to the council in whom the management of the common is vested.

19. All expenses incurred by the Ministry in relation to a scheme and all expenses of and incidental to the preparation and execution of the scheme (including any compensation paid under the Act), are to be paid by the district council, and are to be treated as part of the expenses of the district council in the execution of the powers conferred by the Public Health Acts.

20. A district council may for the purposes of the Act borrow money in like manner and subject to the like conditions as they may borrow for defraying expenses incurred in the execution of the Public Health Acts, and those Acts will apply accordingly.

21. The council of any urban district may, with a view to the benefit of the inhabitants of their district, and subject to the approval of the Minister of Health, enter into an undertaking with any other council making or having made a scheme to contribute any portion of the expenses incurred by that council in executing the scheme.

22. The above provisions of the Act apply to the council of a county borough in like manner as if that council were the council of an urban district.

23. No scheme under the Act can apply to any common which is or might be the subject of a scheme made under the Metropolitan Commons Acts, 1866 to 1898, or is regulated by a provisional order under the Inclosure Acts, 1845 to 1882, or has been acquired, or managed as an open space, under the powers of the Corporation of London (Open Spaces) Act, 1878, or any Act therein referred to, or is the subject of any private or local and personal Act of Parliament having for its object the preservation of the common as an open space, or is subject to byelaws made by a parish council under section eight of the Local Government Act, 1894.

24. The expression "common" as used in Part I. of the Act includes any town or village green, as well as any land subject to be inclosed under the Inclosure Acts, 1845 to 1882, that is, practically, any commonable land whether waste of a manor or not.

CIRCULAR 1424.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1933: CONFERENCES.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1,
July 10th, 1934.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose a copy of an Order which he has made under section 267 of the Local Government Act, 1933.

For L. G. A., 1933, s. 267, see ante, p. 1147.

A copy of the section is printed at the end of this circular. It is important to notice that the section and the Order apply only to conferences or meetings convened by one or more Local Authorities or by an Association of Local Authorities, as distinct from conferences which are not so convened. There are conferences on subjects in which Local Authorities are interested which are called by other bodies, especially these of a professional or technical character.

Where a Local Authority wishes to send members to a conference not expressly authorised by statute, and to charge the expenses in accounts which are subject to district audit, the position will be the same as before the commencement of the Local Government Act, 1933. That is to say, it will be necessary to obtain the Minister's sanction under the proviso in subsection (1) of section 228 of the Act of 1933, which has taken the place of the Local Authorities (Expenses) Act, 1887.

I am, Sir, etc.

S. R. & O., 1934, No. 690.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (CONFERENCES) REGULATIONS, 1934, DATED JULY 5TH, 1934, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 267 OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1933 (23 & 24 GEO. 5, c. 51).

The Minister of Health in pursuance of the powers conferred on him by section 267 of the Local Government Act, 1933 hereby makes the following regulations.

For L. G. A., 1933, s. 267, see ante, p. 1147.

1. These regulations may be cited as the Local Government (Conferences) Regulations, 1934, and shall come into operation on the date hereof.

2. The power conferred by section 267 of the Local Government Act, 1933 on local authorities other than parish councils to pay any reasonable expenses incurred by members or officers of the authority or of any committee thereof in attending a conference or meeting convened by one or more local authorities or by any association of local authorities shall extend to the following conferences or meetings:—

(i) the annual conferences of the Association of Municipal Corporations, the Urban District Councils' Association, and the Rural District Councils' Association, the periodical meeting of the Public Assistance Conference, and any meeting of the council or any committee of any of the said Associations or the Public Assistance Conference; and

(ii) any other conference or meeting convened as aforesaid to discuss any matter connected with the discharge of their functions.

3. The said power shall be exercised subject to the following conditions :—

(i) the expenses of a member or officer shall not be paid by the local authority unless his attendance at such meeting or conference is authorised by them;

(ii) the local authority shall not pay the expenses of more than three members in respect of their attendance at a conference or meeting referred to in Article 2 (1) of these regulations ; and

(iii) the local authority shall not pay the expenses of more than two members in respect of their attendance at a conference or meeting referred to in Article 2 (ii) of these regulations.

4. A local authority other than a parish council may in any case in which they consider it desirable to do so incur any reasonable expense in purchasing reports of the proceedings of any conference or meeting the expenses of attending which may be defrayed under these regulations.

Given under the official seal of the Minister of Health this fifth day of July nineteen hundred and thirty-four.

FAIR WAGES CLAUSES IN CONTRACTS—CIRCULAR.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, WHITEHALL, S.W.,

September 2nd, 1911.

SIR,—I am directed by the Local Government Board to draw the attention of the local authority to the accompanying memorandum embodying the resolution passed by the House of Commons on the 10th March, 1909, on the subject of fair wages clauses in Government contracts, and the recommendations made by the advisory committee of representatives of Government departments which has been established as suggested in paragraph 124 of the Report of the Fair Wages Committee of 1908 (Cd. 4422).

It will be seen that the advisory committee recommend that clauses such as those inserted in Government contracts should also be introduced into contracts which are not entered into by Government departments but which involve the expenditure of public money or other consideration granted by a Government department or which require the approval of the department.

It appears to the Board that the policy adopted in the case of Government contracts should be followed in the cases of all contracts for the execution of works or the supply of materials which are entered into by local authorities or by or on behalf of any committee wholly or in part appointed by a local authority. Whilst they are aware that many local authorities specify in their contracts conditions to be observed by the contractor as to rates of wages and other matters affecting persons employed by him, the Board think that in every case the authority should give the matter careful consideration with the view to the introduction in the contracts of clauses on the lines of those inserted in Government contracts.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

H. C. MONRO, Secretary.

To the Clerk to the Local Authority.

CONTRACTS

FAIR WAGES CLAUSES IN GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS.

The following clauses recommended by the Fair Wages Advisory Committee for general use in Government contracts, with a view to carrying out the objects of the fair wages resolutions of the House of Commons, have been generally adopted by the contracting departments:—

FOR INCLUSION IN ALL CONTRACTS.

1.—Fair Wages Clause.

The contractor shall in the execution of his contract observe and fulfil the obligations upon contractors specified in the resolution passed by the House of Commons on the 10th March, 1909, namely: "The contractor shall . . . pay rates of wages and observe hours of labour not less favourable than those commonly recognised by employers and trade societies (or, in the absence of such recognised wages and hours, those which in practice prevail amongst good employers) in the trade in the district where the work is carried out. Where there are no such wages and hours recognised or prevailing in the district, those recognised or prevailing in the nearest district in which the general industrial circumstances are similar shall be adopted. Further, the conditions of employment generally accepted in the district in the trade concerned shall be taken into account in considering how far the terms of the fair wages clauses are being observed. The contractor shall be prohibited from transferring or assigning, directly or indirectly, to any person or persons whatever, any portion of his contract without the written permission of the department. Sub-letting, other than that which may be customary in the trade concerned, shall be prohibited. The contractor shall be responsible for the observance of the fair wages clauses by the sub-contractor."

2.—Exhibition of Notice at Works.

The contractor shall cause the preceding condition to be prominently exhibited for the information of his workpeople, on the premises where work is being executed under the contract.

3.—Inspection of Wages Books, &c.

The contractor shall keep proper wages books and time sheets, showing the wages paid and [so far as practicable] the time worked by the workpeople in his employ in and about the execution of the contract, and such wages books and time sheets shall be produced whenever required for the inspection of any officer authorised by the department (a).

(a) Specify the department.

FOR INCLUSION IN CONTRACTS IN CERTAIN TRADES.

4.—Factory Clause.

All work executed under the contract shall be carried out at the contractor's own factory or workshop at , or other place approved by the department (a), and no work under the contract shall be done in the homes of the workpeople.

5.—Direct Payment of Wages.

All wages earned by workers engaged on work under the contract shall be paid directly to them and not through a foreman or others supervising or taking part in the operations on which the workers are engaged.

SEMI-GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS.

The Fair Wages Advisory Committee have recommended, that in the case of contracts which are not entered into by a Government department but which involve the expenditure of public money or other consideration granted by the department, or which have to be approved by a Government department, the department concerned should adopt the principle already followed in some instances and should require the insertion in such contracts of fair wages clauses on the lines of those inserted in Government contracts, with such modifications as may be necessary in particular cases.

March, 1911.

CON-TRACTS

TRADE BOARDS ACT, 1909, CONTRACTS OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES CIRCULAR.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, WHITEHALL, S.W.,
July 29th, 1910.

I am directed by the Local Government Board to state that they have been desired by the Board of Trade to draw the attention of local authorities to certain provisions in the Trade Boards Act, 1909, which are of importance in their bearing upon the contracts of local authorities.

For the Trade Boards Act, 1909, see 19 Halsbury's Statutes 692.

The trades to which the Act at present applies (a) are set out in the schedule to the Act and comprise:—

1. Ready-made and wholesale bespoke tailoring and any other branch of tailoring in which the Board of Trade consider that the system of manufacture is generally similar to that prevailing in the wholesale trade.
2. The making of boxes or parts thereof made wholly or partially of paper, cardboard, chip, or similar material.
3. Machine-made lace and net finishing and mending or darning operations of lace curtain finishing.
4. Hammered and dollied or tommied chain-making.

But the Board of Trade may, by Provisional Order to be confirmed by Parliament, extend the provisions of the Act to any other trade if the rate of wages prevailing in any branch of the trade is exceptionally low as compared with that in other employments, and the circumstances of the trade are such as to render the application of the Act expedient.

The Act provides for the establishment of Trade Boards, the chief business of which will be to fix minimum rates of wages for their trades. The Board of Trade may make an Order making a rate obligatory in cases to which it is applicable on all persons employing labour and on all persons employed. Until the issue of such an obligatory Order the minimum rate fixed by a Trade Board has only the limited operation indicated in section 7 of the Act (b). The provisions of this section are those to which it is particularly desired to draw the attention of the local authority.

The effect of the section, so far as the local authority are concerned, is that, pending the coming into full operation of any minimum rate of wages fixed by the Trade Board, the local authority are precluded from entering into contracts with any employer in the particular trade and area to which the rate is applicable, who has not given the specified notice to the Trade Board that he is willing that the minimum rate should be obligatory upon him.

Great importance is attached to the observance by local authorities of the statutory obligation thus imposed upon them, and it is requested that before entering into a contract the local authority will ascertain whether it involves employment to which a minimum rate of wages is applicable in pursuance of the section quoted, and, if so, whether the person to whom the contract is proposed to be given is an employer by whom notice under the section has been given to the Trade Board.

No minimum rates of wages have yet been fixed under the Act, and some of the Trade Boards are only now on the point of being constituted. Notice of certain rates which they propose to fix, has, however, been given by the Trade Board for the hammered and dollied or tommied chain trade.

(a) By Trade Boards Provisional Orders Confirmation Act, 1913 (3 and 4 Geo. 5, c. clxii), the list has been extended to hollow-ware (ibid. Sch. III), linen and cotton embroidery (Sch. IV), shirt making (Sched. II), and sugar confectionery and fruit preserving (Sch. I.).

(b) This section is now repealed, but rates made thereunder still have the limited operation provided by s. 4 (5) of the Trades Boards Act, 1918 (19 Halsbury's Statutes 711).

CONTRACTS

When rates have been fixed by any Trade Board information as to the registration of employers under section 7 of the Act will be obtainable on application to the secretary of the Trade Board in question at the office of Trade Boards, Trafalgar Buildings, Northumberland Avenue, London, S.W.

CIRCULAR TO LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,

May 15th, 1923.

CONTRACTS.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to inform you that the Government have decided that, as regards all works in respect of which grants are given expressly because of unemployment by the Unemployment Grants Committee or by any Government Department, it shall be a condition of the grant that all contracts for or incidental to the works are to be placed in this country.

This follows a similar condition with regard to schemes in respect of which guarantees are given under the Trade Facilities Act.

The Government also urge that, in view of present conditions, the same principle should be adopted, in the absence of special circumstances, in the case of all contracts in respect of works carried out by Local Authorities, whether or not the expenditure on the works is assisted by grants from the National Exchequer or from the Road Fund.

CIRCULAR OF MINISTRY OF HEALTH, DATED MARCH 24TH, 1925, AND ADDRESSED TO ALL LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

CONTRACTS.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to inform you that at the Imperial Economic Conference in 1923 the following resolution was passed:—

"(1) That this Imperial Economic Conference reaffirms the principle that in all Government contracts effective preference be given to goods made and materials produced within the Empire, except where undertakings entered into prior to this Conference preclude such a course or special circumstances render it undesirable or unnecessary.

"(2) That, so far as practicable, efforts be made to ensure that the materials used in carrying out contracts be of Empire production.

"(3) That State, provincial and local government authorities should be encouraged to take note of the foregoing resolutions."

The Government will be glad if the matter is considered by your authority with a view to giving effect to this resolution, subject to the condition that, in view of the present special circumstances with regard to unemployment, no alteration should be made in the policy laid down in Circular 400 of the May 15th, 1923, with regard to the placing of contracts in this country.

CIRCULAR 686.

TO LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
March 31st, 1926.

KING'S ROLL.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to Circular 473 of 19th January, 1924, which invited local authorities to take steps to give effect to the recommendation of the King's Roll National Council by giving a preference in all their contracts to firms who are on the King's Roll.

The Minister directs the attention of your authority to the following resolution passed by both Houses of Parliament on the February 16th, 1926:—

"That, in the opinion of this House, it is the duty of the Government in all Government contracts to make provision for the employment to the fullest possible extent of disabled ex-service men, and to this end to confine such contracts, save in exceptional circumstances, to employers enrolled on the King's National Roll."

A large number of local authorities already adopt the practice of either restricting their contracts to firms on the Roll or giving preference to such firms. If your authority have not done so, the Minister will be glad if they will give the matter their consideration with a view to the adoption of this course.

The Minister takes this opportunity of again drawing attention to Circulars 400 of May 15th, 1923, and 569 of March 24th, 1925, with regard to contracts, and of emphasising the help that may be given to British trade if local authorities will not only place their contracts with British firms, but also make sure that so far as is reasonably practicable British materials and components only are used in the goods purchased.

I am, etc.

CIRCULAR 1388.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1933: SECTION 266. STANDING ORDERS: CONTRACTS.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1,
March 28th, 1934.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to invite the Council's attention to section 266 of the Local Government Act, 1933, under which all contracts made by the Council on or after June 1st next must be made in accordance with the Council's standing orders. This will mean that the Council, if they have not already done so, will be obliged to adopt standing orders with respect to contracts not later than the end of May.

Draft standing orders, drawn up for the assistance of Local Authorities, are enclosed. Notes upon some of the clauses and a copy of section 266 of the Act of 1933 (a) are printed as an appendix to this circular. The basis of the draft is section 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which will be repealed when the Act of 1933 comes into force. That section, it will be remembered, governed all contracts made by Town Councils and Urban District Councils for purposes of the Public Health Acts and some other Acts to which the section had been applied, but did not govern other contracts of those Authorities or the contracts of County Councils, Rural District Councils, and Parish Councils. All these different classes of Local Authorities (except the London County Council) are within the scope of section 266 of the Local Government Act, 1933.

CONTRACTS

The practice of Local Authorities must necessarily vary to some extent, according to the number and size of their transactions and according as they delegate the power of making contracts to Committees, but the draft model standing orders have been prepared for the use of all Local Authorities. Possibly some Local Authorities, who have many and complicated contractual transactions, will find more elaborate standing orders necessary. It is recommended that departures from the model should not be made except for some good cause in the circumstances of the particular Local Authority. There is manifest advantage to Local Authorities themselves if firms and persons having contracts with them can rely upon finding the standing orders—which have gathered a new importance by the enactment of section 266 of the Local Government Act, 1933—to be uniform in different districts.

I am, Sir, etc.

NOTES.

Clause 1. The section provides that contracts must be in accordance with the standing orders, but cases will arise where strict compliance with a rigid standing order is impossible or undesirable. In order to secure compliance with the section the standing orders themselves should therefore provide for exceptions.

The passages in sub-clause (1) are alternatives, the last two of which assume the existence of a standing Committee of the Council within whose purview come all the functions of the Council. This may be the General Purposes Committee where that is a definite Committee (not the Council as a whole sitting in private) or, where there is no other appropriate Committee, the Finance Committee. If the Council have no such Committee, or having such a Committee do not desire to delegate this function or to call for a report from that Committee before exercising the function, they will prefer one of the earlier alternatives—or, if the Council be a Parish Council, the simplified form in the footnote may suffice.

Clause 2. This reproduces the existing law with slight modification. In section 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the officer named is the surveyor. Nowadays it may be desirable that a consulting engineer, for example, shall make this report.

Clause 3. This reproduces the existing law, and adds a provision for wider publicity where the contract exceeds, say, £1,000: it is suggested that the figure inserted should not be greater. Those Local Authorities who rarely enter into contracts of £1,000 or over, such as Parish Councils, may usefully insert a smaller figure. A shorter period than the ten days, shown in brackets, should not be inserted. With a suitable figure in the first line, this clause will permit routine purchases and also, when opportunity offers, special purchases for cash without recourse to an "exception" in pursuance of clause 1. Section 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, does not indicate how the "public notice" is to be given, but under section 266 of the Local Government Act, 1933, the standing orders must contain provisions covering the point. Notice in a local newspaper is important for apprising the public of what is intended, but may not reach the firms best qualified to tender.

Clause 6. The amount of £50 is that in section 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Local Authorities having numerous transactions may wish to insert a higher figure (see also the note on clause 3 about purchases for cash), but it is suggested that a higher figure than £100 be not inserted.

Clause 7 (2). The existing law requires security for every contract exceeding £100 in value or amount and a pecuniary penalty where the contract is over £50 in value or amount.

Clause 8. This follows the suggestion in the circular letters issued from the Ministry in 1925 and 1929.

Clause 9. The principle here was suggested to Local Authorities in the circular letter issued from the Ministry in January, 1931. The clause has been drawn up so as to impose compliance with the British standard specification in all cases where an appropriate specification exists. The effect in conjunction with clause 1 will be that if a Committee making contracts desires to depart from the British standard specification in any instance, or to authorise a contractor to do so, it must obtain the approval of the Council (or of the appropriate committee, according to the Council's arrangements).

CONTRACTS

Clause 10. This follows, with necessary adaptation, the usual clause in Government contracts.

Clause 11. Some Local Authorities have their own form of "fair wages clause," but the form inserted in the model standing orders follows the fair wages resolution of the House of Commons.

CREMATION.

S. R. & O., 1930, No. 1016.

* These Regulations having been laid before both Houses of Parliament for 40 days came into force on the 9th December, 1930.

CREMATION

6. Except where an inquest has been held or a post-mortem examination has been made in pursuance of Section 21 (1) of the Coroners (Amendment) Act, 1926, and a certificate given by a Coroner in Form "E" (see Regulation 8), no cremation shall be allowed until the death of the deceased has been duly registered or a certificate has been given in pursuance of Section 2 (2) of the Act of 1926 that the death of the deceased is not required by law to be registered in England.

The production of a duplicate which has been duly issued in pursuance of Section 2 (4) of the Act of 1926 may be accepted in lieu of the production of the original certificate in subsection (1) or subsection (2).

For s. 21 (1) of the Coroners' (Amendment) Act, 1926, see 3 Halsbury's Statutes 790.

7. No cremation shall be allowed to take place unless application therefor be made, and the particulars stated in the application be confirmed by statutory declaration, in accordance with Form "A" in the Schedule hereto.

The application must be signed and the statutory declaration made by an executor or by the nearest surviving relative of the deceased, or, if made by any other person, must show a satisfactory reason why the application is not made by an executor or by the nearest surviving relative.

8. Except as hereafter provided, no cremation shall be allowed to take place unless

(a) A certificate in Form "B" has been given by a registered medical practitioner who has attended the deceased during his last illness and who can certify definitely as to the cause of death, and a confirmatory medical certificate in Form "C" has been given by another medical practitioner who must be qualified as prescribed in Regulation 9; or

(b) A post-mortem examination has been made by a medical practitioner expert in pathology appointed by the Cremation Authority (or in case of emergency appointed by the Medical Referee), and a certificate given by him in Form "D"; or

(c) A post-mortem examination has been made and the cause of death has been certified by the Coroner under Section 21 (2) of the Coroners (Amendment) Act, 1926, and a certificate has been given by the Coroner in Form "E"; or

(d) An inquest has been held and a certificate has been given by the Coroner in Form "E"; provided that in any case in which the death occurs in connection with an industrial, railway, flying or road accident and the Coroner adjourns the inquest with a view to the investigation of the causes of the accident, he may give a certificate in Form "E" with the necessary modifications if he is satisfied that death was due to an accident, without waiting for the termination of the inquest.

No cremation shall take place except on the written authority of the Medical Referee given in Form "F".

9. The confirmatory medical certificate in Form "C", if not given by the Medical Referee, must be given by a registered medical practitioner of not less than five years' standing, who shall not be a relative of the deceased or a relative or partner of the doctor who has given the certificate in Form "B".

10. Every Cremation Authority shall have a Medical Referee and a Deputy Medical Referee, who must be registered medical practitioners of not less than five years' standing and must possess such experience and qualifications as will fit them for the discharge of the duties required of them by these Regulations. The Medical Referee or Deputy Medical Referee if otherwise qualified may be a person holding the office of Coroner or Medical Officer of Health.

The Deputy Medical Referee shall act in the absence of the Medical Referee and in any case in which the Medical Referee has been the medical attendant of the deceased.

The Secretary of State shall appoint as Medical Referee and Deputy Medical Referee such fit persons as may be nominated by the Cremation Authority.

Any Medical Referee or Deputy Medical Referee appointed by the Secretary of State may in case of emergency act as the Medical Referee or Deputy Medical Referee of a Cremation Authority other than that for which he has been appointed.

11. It shall be lawful for the Medical Referee if he has personally investigated the cause of death to give a certificate in Form " C," and if he has made the post-mortem examination to give a certificate in Form " D." The Medical Referee, if a Coroner, may himself give the Coroner's certificate in Form " E."

12. The duties of the Medical Referee shall be as follows :—

(1) He shall not allow any cremation to take place if it appears that the deceased left a written direction to the contrary.

(2) He shall not (except where a post-mortem examination has been made under Regulation 8 (c), or an inquest has been held, and a certificate given by a Coroner in Form " E ") allow any cremation to take place unless he is satisfied—

(a) by the production of a certificate in pursuance of Section 2 (1) of the Act of 1926 that the death of the deceased has been duly registered ; or

(b) by the production of a certificate in pursuance of Section 2 (2) of the Act of 1926 that the death of the deceased is not required by law to be registered in England.

The production of a duplicate which has been duly issued in pursuance of Section 2 (4) of the Act of 1926 may be accepted in lieu of the production of the original certificate under subsection (1) or subsection (2).

(3) He shall, before allowing the cremation, examine the application and certificates and ascertain that they are such as are required by these Regulations and that the inquiry made by the persons giving the certificates has been adequate. He may make any inquiry with regard to the application and certificates that he may think necessary.

(4) He shall not allow the cremation unless he is satisfied that the application is made by an executor or by the nearest surviving relative of the deceased, or, if made by any other person, that the fact that the executor or nearest relative has not made the application is sufficiently explained, and that the person making the application is a proper person to do so.

(5) He shall not allow the cremation unless he is satisfied that the fact and cause of death have been definitely ascertained ; and in particular, if the cause of death assigned in the medical certificates be such as, regard being had to all the circumstances, might be due to poison, to violence, to any illegal operation, or to privation or neglect, he shall require a post-mortem examination to be held, and if that fails to reveal the cause of death, shall decline to allow the cremation unless an inquest be held and a certificate given by the Coroner in Form " E ".

(6) If it appears that death was due to poison, to violence, to any illegal operation or to privation or neglect, or if there is any suspicious circumstance whatsoever, whether revealed in the certificates or otherwise coming to his knowledge, he shall decline to allow the cremation unless an inquest be held and a certificate given by the Coroner in Form " E ".

Provided that if in any case to which the foregoing rule applies it is shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State that by reason of any special circumstances it is impracticable or undesirable that an inquest shall be held, he may by order under his hand authorise the Medical Referee to allow the cremation without an inquest being held and certificate given by the Coroner.

(7) If a Coroner has given notice that he intends to hold an inquest on the body, the Medical Referee shall not allow the cremation to take place until the inquest has been held.

(8) He may in any case decline to allow the cremation without stating any reason.

(9) He shall make such reports to the Secretary of State as may from time to time be required.

In the case of the remains of a person who has died in any place out of England the Medical Referee may accept a Declaration containing the particulars prescribed in Form "A" if it be made before any person having authority in that place to administer an oath or to take a declaration; and he may accept certificates in Forms "B", "C", and "D", if they be signed by any medical practitioners who are shown to his satisfaction to possess qualifications substantially equivalent to those prescribed in the case of each certificate by these Regulations.

In any such case the Secretary of State, if satisfied that the case is one in which cremation may properly take place, may by order under his hand authorise the Medical Referee to allow the cremation without the production of Forms "B" and "C".

13. The foregoing Regulations 5 to 12 shall not apply to the cremation of the remains of a deceased person who has already been buried for not less than one year. Such remains may be cremated, subject to such conditions as the Secretary of State may impose in the exhumation licence granted by him or otherwise; and any such cremation in which those conditions are not observed shall be deemed a contravention of these Regulations.

14. In the case of any person dying of plague, cholera, or yellow fever on board ship or in a hospital or temporary place of reception of the sick provided by a Port or other Local Authority under the Public Health Acts or by a Hospital Committee under the Isolation Hospital Acts, the Medical Referee, if satisfied as to the cause of death, may dispense with any of the requirements of Regulations 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 12. These Regulations may also be temporarily suspended or modified in any district during an epidemic or for other sufficient reason by an order of the Secretary of State on the application of a Local Authority.

15. Notwithstanding the foregoing Regulations 6 to 12, the Medical Referee may permit the cremation of the remains of a stillborn child if it be certified to be stillborn by a registered medical practitioner after examination of the body, and if the Referee after such inquiries as he may think necessary is satisfied that it was stillborn, and that there is no reason for further examination; but, before permitting such cremation, the Medical Referee shall, except where an inquest has been held and a certificate given by a Coroner in Form "E", require the production of a certificate in pursuance of Section 7 (4) of the Act of 1926 that the stillbirth has been duly registered.

The production of a duplicate which has been duly issued in pursuance of Section 2 (4) of the Act of 1926 may be accepted in lieu of the production of the original certificate in subsection (1) or subsection (2).

Disposition of Ashes.

16. After the cremation of the remains of a deceased person the ashes shall be given into the charge of the person who applied for the cremation if he so desires. If not, they shall be retained by the Cremation Authority, and, in the absence of any special arrangement for their burial or preservation, they shall either be decently interred in a burial ground or in land adjoining the crematorium reserved for the burial of ashes, or shall be scattered thereon. In the case of ashes left temporarily in the charge of the Cremation Authority and not removed within a reasonable time, a fortnight's notice shall be given to the person who applied for the cremation before the remains are interred or scattered.

Registration of Cremations, etc.

17. Every Cremation Authority shall appoint a registrar who shall keep a register of all cremations carried out by the Cremation Authority in Form "G". He shall make the entries relating to each cremation immediately after the cremation has taken place, except the entry in the last column, which he shall make as soon as the remains of the deceased have been handed to the relatives or otherwise disposed of.

18. Any certificate given by a Coroner in Form "E" shall have attached thereto a detachable portion (which shall be in the form set out in the Schedule to these Regulations) for use by the registrar in pursuance of the following Regulation.

19.—(1) (a) Subject to the provisions of paragraphs (2) and (3) of this Regulation the registrar shall, within ninety-six hours of the cremation of the body of any deceased person, send to the registrar of births and deaths for the sub-district in which the death took place or, if the death took place elsewhere than in England, to the registrar of births and deaths for the sub-district in which the crematorium is situated, a notification of the cremation of the body and of the date and place of such cremation.

(b) Where the body has been cremated without inquest, the notification shall be sent in the manner for the time being prescribed by the Registrar-General under the Act of 1926, for notifications under Section 3 (1) of that Act.*

(c) Where the body has been cremated after inquest or a post-mortem examination made in pursuance of Section 21 (1) of the Coroners (Amendment) Act, 1926, such notification as aforesaid shall be sent upon the detachable portion of the certificate given by the Coroner in Form "E".

(2) This Regulation shall not apply to any cremation of human remains which has taken place under Regulation 13.

(3) Where any cremation of human remains has taken place under Regulation 14, the registrar shall (subject to the provisions of any order made by the Secretary of State under that Regulation) within ninety-six hours of the cremation forward to the Registrar-General a copy of the relative entry in the register of cremations together with particulars of the place of death of the deceased and the cause of death as established to the satisfaction of the Medical Referee.

20. All applications, certificates, statutory declarations and other documents relating to any cremation shall be marked with a number corresponding to the number in the register, shall be filed in order, and shall be carefully preserved by the Cremation Authority. Provided that the Cremation Authority may, if they think fit, destroy any such applications, certificates, statutory declarations or other documents (but not the register of cremations or any part of such register) after the expiration of fifteen years from the date of the cremation to which they relate.

All such registers and documents shall be open to inspection at any reasonable hour by any person appointed for that purpose by the Secretary of State, the Minister of Health or the Chief Officer of any Police Force.

21 When any crematorium is closed as provided in Regulation 1, the Cremation Authority shall send all registers and documents relating to the cremations which have taken place therein to the Secretary of State, or otherwise dispose of them as he may direct.

22. I hereby revoke the Regulations made by the Secretary of State on April 26th, 1920, June 23rd, 1925, and May 6th, 1927.

The revoked orders are S.R. & O., 1920, No. 1286; 1925, No. 761; and 1927, No. 575, respectively.

* Regulation 87 (1) of the Registration (Births, Stillbirths, Deaths and Marriages) Consolidated Regulations, 1927 (S. CIRCULAR TO BOROUGHS, ETC.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (SMALL-POX PREVENTION) REGULATIONS, 1917.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, WHITEHALL, S.W.,

February 13th, 1917.

SIR,—I am directed by the President of the Local Government Board to state that it has been represented to him that it is desirable that further facilities should be provided for securing on the occurrence of any case of small-pox the prompt vaccination and revaccination of persons who have come in contact with the infection.

Regulations have therefore been made empowering medical officers of health of sanitary districts to perform vaccination or revaccination of any such persons who are willing to be vaccinated. Two copies of the Order are enclosed with an additional copy of this circular. It is requested that one of the copies of the circular and regulations may be handed to the medical officer of health.

In the performance of vaccination in pursuance of the regulations the following instructions should be observed :—

(a) Vaccination should at every stage be carried out with aseptic precautions, which should include the cleansing of the surface of the skin before vaccination, the use of sterilised instruments, and the protection of the vaccinated surface against extraneous infection both on the performance of the operation and on inspection of the results.

Advice as to the precautions to be taken in this respect until the scabs have fallen and the arm has healed should always be given to the person vaccinated, or, in the case of the vaccination of a child not more than fourteen years of age, to the parent or other person having the custody of the child.

(b) In all ordinary cases of primary vaccination the medical officer of health should aim at producing four separate good-sized vesicles or groups of vesicles, not less than half an inch from one another. The total area of vesiculation resulting from the vaccination should not be less than half a square inch.

(c) If any person vaccinated or revaccinated by a medical officer of health in pursuance of these regulations require medical treatment in consequence of the vaccination or revaccination the local authority should offer to provide such medical treatment as may be required.

It will be clearly understood that the powers conferred upon the medical officer of health under these regulations are only intended to be exercised in the cases of persons who have been in immediate contact with persons suffering from small-pox.

The local authority should arrange to pay to the medical officer of health such sum as is reasonable in respect of the extra work which he undertakes in pursuance of these regulations. For their guidance the Board may state that in their view the payment should be not less than two shillings and sixpence for every vaccination or revaccination performed.

Additional copies of the regulations and circular will be supplied on application.

I am, etc.

[Revised instructions as to vaccination by public vaccinators were issued in consequence of the report of a committee on the subject. See now Circular and the Vaccination Order, 1930 (S. R. & O., 1930, No. 2).]

DISEASES AND HOSPITALS

* S. R. & O., 1940, No. 204.

THE MEASLES AND WHOOPING COUGH REGULATIONS, 1940.

DATED FEBRUARY 9TH, 1940, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH.

Whereas the Minister of Health is empowered by section 143 of the Public Health Act, 1936 (a), to make regulations with a view to the treatment of persons affected with any epidemic, endemic or infectious disease and for preventing the spread of such diseases, and by such regulations to apply, with or without modifications, to any disease to which the regulations relate any enactment relating to the notification of disease or to notifiable diseases;

And whereas measles and whooping cough are endemic and infectious diseases;

And whereas the Minister of Health is further empowered by section 283 of the said Act (b) to prescribe the form of any certificate to be used for any of the purposes of the said Act;

And whereas by regulations made by the Minister of Health on the dates set out in column 1 of the third schedule to these regulations provision was made for the notification of cases of the diseases specified in column 2 thereof in the districts mentioned in column 3 thereof:

Now therefore the Minister of Health in exercise of his powers under the said sections 143 and 283 and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf hereby makes the following regulations:—

1.—(1) These regulations may be cited as the Measles and Whooping Cough Regulations, 1940.

(2) These regulations shall come into operation on the date hereof, and shall be enforced and executed by the local authorities.

(3) Every local authority shall give notice of these regulations by advertisement in a local newspaper circulating within their district and in such other manner as they think sufficient for informing persons interested, and shall also send a copy to each registered medical practitioner who after due inquiry is ascertained to be practising within the district.

(4) These regulations shall not extend to London.

2. The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

* The history of the notification of measles, briefly stated, is as follows:—

1. Measles was made notifiable throughout England and Wales by the Local Government Board's Order of 27th November, 1915.

2. The Order of 1915 was rescinded by an Order of 1919, which as from 1st January, 1920, made the disease notifiable in those districts only where an Order for the purpose was made with the Minister's approval under the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, or the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, and subsequent enactments (see pp. 3158–61 of the tenth edition of this work).

3. In 1938, measles and whooping cough were made notifiable throughout the County of London by the County of London (Measles and Whooping Cough) Regulations, 1938 (S. R. & O., 1938, No. 1100), various local orders of metropolitan boroughs being rescinded. The County of London (Measles and Whooping Cough) Amendment Regulations, 1939, have also been made, substituting a notification fee of one shilling for the previous fee of two shillings and sixpence, and making all cases notifiable, instead of limited classes of cases. Both sets of London regulations are outside the scope of this work.

4. The Measles and Whooping Cough Regulations, 1939, which came into force on October 23, 1939, made these diseases notifiable throughout England and Wales, except London. These regulations were provisional, and are superseded by the Measles and Whooping Cough Regulations, 1940, here printed.

(a) Ante, p. 405.

(b) Ante, p. 574.

3. Sections 144 to 146 of the Public Health Act, 1936, being enactments relating to the notification of disease, shall as modified and set out in the first schedule to these regulations apply to measles and whooping cough.

4.—(1) Upon the receipt of a certificate under these regulations or on becoming aware in any other way of a case or suspected case of measles or whooping cough in a district the medical officer of health or an officer of the local authority acting under the instructions of the medical officer of health shall make such inquiries and take such steps as are necessary or desirable for investigating the source of infection for preventing the spread of infection and for removing conditions favourable to infection:

Provided that nothing in this regulation shall be deemed to authorise the medical officer of health or other officer of a local authority to take any of the steps herein mentioned at any institution other than one belonging to a local authority except with the consent of the managers of that institution.

(2) The duties assigned to a medical officer of health by the Sanitary Officers (Outside London) Regulations, 1935 (a), shall be deemed to extend to and to include all action by a medical officer of health in the execution of these regulations.

5. The form set out in the second schedule to these regulations is hereby prescribed as the form of certificate to be used for the purposes of these regulations.

6. The regulations made on the dates set out in column 1 of the third schedule to these regulations and providing for the notification of the diseases specified in column 2 thereof in the districts mentioned in column 3 thereof are hereby rescinded:

Provided that the rescission of the said regulations shall not affect any right or liability acquired or incurred thereunder.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
Whitehall, S.W.1,
1st November, 1939.

MEASLES AND WHOOPING COUGH.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to forward to the Authority a copy of the Measles and Whooping Cough Regulations, 1939 (b), which have been made as provisional regulations to come into operation forthwith and to apply to England and Wales with the exception of London. Similar regulations have been made to apply to London.

2. The Regulations provide for the notification of all cases of measles and whooping cough by medical practitioners to Medical Officers of Health. The object is to enable the Department to ascertain readily and rapidly the incidence of these diseases as it may be affected by the displacement of child population caused by the recent emergency measures and the changes that may have occurred in the geographical distribution of the infectious diseases.

3. The fee payable to a medical practitioner for each certificate under the Regulations will be one shilling.

4. Returns by Medical Officers of Health of the notifications received under the Regulations should be made to the Registrar-General weekly on the same form and in the same manner as for the notifiable diseases specified in Section 343 of the Public Health Act, 1936.

5. The intention is that the Regulations shall remain in operation only so long as the special conditions created by the present emergency continue and that they shall then be revoked (b). All existing local regulations relating to the notification of measles and whooping cough are being revoked but the Minister will be prepared to consider the question of remaking these local regulations when the present general regulations cease to operate.

6. It is important that every local Authority should cause notice of the Regulations to be given to all medical practitioners resident or practising within their area and that steps should be taken to make the Regulations as widely known as possible.

7. Copies of this Circular and of the Regulations are being sent to the Medical Officer of Health. Additional copies of the Regulations may be purchased from His Majesty's Stationery Office or through any bookseller.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
J. N. BECKETT.

The Clerk to the Authority.

Assistant Secretary.

(a) A similar circular, 1896A., was sent to the L.C.C., the Common Council of the City of London, and the Councils of Metropolitan Boroughs.

(b) The provisional Regulations of October 23, 1939, have been superseded by the Measles and Whooping Cough Regulations, 1940, printed ante, p. 2478. The statement as to revocation at the end of the present emergency presumably applies to the Regulations of 1940.

THE MINISTRY OF HEALTH (RATS AND MICE DESTRUCTION, TRANSFER OF POWERS) ORDER, 1922.

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, the 10th day of August, 1922.

* * * * * *

And whereas it appears to His Majesty that the powers and duties conferred or imposed upon the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries under the Rats and Mice (Destruction) Act, 1919 (a), relate, as respects port sanitary districts and vessels, to matters affecting or incidental to the health of the people, and that it is expedient that the said powers and duties should be transferred to the Minister of Health:

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by and with the advice of his privy council, is pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

* * * * * *

On and after the date of this Order, the powers and duties of the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries under the Rats and Mice (Destruction) Act, 1919, so far as they relate to the supervision of the administration and enforcement of that Act in any port sanitary district or in regard to vessels, shall be transferred to the Minister of Health.

References to the Minister of Health shall be substituted for references to the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries in sections 3 and 7 of the said Act so far as those sections relate to the enforcement of that Act in a port sanitary district or in regard to vessels.

PUERPERAL FEVER AND PUERPERAL PYREXIA.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to forward to you the enclosed copies of the Public Health (Notification of Puerperal Fever and Puerperal Pyrexia) Regulations, 1926, which will come into operation on the 1st October, 1926.

Notification.

Puerperal fever has been notifiable throughout the country since the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, came into force. Experience has shown, however, that for a variety of reasons notification of this disease has been far from complete, with the result that not only are the statistics relating to the disease inaccurate and misleading (particularly as regards incidence and fatality rate), but measures for the prevention and effective treatment of the condition have been seriously hampered. In this connection, reference may be made to pages 58 to 62

Dame Janet Campbell's report on Maternal Mortality (Reports on Public Health and Medical Subjects No. 25) which was issued in 1924.

The main reason for the comparative failure to notify is to be found in the fact that puerperal fever is ill defined and is not a specific disease comparable with scarlet fever or diphtheria. There is frequently, therefore, a genuine doubt as to the correct diagnosis. The term moreover bears a connotation which may be thought to imply some slur upon the patient or medical attendant, and this may possibly act as a deterrent to notification of a doubtful case. In any event, it is certain that many cases are not notified at all and that severe cases are often notified only when it is too late for effective action to be taken; and it is therefore important to modify the existing arrangements for the notification of puerperal fever by requiring the prompt notification of this morbid process as soon as symptoms suggestive of septic infection become manifest, in order that adequate nursing and treatment can be ensured and the spread of infection to others prevented.

The Minister consulted the section of obstetrics and gynæcology of the Royal Society of Medicine in this matter, and a representative committee appointed by the section submitted a report in February, 1925, upon which the enclosed Regulations are based.

The Minister is advised that it will ultimately be desirable to replace the term "puerperal fever" by the term "puerperal pyrexia," the latter being defined in terms which involve no theory as to causation, but without legislation amending the Infectious Disease (Notification) Acts it is not practicable to substitute "puerperal pyrexia" for "puerperal fever" as a disease notifiable under those Acts. The Regulations therefore, while prescribing new forms for the notification of cases of puerperal fever, also require the notification of cases of puerperal pyrexia (as defined in the Regulations) in addition to the present notification of puerperal fever under the Infectious Disease (Notification) Acts, thus placing an obligation upon medical practitioners to notify all cases of pyrexia during the puerperium irrespective of the cause to which the fever may be attributed. It is recognised that this requirement will lead to a great increase in the number of notifications and that many cases so reported will be relatively trivial in degree, but the great importance of securing adequate treatment in the early stages of puerperal infection is regarded as outweighing any objection to the notification of a certain amount of minor illness which gives no cause for anxiety.

Reports received on inquiries recently carried out in regard to the occurrence of puerperal infection in connection with various maternity institutions in different parts of the country, lead the Minister to think that pyrexia during the puerperium is not infrequently looked upon as a comparatively unimportant incident, and that proper precautions to prevent the spread of infection are at times neglected with disastrous results. He desires to take this opportunity of impressing upon all those concerned with administration or treatment in maternity institutions that the presence of infection, however slight in degree, in a patient or in a member of the staff should be considered as liable to give rise to an outbreak of virulent infection and should be dealt with accordingly.

Article 3 of the Regulations requires the local authority to cause notice to be given to all medical practitioners resident or practising within the district of the authority of the duties imposed upon them by the Regulations, and Article 4 requires the authority also to supply practitioners with copies of the notification forms which are prescribed in the Schedules to the Regulations. In this connection, it will be desirable to explain that the effect of Articles 7 and 8 is merely to require medical practitioners when notifying a case of puerperal fever under the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, or under section 55 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, to use the form prescribed in Part I. or Part II., as the case may be, of the First Schedule to the present Regulations, instead of the forms contained in the Schedules to the Public Health (Notification of Infectious Disease) Regulations, 1918. The attention of practitioners should also be specially called to the definition of "puerperal pyrexia" and to the fact that the notification forms enable practitioners, when notifying a case of either puerperal fever or puerperal pyrexia, to indicate whether any assistance in dealing with the case is desired.

It will be observed that Article 13 of the Regulations requires the medical officer of health of any local authority in London, who receives a notification of a case of puerperal pyrexia, to send a copy of the notification, within twelve hours after its receipt, to the metropolitan asylum managers. This requirement already applies to notifications of cases of puerperal fever by virtue of section 55 (4) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, and in this connection I am to draw the attention of metropolitan borough councils to Circular 622 which was issued on the 14th September, 1925, and to suggest that the attention of medical practitioners in London should again be drawn to the special arrangements described in that Circular which have been made by the metropolitan asylum managers for the treatment of cases of puerperal fever.

Facilities for Treatment.

It will be realised that if the more complete notification is to have practical value it should be supplemented by the provision, when necessary, of facilities for assistance in diagnosis and for the treatment of patients who are not able to secure adequate treatment for themselves. These facilities can most readily be provided by the local authorities which are administering schemes under the Maternity and Child Welfare Act, 1918, and it will be observed that provision is made in Article 5 of the Regulations by which these authorities will receive prompt information of cases arising in the districts of sanitary authorities which do not administer such schemes. Maternity and child welfare authorities are empowered, with the sanction of the Minister, to make provision for the special treatment of women suffering from puerperal pyrexia, for consultation with an obstetric specialist, for skilled nursing, or for institutional treatment; and it is important that these authorities and their medical officers of health should do all that is possible to meet the requests of medical practitioners for special assistance for women suffering from puerperal pyrexia which is, or is likely to be, serious in character, in order that maternal mortality and morbidity from this cause may be so far as possible prevented.

If special assistance from the local authority is desired, the medical officer of health should ask the medical practitioner to supply him with further information which might include some or all of the following points:—

1. Conditions in the patient, if any, prior to the labour, which might have been factors in producing the pyrexia, e.g. septic foci, vaginal discharge, carious teeth, etc.

2. The names of all persons who have made internal examinations, including the name of the person who delivered the patient: their occupations and professional qualifications (if any).

3. Day and hour of commencement of labour or miscarriage.

4. The clinical course of labour or miscarriage, mentioning any special means used to assist labour, e.g. obstetrical operations or manual removal of placenta; and any injuries incurred by the patient.

5. The duration of labour and time of termination of labour or miscarriage.

6. The clinical history subsequent to delivery, including the amount and character of lochia; copy of temperature chart, etc.

7. The time of the onset and the probable cause of pyrexia.

8. Any cases of specific fevers, erysipelas, puerperal pyrexia, or other possible forms of sepsis, visited recently by doctor or other attendant, giving dates.

I am, etc.

The Clerk of the Council or The Town Clerk.

13. Where a patient is an inmate of any building, ship, vessel, boat, tent, van, shed, or similar structure belonging to His Majesty the King, nothing in these Regulations shall be construed as requiring a notification to be transmitted to a medical officer of health in respect of that patient in any case not falling within the provisions of para. (ii) If from the result of any such examination, or from bacteriological or protozoological examination of material obtained at any such examination, or from any other evidence which he may deem sufficient for the purpose, the medical officer of health is of opinion that the specified person is a carrier of enteric fever or dysentery infection, the medical officer of health shall report to the local authority who may give a notice in writing to that effect to the responsible manager and to the suspected person with a

CIRCULAR 820.

To Sanitary Authorities, etc.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
24th October, 1927.

PUBLIC HEALTH (INFECTIOUS DISEASES) REGULATIONS, 1927.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to state that he has had under review the Public Health (Pneumonia, Malaria, Dysentery, etc.) Regulations, 1919, which provide for the notification and treatment of certain infectious diseases, and contain provisions for the prevention and treatment of other infectious diseases which are notifiable under the general law. After careful consideration it has been decided to issue new Regulations dealing with these diseases, and to revoke the Regulations of 1919 as from the 1st January next.

Copies of the new Regulations are enclosed, and I am to draw attention to Article 4 which requires the local authority to cause notice to be given forthwith to all medical practitioners resident or practising within the district of the local authority of the duties imposed upon them by the new Regulations, and of the alterations which have been made in the duties which were imposed on them by the Regulations of 1919.

The following is a statement of the principal alterations which are effected by the new Regulations:—

(1) It has been decided that there is no longer any necessity to require cases of trench fever to be notified to the medical officer of health.

(2) As regards malaria and dysentery, Article 5 of the Regulations provides for the notification of every case of those diseases by any medical practitioner who becomes aware that a person upon whom he is in professional attendance is suffering from either disease, except in those cases of malaria for which provision is made in the proviso to that Article. It has not been considered desirable to continue the exemption from notification, contained in Article V. of the Regulations of 1919, of a case which has already been notified within six months of the date on which a medical practitioner first becomes aware of the disease in that case.

(3) The proviso to Article 5 of the new Regulations exempts from notification a case of malaria in which the disease has been induced in an institution for therapeutic purposes. But if the medical practitioner under whose charge the patient has been is of opinion that the patient may be regarded as liable to relapses of malaria, he is required, at least four days before the discharge of the patient from the institution, to notify the case, in the form set out in the Second Schedule to the Regulations, to the medical officer of health of the district in which the patient proposes to reside.

(4) Article 8 provides for the payment by the local authority of a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.* to the notifying practitioner for each notification made under the Regulations if the case occurs in his private practice, and of 1*s.* if the case occurs in his practice as medical officer of any public body or institution.

(5) Article 17 provides that section 308 of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply to any person who sustains any damage by reason of the exercise of any of the powers of the Regulations in relation to any matter in which he is not himself in default. This provision has been included more particularly with reference to the powers conferred in Part III. of the First Schedule to the Regulations.

I am to add that it has not been thought desirable to include in the present Regulations any provision similar to Article XIX. (2) of the Regulations of 1919. I am, however, to draw attention to the provisions contained in section 124 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and section 66 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, as to the removal to hospital of persons suffering from dangerous infectious disease.

Copies of this Circular and of the enclosed Regulations have been forwarded to the medical officer of health, and further copies may be obtained from the addresses shown below.

I am, etc.

NOTE.—The Public Health Act, 1896, provides by subsection (3) of section 1 that if any person wilfully neglects or refuses to obey or carry out, or obstructs the execution of any regulation made under any of the enactments mentioned in that Act, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £100, and, in the case of a continuing offence, to a further penalty not exceeding £50 for every day during which the offence continues.

CIRCULAR 1108.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
April 28th, 1930.

PSITTACOSIS.

PARROTS (PROHIBITION OF IMPORT) REGULATIONS, 1930.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to Circular 1081, dated February 11th, 1930, and the accompanying Memorandum (Memo. 151/Med.) on the subject of Psittacosis.

In view of the fact that a considerable number of cases of this disease have occurred in England and Wales during the last two months, the Minister is satisfied that, for the protection of the public health, it is necessary to prohibit for the present the importation into this country of parrots (including in this term all birds of the parrot species). With this object Regulations have been made under Section 130 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and a copy of the Regulations is enclosed herewith.

It will be observed that the Regulations will take effect on the 20th May next, and that their enforcement, subject to the exercise of certain functions by Officers of Customs and Excise, will rest with the Sanitary Authority and their Officers.

Article 4 of the Regulations prohibits the importation of parrots into England and Wales subject to the exceptions specified. In cases where the parrots are stated to be required for purposes of medical or veterinary research, the Medical Officer of Health should satisfy himself by inquiry of the importer that this is, in fact, the case, and if so satisfied should allow the parrots to proceed to their destination. In the event of any persons being authorised, under the latter part of the proviso to Article 4, to import parrots otherwise than for sale, the Authority or Authorities concerned will be duly informed.

Under Article 6 of the Regulations, the Officer of Customs and Excise and the Medical Officer of Health are required to serve notices prohibiting the removal of parrots from the place specified in the notice. This place will normally be the ship, but in cases where the parrot has been landed before the notice has been served the place specified may be either the ship, if the parrot is to be exported, or some other place which should be arranged between the Medical Officer of Health and the Officer of Customs and Excise, having regard to local circumstances.

It will be observed that under the proviso to Article 6 (2) if the parrot is diseased, or is associated with cases of human illness, the Medical Officer of Health may forthwith cause the bird to be destroyed or otherwise disposed of to his satisfaction. This latter alternative is intended to authorise the Medical Officer of Health in suitable cases to forward the bird to the Laboratory of the Ministry as suggested in Memo. 151/Med. or elsewhere for any purpose connected with the investigation of the disease.

I am to add that the forms of notice to be given by the Medical Officer of Health under Article 6 (2) of the Regulations are being printed, and supplies will be forwarded to you under separate cover.

A copy of this Circular is being sent to the Medical Officer of Health.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
A. B. MACLACHLAN,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Authority.

3. The Public Health (Tuberculosis) Regulations, 1912, the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Regulations, 1921, and the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Regulations, 1924, are hereby rescinded.

Supply of forms of notification.

4. For the purposes of these regulations, every local authority shall provide and maintain a sufficient supply of printed copies of the forms set out in the First Schedule to these regulations, and shall from time to time when application is made to them, furnish printed copies of those forms to the medical officers of every poor law institution and sanatorium situate within the district.

Notification by medical practitioners.

5. Subject to the provisions of these regulations, every medical practitioner called in to visit any person (whether at an institution or otherwise) and every school medical inspector inspecting children attending public elementary schools, shall, within forty-eight hours after first becoming aware that such person or one of such children is suffering from tuberculosis, make and sign a notification of the case in the form set forth in Schedule A or Schedule B, as the case may be, to the Public Health (Notification of Infectious Diseases) Regulations, 1918, and shall transmit the notification to the medical officer of health of the district within which the place of residence of the person is situate at the date of notification:

Provided further that if a notification is required in pursuance of this article in respect of an in-patient at an institution, the notification shall be sent to the medical officer of health of the district in which the usual place of residence of the patient is situate.

6. The medical officer of a poor law institution or of a sanatorium, shall, as soon as practicable after the end of each week—

(a) make and sign a notification in the Form I set forth in the First Schedule to these regulations of all persons previously notified as suffering from tuberculosis and admitted during the week, and transmit the notification to the medical officer of health of the district within which the places of residence of the persons notified are situate; and

(b) make and sign a notification in the Form II set forth in the First Schedule to these regulations of all persons notified as suffering from tuberculosis and discharged during the week, other than cases transferred to a poor law institution or a sanatorium, and transmit the notification to the medical officer of health of the district within which the places of destination of the persons notified are situate.

When the places of residence, or the places of destination, as the case may be, of the persons to be notified are situate in more than one district a separate notification shall be transmitted to the medical officer of health of each district.

This Article shall not apply to the medical officer of a poor law institution or of a sanatorium which is under the control of the council of a county borough except in respect of any person whose place of residence or whose place of destination, as the case may be, is situate outside the county borough.

Diagnosis of tuberculosis.

7. For the purposes of these regulations a medical practitioner shall be deemed to have become aware that a person is suffering from tuberculosis when he has arrived at this conclusion from evidence other than that derived solely from tuberculin tests applied to that person.

Transmission of notifications.

8. A notification to be transmitted to a medical officer of health in pursuance of these regulations shall be enclosed in a sealed envelope addressed to that officer, and may be transmitted by being delivered to him, or by being delivered at his office or residence, or may be sent by prepaid letter post addressed to him at his office or at his residence:

Provided that the requirement herein contained, that a notification shall be enclosed in a sealed envelope, shall be deemed to be complied with if the notification is folded and sealed in such a manner that during its transmission the particulars of the notification cannot be observed.

Remuneration of medical practitioners.

9.—(1) Each medical practitioner acting in any of the capacities mentioned in column 1 of the Second Schedule to these regulations shall be entitled to receive such fees (if any) for each notification duly made, signed and transmitted by him under articles 5 & 6 of these regulations as are specified in columns 2 & 3 of the said schedule opposite to the description of the capacity in which he acts.

(2) As soon as practicable after the end of the quarter during which the notification was sent the local authority of the district within which the place of residence or place of destination of the person notified is situate shall pay the fee for the same, and a medical practitioner shall not be required for that purpose to submit an account of fees claimed by him under these regulations.

(3) The said fees shall in each case be deemed to cover all expenses, including the cost of transmission.

Duties of medical officers of health.

10.—(1) Any medical officer of health receiving a notification which has been erroneously addressed to him by a medical practitioner shall forthwith transmit the notification to the medical officer of health to whom the notification ought, in pursuance of these regulations, to have been addressed, and shall at the same time inform the medical practitioner that he has done so, and shall give to him the name and address of the medical officer of health to whom the notification has been sent.

(2) Every medical officer of health shall cause to be entered in a register to be kept by him for that purpose all the particulars contained in every notification received by him under these regulations and relating to a person whose place of residence or place of destination is situate within the district for which he is medical officer of health. He shall also enter in the register particulars of any person previously notified as suffering from tuberculosis who removes into the district of which he is medical officer of health and of whose removal to that district he is informed by the medical officer of health of another district, who shall supply him with the necessary particulars for the purpose; and of any person who normally resided in the district and whose death from tuberculosis has come to his knowledge, but who has not been notified to him as suffering from tuberculosis.

(3) The said register shall be kept in the custody of the medical officer of health and shall not be open to inspection by any person other than a person specially authorised by resolution of the local authority, the medical officer of health of the administrative county within which the district is situate, the medical officer of a tuberculosis dispensary which serves any area within which the district is situate, a school medical inspector for any area within which the district is situate, or an officer of any government department authorised in that respect by that department.

(4) Every notification and every document relating to a person notified under these regulations shall be regarded by the medical officer of health, and by every person who has access thereto, as confidential.

(5) Every medical officer of health shall from time to time, but not less frequently than once in every quarter, revise the register kept by him by removing from the register—

(i) the entries therein relating to notifications which have been withdrawn by or with the consent of the notifying medical practitioner on the ground that the original notification was incorrectly made;

(ii) the entries relating to persons who are certified by the medical practitioner in attendance to have recovered; and

(iii) the entries relating to persons who to his knowledge have died, have ceased to reside permanently in the district or who, after adequate search, cannot be found resident in the district.

(6) Every medical officer of health, on becoming aware that a person who has been resident in his district and who is suffering from tuberculosis has permanently changed his place of residence into some other district, shall forthwith notify the medical officer of health of that district of the case and of all relevant particulars thereof which are contained in the register of notifications kept by him.

(7) The medical officer of health shall, as soon as practicable after the end of each week, send to the medical officer of health of the administrative county within which the district is situate a statement of every notification received by him during the week in pursuance of these regulations and relating to a person whose place of residence is situate within the district of which he is medical officer of health. The statement shall show on which form the notification was made and shall contain the information in regard to each person which was given in the notification.

(8) Every medical officer of health shall furnish the medical officer of health of the administrative county within which his district is situate, as soon as practicable after the end of each quarter, with a statement, compiled from the register of notifications kept by him, showing—

(a) The number of cases of tuberculosis on his register at the commencement of the quarter;

(b) The number of cases notified to him under these regulations for the first time during the quarter;

(c) The number of cases removed from the register in a preceding quarter under paragraph (e) of this article which have been restored to the register during the quarter (giving the name and address of each such case and the reason for the restoration);

(d) The number of cases added to the register during the quarter which have been brought to his notice otherwise than by notification under these regulations;

(e) The number of cases removed from the register during the quarter (giving the name and address of each such case, and the reason for such removal); and,

(f) The number of cases remaining on the register at the end of the quarter.

Separate figures shall be given in each case for males and females, and for pulmonary and non-pulmonary cases.

(9) Any expenses incurred by a medical officer of health in carrying out the duties imposed upon him by this Article shall be defrayed by the local authority of the district of which he is medical officer of health.

(10) For the purposes of this Article a person shall be deemed to have recovered from tuberculosis when neither symptoms, signs nor other evidence of existing tuberculosis disease have been present for a period of five years in the case of a person who has suffered from pulmonary tuberculosis, or for a period of three years in the case of a person who has suffered from non-pulmonary tuberculosis.

11.—(1) Upon the receipt of a notification under these regulations the medical officer of health, or an officer of the local authority acting under the instructions of the medical officer of health, shall make such enquiries and take such steps as are necessary or desirable for investigating the source of infection, for preventing the spread of infection, and for removing conditions favourable to infection:

Provided that nothing in this paragraph contained shall be deemed to authorise a medical officer of health or other officer to take any of the steps herein mentioned at any institution other than one belonging to the local authority, except with the consent of the managers of that institution.

(2) The duties assigned to the medical officer of health by the Sanitary Officers Order, 1926, shall be deemed to extend to and to include all action by a medical officer of health in the execution of these regulations.

Special powers and duties of local authorities.

12. For the purposes of these regulations—

(1) A local authority on the advice of their medical officer of health may supply all such medical or other assistance, and all such facilities and articles as may reasonably be required for the detection of tuberculosis, for preventing the spread of infection and for removing conditions favourable to infection, and for that purpose may appoint such officers, do such acts and make such arrangements as may be necessary:

Provided that nothing in this paragraph contained shall be deemed to authorise a local authority to take any of the measures herein mentioned at any institution other than one belonging to the local authority.

(2) A local authority, on the advice of their medical officer of health, may provide and publish or distribute suitable summaries of information and instruction respecting tuberculosis, and the precautions to be taken against the spread of infection from that disease.

Notification not required in certain cases.

13.—(1) Nothing in these regulations shall apply to or impose any duty or obligation upon any medical practitioner acting in his capacity as—

(b) medical examiner of candidates for some office or appointment;

(c) medical examiner on behalf of an insurance company of a person proposing to insure his life at the risk of that company;

(d) medical examiner of the passengers and crew of an emigrant ship; or

(e) certifying or appointed surgeon under the Factory and Workshop Acts, 1901 to 1920.

(2) Nothing in these regulations shall be construed as requiring a notification to be transmitted to a medical officer of health under these regulations in respect of an inmate of any building, ship, vessel, boat, tent, van, shed, or similar structure, belonging to His Majesty the King, whose case falls within the provisions of paragraph (b) of section 5 of the Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916 (as made permanent by the Expiring Laws Act, 1925, and as applied to the Royal Air Force by the Air Force (Application of Enactments) (No. 2) Order, 1918).

14. Nothing in these regulations shall have effect so as to apply, or so as to authorise or require a medical officer of health or a local authority, or any other person or authority, directly or indirectly, to put in force with respect to any person in relation to whom a notification in pursuance of these regulations has been transmitted to a medical officer of health any enactment which renders the person, or anyone in charge of the person, or any other person, liable to a penalty, or subjects the person to any restriction, prohibition, or disability affecting himself, or his employment, occupation or means of livelihood, on the ground of his suffering from tuberculosis: Provided that nothing in this Article contained shall be deemed to restrict the exercise by a local authority of their powers under the Public Health (Prevention of Tuberculosis) Regulations, 1925.

Modifications consequent upon Local Acts.

15. Nothing in these regulations shall have effect in derogation of any power conferred, or of any duty or obligation imposed with respect to tuberculosis by a local act, and these regulations shall not apply to a district in which any such local act as aforesaid is in force except so far as they impose duties and obligations or confer powers which are not imposed or conferred by the local act and which are not inconsistent with any duties, obligations, or powers which are imposed or conferred by the local act. Such modification as may be necessary to give effect to the intention of this article shall be deemed to have been made in these regulations in relation to any such district as aforesaid.

CIRCULAR 1107.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1,
July 16th, 1930.

PUBLIC HEALTH (TUBERCULOSIS) REGULATIONS.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose for the information of the Council a copy of the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Regulations, 1930, consolidating and amending the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Regulations of 1912, 1921 and 1924. The new Regulations will come into operation on the January 1st, 1931.

The amendments made by these Regulations in the existing provisions are as follow:—

(1) Certain of the definitions have been altered to correspond with changes introduced by the Local Government Act, 1929.

(2) Experience has shown that the special provisions relating to the notification of tuberculosis by School Medical Inspectors, which are embodied in Article VI of the Regulations of 1912, have been comparatively infrequently used. The new Regulations accordingly provide that notifications by School Medical Inspectors shall be made upon the form prescribed for other primary notifications.

(3) The wording of the first proviso to Article V of the Regulations of 1912 has been amended with a view to making it clear that previous notification in another sanitary district of the same county does not relieve a medical practitioner from the duty of notifying. It should be noted that the Regulation requires that the case shall be notified unless the practitioner has reasonable grounds for believing that it has already been notified to the Medical Officer of Health of the same sanitary district.

(4) The Regulations embody the provisions of the Public Health (Notification of Infectious Disease) Regulations, 1918, which prescribed a form of notification to be used in place of Form A scheduled to the Regulations of 1912.

(5) The forms of notification required in certain cases from medical officers of poor law institutions and sanatoria to indicate the movements of persons already notified have been amended to make it clear that the responsibility for the original diagnosis in such cases does not rest upon the Medical Officer of the institution.

The requirements of Article 6 do not apply to the Medical Officer of a poor law institution or sanatorium under the control of a County Borough Council, except in respect of patients admitted from, or discharged to, areas outside the County Borough.

(6) The requirement that notifications shall be transmitted in a sealed envelope has been amended in detail.

(7) Further provisions have been inserted to secure the effective revision of the Register of Notifications kept by the Medical Officer of Health. The substance of these provisions was embodied in Circular 549 of the December 22nd, 1924. It should be noted that the word "recovered" in Article 10 (5) (ii.) of the Regulations has the same meaning as the word "cured" in paragraph II, 1 of Circular 549. The change in terminology represents an attempt to meet the view expressed by some medical officers that so definite a word as "cured" should not be given the arbitary meaning attached to it in that Circular.

(8) The provisions as to the information to be furnished to a County Medical Officer of Health have been slightly amplified.

(9) The relevant provisions of the Sanitary Officers Order, 1926, have been applied to action taken by a Medical Officer of Health under these Regulations.

(10) A paragraph has been added to make it clear that notification under these Regulations is not required in cases where notification is required by Section 5 (b) of the Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916.

I am to suggest that the Local Authority should bring to the notice of all medical practitioners resident or practising within their district the alterations mentioned in paragraphs (2), (3), (6) and (10) above.

NOTIFICATION REGISTER.

It should be noted that the form of the Register which the Medical Officer of Health is by Article 10 of these Regulations required to keep is not prescribed. It is not essential that this Register should take the form of a book, and the Minister is advised that experience has shown that the Notification Register should preferably be kept on a card system. Tuberculosis being a chronic disease, the Notification Register should not be merely a record of the fact that certain persons have on stated dates been found to be suffering from the disease. It should also be, as far as practicable, a record of the persons now suffering from the disease; and it is therefore important that the provisions of these Regulations designed to keep the Register up to date should be carefully observed.

FUNCTIONS OF SANITARY AUTHORITIES UNDER THE REGULATIONS.

Evidence from various sources suggests that, in a number of districts, the view is held that all questions connected with tuberculosis are primarily a matter for the County Council and that the local sanitary authorities have no important duties in regard to the control of this disease. The Minister desires to emphasise that, while the responsibility for the conduct of schemes for the institutional treatment of tuberculosis rests with the Councils of Counties and County Boroughs, this does not affect the functions of District Councils in connection with the prevention of infection.

The duties and powers of sanitary authorities in connection with tuberculosis are set out in Articles 11 and 12 of the accompanying Regulations, and if the control of tuberculosis is to be effective, it is essential that these duties and powers should be exercised. Article 11 imposes on the District Medical Officer of Health a definite duty to take such steps as are necessary or desirable for investigating the source of infection, for preventing the spread of infection, and for removing conditions favourable to infection. It is important that the District Medical Officer of Health in the discharge of this duty should co-operate with the Tuberculosis Officer of the County Council to secure the examination of contacts and in ensuring that so far as practicable persons suffering from tuberculosis take advantage of the facilities for treatment provided by the County Council.

District Medical Officers of Health have also duties in connection with the notification of tuberculosis. Although there has in recent years been a considerable increase in the efficiency of notification, the reports of Medical Officers of Health indicate that in some areas a considerable proportion of cases are not notified before death and that a still larger proportion are only notified during the last six months of life.

The information before the Minister does not suggest that any serious proportion of the unnotified cases of tuberculosis can be ascribed to deliberate neglect on the part of medical practitioners by whom the disease has been diagnosed. The two chief causes of delayed notification appear to be:—

(1) that the disease is not recognised by the practitioner in attendance; and

(2) that the tuberculous person does not consult a practitioner until the disease is already far advanced.

As regards the first of these causes, although in recent years general practitioners have shown an increased readiness to secure the examination of their patients by the Tuberculosis Officer, the information available suggests that there are still many cases in which the practitioner continues to treat doubtful cases for prolonged periods without recourse to this specialist service. Medical Officers of Health should, therefore, use any opportunity which arises to remind general practitioners of the special facilities for diagnosis provided at the dispensaries of the County or County Borough Council.

The delay in notification which arises from inaction on the part of the patient can only be dealt with by further development of the educational side of anti-tuberculosis work. Article 12 of the accompanying Regulations embodies the provisions of Article 13 of the Regulations of 1912, by which Local Sanitary Authorities are authorised to "provide and publish or distribute suitable summaries of information and instruction respecting tuberculosis and the precautions to be taken against the spread of infection from that disease." Action has been taken under these powers in some areas, but on the whole it appears to the Minister that there has been insufficient organised effort to set before the public simple statements on tuberculosis and the public facilities available for its diagnosis and treatment.

In particular it is suggested that a marked improvement in notification will follow when the general public realise that a tuberculous patient has the best prospect of recovery from the disease when treatment begins in the earliest stage, and consequently appreciate the vital importance of seeking skilled advice at the earliest possible moment if there is the slightest suspicion that the lungs may be affected.

The Minister would be glad if all local authorities would give careful consideration to the questions indicated in the preceding paragraphs.

Your obedient Servant,
A. B. MACLACHLAN,
Assistant Secretary.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, LONDON, S.W.1,
September 30th, 1930.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1929.

SURVEY AND SCHEME UNDER SECTION 63 FOR THE PROVISION OF HOSPITAL ACCOMMODATION FOR INFECTIOUS DISEASE.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to transmit for the information of the County Council the enclosed copy of a memorandum as to the survey to be undertaken and the preparation of a scheme for the provision of adequate hospital accommodation for the treatment of infectious disease under Section 63 of the Local Government Act, 1929.

2. The Minister is aware that action in this matter has already been taken or is in contemplation in a number of counties. Where a scheme has not already been submitted he trusts that the memorandum enclosed will be found to be useful in the preparation of schemes, and he desires me to commend the matter to the early attention of County Councils. It is one of very considerable importance on public health grounds, and the Minister earnestly hopes that through the systematic handling of it on a county basis by the County Council in partnership with other authorities concerned, the gaps now existing in institutional provision may be filled up and adequate arrangements be secured for the country as a whole.

3. When the County Council have formulated a scheme copies should be printed and circulated to all the authorities affected, and three copies should be forwarded to the Minister, together with:—

(a) A copy of the resolution of the Council authorising application to be made for the Minister's approval.

(b) A copy of the report of the County Medical Officer of Health.

(c) A statement in the form set out in Appendix A to the Memorandum in respect of each hospital which it is proposed should continue to be used for the reception of patients suffering from smallpox or other infectious disease. Copies of the form may be obtained on application to the Department.

(d) A map of the county showing by distinctive colour the situation of the existing hospitals which it is proposed to continue to use and the approximate position of any new hospitals to be provided; and

(e) A statement of the area and population to be served by each hospital.

4. It is hoped that it will be possible for the County Council to complete the survey and the necessary consultations not later than June 30th, 1931, and to submit the complete scheme for the Minister's approval by September 30th, 1931.

5. The Minister would be glad to arrange if desired for officers of the Department to confer with representatives of the County Council in regard to any difficulties which may arise in the course of preparation of the scheme.

6. A copy of this circular and of the enclosure have been sent to the Medical Officer of Health.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,

S. R. & O., 1934, No. 674.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (TREATMENT OF INFECTIOUS DISEASE) REGULATIONS, 1934, DATED JUNE 25TH, 1934, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 130 OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1875 (38 & 39 VICT. C. 55), AND SECTION 2 OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH (PREVENTION AND TREATMENT OF DISEASE) ACT, 1913 (3 & 4 GEO. 5, C. 23).

Whereas by Section 130 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the Minister of Health is empowered to make such regulations as he thinks fit with a view to the treatment of persons affected with infectious disease and to the prevention of the spread of such disease;

And whereas by Section 131 of the said Act the councils of boroughs and of urban and rural districts are empowered to provide for the use of the inhabitants of their districts hospitals or temporary places for the reception of the sick;

And whereas similar powers with respect to the provision of places for the reception of the sick are conferred on the London County Council by Section 14 of the Local Government Act, 1929;

And whereas by Section 2 of the Public Health (Prevention and Treatment of Disease) Act, 1913, the Minister of Health is empowered to declare that one of the authorities to execute and enforce regulations made under Section 130 of the Public Health Act, 1875, with a view to the treatment of persons affected with infectious disease, shall be the Council of a County but it is provided by that Section that except in case of emergency the Minister shall not require the Council of a County to execute and enforce any such regulations without the consent of such Council;

And whereas with a view to the treatment of persons affected with infectious disease and the prevention of such disease it is expedient that the powers and duties of the London County Council, the councils of boroughs and urban and rural districts and Joint Hospital Boards constituted under the Public Health Act, 1875, with respect to the provision of hospitals or temporary places for the reception of the sick should extend not only to the inhabitants of their districts but also to such persons as are for the time being therein;

And whereas the London County Council have consented to the making of these regulations so far as they require that Council to execute and enforce the same:

Now therefore the Minister of Health in the exercise of the powers conferred on him by Section 130 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), and Section 2 of the Public Health (Prevention and Treatment of Disease) Act, 1913 (a), and of every other power enabling him in that behalf hereby makes the following regulations:—

(a) Repealed by P. H. A., 1936; see now s. 143 thereof, ante, p. 405.

1. These regulations may be cited as the Public Health (Treatment of Infectious Disease) Regulations, 1934, and shall come into operation on the first day of July, 1934.

DISEASES AND HOSPITALS

2. The London County Council, the council of every borough or urban or rural district, and every Joint Hospital Board constituted under the Public Health Act, 1875, and having the powers of Section 131 of that Act (a), shall have the same powers and duties in relation to the provision of hospitals or temporary places for the use of persons who are for the time being within their county, borough or district, as the case may be, and are suffering from infectious disease, as they have for the use of the inhabitants of that county, borough or district.

(a) 13 Halsbury's Statutes 675. Repealed by P. H. A., 1936, and replaced by s. 181 thereof, ante, p. 446.

CIRCULAR 1418.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1,
June 29th, 1934.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose for the information of the Authority a copy of the Public Health (Treatment of Infectious Disease) Regulations, 1934, which will come into operation on July 1st, 1934.

2. The Minister is advised that, at present, there is no legal obligation on a local authority which has provided a hospital for the treatment of infectious disease in pursuance of section 131 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to receive into that hospital a person suffering from infectious disease who is not an inhabitant of the district. He is also advised that there is no obligation on the authority to provide treatment for infectious disease, or to meet the cost of treatment otherwise provided, for an inhabitant of their district who is temporarily outside the district. There is, therefore, at present, no general legal provision which definitely places the responsibility for the treatment of a person, who is found to be suffering from infectious disease while outside the district of which he is an inhabitant, either on the authority of the district in which the disease is discovered or on that of the district of which he is an inhabitant.

3. The primary public purpose of the hospital treatment of infectious disease is to prevent the spread of the disease; and as the population exposed to risk is that of the district in which the disease is discovered, it is generally recognised that the proper course is for the authority of that district, as the body responsible for preventing the spread of disease therein, to provide the necessary treatment.

4. The Minister's attention has however recently been drawn to certain cases in which an authority disclaimed responsibility for the treatment of persons temporarily living in their district and sent such persons back to their homes although it was not denied that hospital treatment was required. It is clear that such a course is detrimental to the public health, inasmuch as it delays the provision of treatment and involves risk of the spread of the disease.

5. The Minister has accordingly decided to make regulations providing that an authority shall have the same powers and duties in relation to the provision of hospitals or temporary places for the use of persons who are for the time being within their district and are suffering from infectious disease as they have in respect of the inhabitants of their district.

6. The Regulations will not, of course, affect the right of an authority to decide, on the advice of their Medical Officer, what cases of infectious disease should be treated in hospital and what cases can satisfactorily be treated otherwise. Their object is to secure that the authority's decision should be based on medical considerations alone, with a view to the most effective control of disease and the best use of the available accommodation.

7. The Regulations will not apply to Hospital Committees established under the Isolation Hospitals Acts, 1893 and 1901, since the powers conferred by those Acts make no distinction between persons who are inhabitants of the Hospital District and persons who are temporarily resident in the District.

8. A copy of this Circular and a copy of the Regulations are being sent to the Medical Officer of Health of the Authority.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
A. B. MACLACHLAN.
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Authority.

CIRCULAR 1586.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1,

ACUTE POLIOMYELITIS.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to Circular 1298 of December 15th, 1932, and to say that the Memorandum on acute poliomyelitis, which was forwarded with that Circular in continuation of previous pronouncements on the subject, has recently been under revision in the light of present-day knowledge.

I am to forward for the information of the Authority the accompanying copies of the revised Memorandum (Memo. 166/Med. (Revised)) and to draw attention in particular to the section headed "Action by Medical Officer of Health", relating to the administrative measures which are desirable on the occurrence of cases, or suspected cases, of poliomyelitis. A copy of this Circular and of the Memorandum are being forwarded to all Medical Officers of Health.

The Memorandum has been placed on sale, and additional copies may be obtained, price 2*d.*, from His Majesty's Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown thereon, or through any bookseller.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
A. B. MACLACHLAN,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Authority.

MEMO. 166/MED.

(Revised).

MINISTRY OF HEALTH.

ACUTE POLIOMYELITIS.

Acute poliomyelitis (including polio-encephalitis and polio-encephalo-myelitis) is an infectious disease of the central nervous system. It has long been known under the name of "infantile paralysis" but the term is misleading, for the disease may occur in adults, though not so frequently as in children, and paralysis does not always supervene. Mild cases are not uncommon and failure to detect them masks to some extent the epidemic nature of the disease.

Although poliomyelitis is compulsorily notifiable, its incidence is largely conjectural inasmuch as it is difficult of recognition until paralysis has occurred, and the notification figures represent for the most part a residue of paralytic cases. Within the last ten years the annual number of notifications has varied from 1,397 in 1926 to 394 in 1931, rising to 700 in 1935.

Historical Note.

The first medical description of poliomyelitis appears to have been given by an English practitioner, Michael Underwood, in 1784, and in 1835 Badham described the cerebral symptoms of the disease. Jacob Heine in 1840 wrote an instructive monograph, and some 30 years later Medin of Stockholm drew attention to the fact that the disease occurred occasionally in epidemic form. The term "Heine-Medin Disease" is commonly used in Germany and Scandinavia as a synonym for acute poliomyelitis. In recent years epidemics have been carefully studied in Europe, Canada, the United States and Australia.

Pathology.

The studies of Flexner and Lewis, Leiner and von Weisner, Landsteiner and Levaditi and others have shown that the disease is due to a virus which passes through the finest filter, and the filtrate is pathogenic to the monkey. The presence of this virus has been demonstrated in the naso-pharynx of patients suffering from poliomyelitis and also of persons who give no definite history of having had the disease and who may, or may not, have been in known contact with it.

For a number of years poliomyelitis has been regarded as an acute infectious fever which may or may not attack the nervous system after the virus has been implanted in the nasal mucosa. More recent experiments, notably by Hurst and Fairbrother, indicate that the virus can reach the nervous system by the axis cylinders of the olfactory nerve, enter the olfactory bulbs and be spread thence within the nervous system by axonal channels. It has a special affinity for the nerve cells of the cervical and lumbar enlargements of the cord. According to this view, the primary nervous lesion is of the nerve cell and not of the interstitial tissue, and the cerebro-spinal fluid is held to play no essential part in the carriage of the virus. It is still a subject of hesitancy to some authorities whether these laboratory researches are so applicable to the disease in man as to displace completely the view that poliomyelitis is a general infection of the system with secondary nervous involvement. This older conception of the disease harmonises in many respects with its clinical and epidemiological behaviour. The characteristic lesion is degeneration of the motor cells of the anterior horns of the spinal cord; histologically this is accompanied by hyperæmia and exudation of lymphocytes round the blood vessels. Occasionally, the cord is so much involved as to give rise to a transverse myelitis. The brain may be affected (polio-encephalitis and polio-encephalo-myelitis) and the meninges implicated. Visceral lesions may be present, such as hyperplasia of the tonsils, spleen and lymphatic glands, together with cloudy swelling of the kidneys and liver.

Epidemiology.

Prevalence.—Poliomyelitis is a disease of the temperate zones; it has a well-marked seasonal prevalence in the autumnal part of the year, but sporadic cases and small outbreaks have been recorded in the winter months.

Transmission.—The pathological findings indicate that, presumably, infection may be spread directly not only by patients but by persons apparently healthy. There is not sufficient reason to believe that the virus of poliomyelitis is conveyed to man by foodstuffs or insects, or that the disease is associated with insanitary conditions.

Natural Immunity.—Individual natural immunity is high in the first six months of life; thereafter it falls quickly but rises in the later years of childhood. It has been suggested that the virus is widely spread and that the comparative freedom of adults from attack is due to acquired immunity, as substances capable of neutralising the virus, and therefore presumably developed in response to the virus as antigen, have been demonstrated in the blood of persons who have been exposed to infection but who have had few or no manifestations of the disease.

Age and Sex.—The largest proportion of cases occurs between the ages of 1 and 5 years, with the highest incidence in the second year of life. Males are affected rather more frequently than females.

Mortality.—The case fatality varies in different epidemics from about 10 per cent. to 25 per cent., though a total fatality as low as 7·1 per cent. and as high as 42·3 per cent. has been recorded. The risk of death is greater at ages above 10 years.

Incubation period.—Clinical observation suggest an incumbation period of from 2 to 10 days, and although shorter and much longer periods have been recorded, the average period may be regarded as from 3 to 4 days.

Clinical Character.

(1) Initial stage.—This stage is variable in duration; it may last only a few hours and be unrecognised, or on the other hand it may extend to 5 or even 10 days. The initial symptoms may be those commonly associated with the pre-eruptive period of the exanthemata-headache, pyrexia (102°–103°), malaise, sore throat, tonsillitis, coryza, nasal discharge and irritability of temper. Epistaxis may occur and, in some epidemics, vomiting and diarrhœa are leading symptoms. There is no typical skin eruption; herpes and herpes zoster have been noted; erythematous or morbilliform rashes may occur, and cases have been erroneously diagnosed as scarlet fever or measles. The condition may clear rapidly and complete recovery ensue. On the other hand, the initial stage more commonly merges into a second phase. Exceptionally there may be a remission period of some hours, or even days, between these phases in which the temperature falls to normal, the patient appears to have recovered and perhaps is allowed to go about on the assumption that he has had a slight febrile ailment. But eventually there comes a recrudescence of temperature and an accentuation of the disease.

(2) The preparalytic stage is associated with the appearance of characteristic changes in the cerebro-spinal fluid. It varies in intensity and duration, being at times so slight and transient as to be unnoticeable, and at others of great severity. On the whole its duration is short and it ends either in speedy recovery or passes into the paralytic stage within a few hours. The chief signs are continuation (or renewal) of the pyrexia and headache, onset of pains in the back and limbs with tenderness over the upper dorsal vertebræ, stiffness of the neck and spine with resistance to passive flexion, muscular twitchings (often indicating the site of future paralysis), hyperæsthesia, retention of urine, drowsiness, and sometimes deep stupor, occasionally even opisthotonos. Diminution or disappearance of the superficial or some of the deep tendon reflexes may be the first indication of the nature of the case. Kernig's sign is frequently present.

(3) Paralytic stage.—Once the virus is established in the central nervous system paralytic phenomena may appear, their character being dependent on the localisation and intensity of the lesions.

(a) Poliomyelitic form.—In this form the lesions involve the lower motor neurons giving rise to flaccid paralysis affecting one or two muscles, or a group of muscles, or one or more limbs. The paralysis comes on as a rule three or four days after the onset of illness, but sometimes it may be the first sign of the disease detected. A child may go to bed apparently well and awake with one or more of its limbs paralysed. Even in epidemic periods it is usually only when paralysis has supervened that the diagnosis of poliomyelitis is made.

(b) Polio-encephalitic form.—In this form the lesion chiefly or solely involves the upper motor neurons. In some cases both brain and cord are involved (polio-encephalo-myelitis). The nervous symptoms are of varying degrees of severity ranging from temporary paresis, or even nystagmus only, to convulsions followed by by hemianopia, hemiplegia or diplegia. Recovery or death may take place within a few hours or the case may be protracted. Cerebral cases usually occur at ages over five years. Below five years of age the spinal form of the malady predominates.

After-Effects.

In the poliomyelitic form the paralysis may persist and the patient is crippled to a degree corresponding with the extent of the damage to the spinal cord. In the encephalitic form, though the risk of fatality is greater, there are commonly no after-effects on recovery.

Diagnosis.

The initial symptoms of poliomyelitis are indistinguishable from those of the onset of other infectious diseases, but it must be remembered that in poliomyelitis definite signs of involvement of the central nervous system may appear rapidly, and, if there be any cause for suspicion, the patient should be kept under close medical supervision so that the physician may detect the earliest signs of the disease. The following signs are considered to be confirmatory of a provisional diagnosis of poliomyelitis in the preparalytic stage :—

Spinal Sign.—The patient is disinclined to bend the head forward on account of pain experienced in doing so, and there is resistance to passive anterior flexion of the neck. When the patient is raised by the shoulders the head falls backwards and the patient cannot easily bring it forward again. A simple way of eliciting the spinal sign is to ask the patient to kiss his knees.

Amoss' Sign (modification of the spinal sign) is a useful test in older children. When placed in the sitting posture and asked to fold his arms the child may attempt to do so but quickly reverts to the position in which part of the body weight is borne by the arms, which thus make two legs of a tripod, the spine being the third.

When stiffness of the spine or resistance of the neck to passive flexion supervene, and they are associated with headache and fever, it may be considered that a provisional diagnosis of poliomyelitis in the preparalytic stage is sufficiently justified, and consequently examination of the cerebro-spinal fluid should be made.

As regards the polio-encephalitic form, the implication of the brain, medulla, meninges or spinal nerves may give rise to varying symptoms (for example, in bulbar paralysis speech disturbances are noted). There may be confusion in the differential diagnosis between polio-encephalitis and cerebro-spinal meningitis, encephalitis lethargica, tuberculous meningitis or septic meningitis. The previous history of the patient and the presence of similar cases in the vicinity, together with the examination of the cerebro-spinal fluid, will assist in the determination of the diagnosis.

Examination of the Cerebro-Spinal Fluid.

In the initial stage the cerebro-spinal fluid is normal with a cell count of from 0–10 per c.mm. In the preparalytic stage the fluid is usually under moderately increased pressure (aggravated by anæsthesia) and appears to be clear, though when viewed by transmitted light it presents a faint haziness or "ground glass" appearance. There is an increase in the number of cells (mononuclear and polymorphonuclear), the count usually being between 50 and 250 per c.mm. but occasionally it may be as high as 700 to 800, or as low as 20. The second characteristic is that the ratio of lymphocytes to polymorphonuclear cells (neutrophils) increases rapidly as paralysis approaches. There is also an increase of globulin and the chlorides are not reduced (whereas in tuberculous meningitis chlorides are reduced).

The following table may prove to be of value in differentiating the cerebro-spinal fluid of poliomyelitis from the normal, and from that of other nervous diseases with which poliomyelitis may be confused :—

Treatment.

A. General Considerations.

In the early stages of poliomyelitis, treatment should be directed towards a limitation of the extent to which the central nervous system may become involved, and therefore the patient should be confined to bed absolutely and all possible disturbances should be removed. Pain may be relieved by immobilisation of the affected parts by sand bags, the application of splints or otherwise. In the event of paralysis occurring, care should be taken to prevent deformities by adopting postures antagonistic to the common contractures. As the paralysed muscles cease to be painful they should be gradually relaxed with due regard to the possible deformities.

At the paralytic stage the patient should be under the care of an orthopædic surgeon. As long as tenderness and pain persist the patient should be kept at rest. Deformities may be prevented by placing the paralysed muscles in a position of physiological rest by various methods of splinting. After four weeks to three months the acute stage is usually over and the maintenance of good position may be supplemented by—

(a) Ambulatory treatment, and

(b) Re-education of muscles (muscle training).

Massage should be given with discretion, as its over-use is detrimental and retards progress. Electrical treatment is now used much less than formerly.

The paralytic stage becomes stationary about two years after the onset. Care of the muscles is still required. In patients coming to notice only at this stage muscle training may accomplish much even in cases of long duration. If the patient has either not been properly treated earlier or has not responded to skilled treatment the requirements of this stage are operative measures—

(a) for the treatment of deformities, and

(b) for the improvement of function and in order to secure stability.

Deformity is corrected by stretching by hand, by plaster, or by apparatus; by forcible stretching under anæsthesia; by tenotomy, fasciotomy, myotomy or osteotomy, the mildest measure that will suffice being the soundest and best. Operations to improve function, e.g., tendon transplantation, astragalectomy, tenodesis, are by all experienced surgeons deferred until at least two years after the onset and often for a longer period in order to permit of the maximum recovery of muscular power and to enable the mechanical conditions in the affected limb to be clearly defined.

B. Treatment by Human Convalescent Serum.

The administration by the subcutaneous, intravenous or intrathecal method of serum obtained from a patient who has formerly had poliomyclitis (so called "convalescent serum") was advocated by Netter in 1911 in the preparalytic stage with a view to preventing the onset of paralysis. Between 1925 and 1931 Macnamara and Morgan * treated 133 persons in the preparalytic stage in outbreaks in Australia and concluded that the serum gave "excellent" results, but inasmuch as the physicians concerned felt they had no right to withhold the treatment from any patient who might be in the preparalytic stage, no adequate controls were forthcoming and complete proof of the value of this remedy was therefore not yet established. In America, Park, Kramer, Aycock and their co-workers carried out the treatment with such controls as were found practicable and concluded that no statistical evidence was obtained that convalescent serum was effective, but that the reverse conclusion—that it was of no value—could not be drawn. Similarly, the New York Academy of Medicine (October, 1932) after a recent review of the whole question of the use of convalescent serum declare that, "the results of the study are inconclusive."

Clearly much more experience of this remedy is necessary before its value can be appraised, and the same is true also for normal sera obtained from human beings or from artificially immunised animals (the use of both of which has been suggested on the ground that they have been found to contain relatively large amounts of the specific antibody).

* Macnamara, Jean and Morgan, F. G.: "Poliomyelo-encephalitis in Victoria (1925–1931); Treatment by Human Immune Serum." Lancet, Lond. 1932, I, 469.

DISEASES AND HOSPITALS

The after-effects of poliomyelitis are of so grave a nature that in spite of these findings some medical practitioners may still desire to use serum. The collection and use of such human serum must, for the present, be a matter for arrangement between the medical practitioner and his patient, or for local organisation. Obviously, orthopædic hospitals and other cripple institutions are favourably situated for the collection of serum, but its preparation, testing for potency or toxicity, and storage would have to be safeguarded. Indeed, in England it is only through such institutions that convalescent serum has as yet become available (in London, Oxford, Birmingham, and elsewhere). It is obvious that owing to inherent difficulties a supply is not generally obtainable for practitioners on demand.

It appears to be generally agreed that—

(1) Convalescent serum should be given as early in the course of the disease as possible, i.e., immediately after any sign of spinal involvement has been obtained and an examination of the spinal fluid after lumbar puncture has confirmed the clinical diagnosis of acute poliomyelitis.

(2) The serum may be administered at the time of, or as soon as possible after, the diagnostic lumbar puncture, provided the quantity injected does not exceed the amount of fluid withdrawn, a suitable intrathecal dose being about 20 c.c. together with 30–50 c.c. given by other routes (intravenous or intra-muscular) on the same occasion. If no improvement in the patient's condition is observed administration by one or other of the routes may be repeated within 24 hours.

(3) The serum should be given only by an experienced physician or a clinical pathologist versed in the technique of intrathecal and intravenous administration.

(4) It is advantageous in most cases for the treatment to be given in a hospital or other suitable institution.

Precautions against Infection.

While it is difficult at present to say how long a patient remains infectious, he should be isolated from other children for six weeks, and personal association with him limited to the minimum necessary for proper care and nursing. Those in attendance should bear in mind that infection may be conveyed from the naso-pharyngeal secretions, the urine and excreta. A strictly surgical standard of nursing is indicated, and nurses should be advised to use nasal sprays or douches and to gargle the throat with normal saline solution. A solution of permanganate of potash, 1 in 5,000 in 0·8 solution of chloride of sodium (common salt), has been found to inhibit the action of the virus. Recently, the instillation into the nostrils of a 4 per cent. solution of sodium alum or tannic acid has been advocated. The daily nasal spraying of 5 c.c. of either of these solutions is said to protect against infection for a period of two or three months. Picric acid is also recommended (Armstrong and Harrison). Some authorities are of opinion that the employment of chemical antiseptics is liable to destroy the virucidal properties of the normal secretion of the naso-pharynx. Neither serum nor specific vaccines can be recommended for individual protection.

Children in the affected household should remain away from school for a period of three weeks after isolation of the patient, but it would not appear that complete restriction need be placed on adult members of the household provided they remain well. In regard to the closure of residential schools, the balance of advantage is in favour of not closing a school on the appearance of poliomyelitis. If the school be closed any potential infection is more widely distributed (not infrequently in homes containing younger children) and passes beyond such supervision and control as are furnished in a well-equipped residential school conducted on hygienic lines. Moreover, the care and treatment of the patient is, generally speaking, likely to be more effective in such a school than at home.

Any persons in the infected household who suffer from such of the symptoms set out above as suggest an abortive attack should be isolated as far as possible until they have recovered.

Action by Medical Officer of Health.

The action of the Medical Officer of Health on receipt of notifications, or on learning of suspected cases of poliomyelitis, should proceed on the following lines:—

(a) assist in securing suitable accommodation, including isolation, for the patient in hospital or otherwise;

(b) ensure the precautions required in the light of the information that the disease is apparently capable of transmission by mild cases or even by the apparently healthy; and

(c) make investigation of the associated circumstances, including a search for missed cases.

In epidemic periods local authorities should endeavour to inform the public, by means of leaflets, posters, notices in the Press, cinema films (preferably shown in the open), lectures in the schools, etc., how infection may be guarded against and of the care to be observed in case of attack. Public information should also be circulated respecting the arrangements and facilities for treating patients which are available in the district. All crowded assemblies should be discouraged, as far as possible, while an epidemic prevails, and all gatherings of young children should be avoided; nor should young children be allowed to enter any house where there is a case of illness.

The Medical Officer of Health should advise his Council as to, firstly, what can be done to promote early diagnosis during the acute stage of poliomyelitis, and, secondly, what arrangements can be made under the local orthopædic scheme to send all children affected, whether the condition is slight or serious, to an institution equipped to give such special treatment as may be required to prevent avoidable muscular weakness or permanent deformity.

In view of the high proportion of cases of poliomyelitis which occur below the age of five years, and bearing in mind the good results of effective treatment and the serious consequences of neglect, it is important to take such steps as may be possible to secure orthopædic treatment for young children in connection with the Child Welfare Services. Health visiting and the orthopædic clinic are valuable means by which cases of paralysis are discovered and referred for treatment. All notified cases should be followed up throughout the whole period of their illness to ensure that their treatment is suitable and continuous.

CIRCULAR 1596.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1,
February 1st, 1937.

NOTIFICATION AND TREATMENT OF OPHTHALMIA NEONATORUM.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to forward to you the enclosed copies of the Public Health (Ophthalmia Neonatorum) Amendment Regulations, 1937, which will come into operation on April 1st, 1937.

Under the Public Health (Ophthalmia Neonatorum) Regulations, 1926, as amended by the Public Health (Ophthalmia Neonatorum) Amendment Regulations, 1928 (a), cases of Ophthalmia Neonatorum are required to be notified to the Medical Officer of Health of the county district within which the notifying practitioner is attending the child, whether or not the Council of the county district is the Maternity and Child Welfare Authority for the district; and an obligation is laid upon the Medical Officer of Health of the district to forward a copy of every notification which he receives under the Regulations to the County Medical Officer of Health within 24 hours after the receipt of the notifications.

(a) See ante, p. 2484, where the regulations are set out as amended by the Orders of 1928 and 1937.

DISEASES AND HOSPITALS

Representations have recently been made to the Minister that as it is the function of the Maternity and Child Welfare Authority to give assistance in cases of Ophthalmia Neonatorum by visiting and the provision of nursing in the home, and if necessary by providing hospital treatment, and as it is of the utmost importance that this assistance should be available at the earliest possible moment, it would be desirable to secure that in all cases the notification is sent direct to the Medical Officer of Health of the Maternity and Child Welfare Authority.

After consultation with the British Medical Association, the Minister has decided to give effect to these representations, and the enclosed Regulations require notifications of cases of Ophthalmia Neonatorum to be made by the notifying practitioner direct to the Medical Officer of Health of the Local Authority for the purposes of the Notification of Births Acts, 1907 and 1915, which is in all districts the Maternity and Child Welfare Authority, in order that there may be no delay in the provision by that Authority of any necessary assistance. At the same time, provision is made in Article 4 (f) of the new Regulations whereby the Medical Officer of Health of a District Council which is not a Maternity and Child Welfare Authority will receive from the County Medical Officer of Health prompt information of any cases of Ophthalmia Neonatorum occurring in his District, and a County Medical Officer of Health will receive information of all cases of this disease which occur in the administrative County.

The weekly return made to the Registrar-General by the Medical Officer of Health of a District Council should include all cases of Ophthalmia Neonatorum whether notified to him direct by the medical practitioner or through the County Medical Officer of Health.

It is important that every County Council should cause notice to be given of the effect of the new Regulations to all medical practitioners resident or practising within those Districts in the administrative County for which the County Council is the Maternity and Child Welfare Authority, explaining that on and after the date on which the Regulations come into operation all notifications of cases of Ophthalmia Neonatorum occurring in those Districts must be sent to the County Medical Officer instead of to the Medical Officer of Health of the District.

Additional copies of this Circular and the Regulations may be purchased directly from His Majesty's Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown below, or through any bookseller.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

A. B. MACLACHLAN.

Assistant Secretary.

or

The Town Clerk.

CIRCULAR 1724.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1,

September 5th, 1938.

SMALLPOX.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose for the information of the Authority a copy of a Memorandum on Smallpox which supersedes the previous Memorandum on the steps requisite to be taken by Sanitary Authorities on the occurrence of Smallpox (Memo. $\frac{71a}{Med.}$) which was circulated with Circular 350 of November 6th, 1922.

2. For nearly three years this country has been comparatively free from the non-virulent type of the disease, variola minor, which had been epidemic for some years prior to that period. It is, therefore, considered appropriate to issue this memorandum in order to draw the attention of Local Authorities to the possibility which now exists of limiting the spread of smallpox by prompt and vigorous action as soon as it is reported to have appeared. It should be pointed out that when variola minor was first recognised as such in this country many medical practitioners were inexperienced in smallpox, and even those who had dealt with previous epidemics were put in doubt by the seeming anomaly of the earliest cases, and variola minor gained much ground before preventive measures were instituted. But with the experience of those years the position at present is more favourable for success in suppression by prompt diagnosis and early application of the well-known measures for smallpox control.

3. Vaccination Authorities (i.e., the Councils of Counties, County Boroughs and Metropolitan Boroughs) should supply a copy of the new memorandum to each Public Vaccinator and Vaccination officer in their area. Sufficient copies for the purpose will be supplied on application to the Department.

4. A copy of this circular and a copy of the memorandum have been sent to the Medical Officer of Health. The memorandum will shortly be placed on sale and further copies may be obtained through any bookseller or directly from H.M. Stationery Office at the usual addresses.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

H. H. DE MONTMORENCY,

Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk of the Authority.

Memo. $\frac{215}{Med.}$

MINISTRY OF HEALTH.

MEMORANDUM ON SMALLPOX.

The outstanding epidemiological fact which emerged from a recent survey of the world distribution of smallpox is that the strains of smallpox infection occurring in different countries are of different degrees of virulence or toxicity, and that these different strains breed true over a long series of years. In India and other countries of the Far East, and also Northern Africa, the prevailing strain is of the virulent type, variola major. In England, Canada, the United States, West Indies, Brazil and South Africa, the prevailing strain has been recently, or still is, of the non-virulent type, variously known as variola minor, alastrim or amaas, and in some of these countries it has been possible to trace the importation of the virulent strain, thus bringing to light the remarkable difference in toxicity between variola major and the local endemic variola minor.

The following table shows the incidence of, and mortality from, smallpox in England and Wales since 1901. The figures relate to civilians only, and, in certain years, include both variola major and variola minor. The years 1920–1 mark the virtual end of the incidence of variola major as a serious administrative problem, and the beginning of the rise of the minor variety to epidemic proportions.

* Returns as to notified cases during 1901 to 1910 available from certain sanitary districts only. From 1911 Returns as to notified cases from all sanitary districts.

† From 1901 to 1910, of certain large towns; from 1911, of England and Wales.

In 1917 the number of notifications of smallpox fell to the unprecedently low figure of 7, and then rose almost uninterruptedly, until in 1927 it reached 14,767. Thereafter it steadily declined to none * in 1935. Since 1920 the great majority of the cases has been of the non-virulent type, variola minor, although outbreaks of variola major have occurred during this period. In 1936 all the notified cases were variola major and the circumstances showed that the infection had been, in some instances certainly and in others most probably, introduced from abroad. All these outbreaks were checked and extinguished by prompt and vigorous action on the part of the Local Authorities, and the experience proved that variola major is more easily mastered than variola minor, because the public is alarmed and willing to aid the Local Authority in all measures of control. With the international conventions now in force, with vigilance of Port Health Authorities and complete co-operation between the Local Authorities and the public, the risk of variola major again becoming seriously epidemic in this country has been much reduced.

* One case was notified but there is reason to believe that the diagnosis was incorrect.

In dealing with variola minor, however, the problem of control has been more difficult. Owing to the mildness of the disease there was in the first place the difficulty caused by cases being either unrecognised or recognised too late to afford to their contacts the protection of vaccination. In the second place, vaccination of contacts was less readily accepted in a district in which the public had come to realise that the current smallpox was not a killing and rarely a disfiguring disease, and in the absence of general public alarm, or after its subsidence, the difficulties of making inquiries and tracing persons who had been exposed to infection were increased. The prominence which had been given to the rare occurrence of post-vaccinal nervous disease also discouraged the acceptance of vaccination even after exposure to infection. The result was that in spite of great efforts and considerable expenditure, variola minor smouldered on in certain parts of the country, and the question arose whether its prevention should continue to be attempted on the same lines as variola major, or whether less energetic measures applicable to the less formidable infectious diseases would suffice. The majority of Local Authorities adhered to the established measures of smallpox prevention, but some took the latter course and in place of providing further hospital accommodation isolated a proportion of cases in their homes, and the procedure did not apparently hinder the decline of the local epidemic. Whatever justification there may be for relaxing the standard methods of control owing to the course of events, there is none for a policy of indifference; variola minor is not invariably mild or entirely innocent of complications and permanent disfigurement, with an extensive rash its victim is unsightly and repellent, and when epidemic it causes an amount of invalidity which cannot be viewed without concern by those entrusted with the care of the public health.

The following is a summary of the procedure which should at once be adopted by a Medical Officer of Health on becoming aware that smallpox has appeared in his district.

1. The Medical Officer of Health should visit the patient with the medical practitioner in charge of the case with a view to satisfying himself as to the diagnosis. If the patient is found to be suffering from smallpox, he should at once be removed to a smallpox hospital.

2. The Medical Officer of Health should report the matter forthwith, preferably by telegram, to the Ministry of Health, as required in London by Article 14 (5) of the Sanitary Officers Order, 1926, and outside London by Article 17 (7) of the Sanitary Officers (outside London) Regulations, 1935.

3. Vaccination or revaccination should be offered to contacts. In doing so the following considerations should be kept in mind. The duration of the incubation of smallpox is about 12 days counting to the onset of illness, that is, an average period of 14 days before the outcrop of the characteristic focal rash. If this period is divided into three intervals comprising 7 days, 3 days, and 4 days, then past experience suggests that a successful vaccination in the first interval will wholly prevent the attack, in the second it will more or less modify the eruption, and in the last it will have no influence on the development and course of the disease. The pertinent date is not when vaccination is performed but when the reaction begins; if the reaction, which should be manifest on the third or fourth day, is delayed by any cause, then the rise of immunity is deferred. For this reason prevention can only be ensured by vaccination done within a day or two of exposure and followed by a normal reaction.

4. Contacts should be kept under medical surveillance for a period of 16 days after the last exposure to infection. For this purpose it is seldom necessary or desirable to isolate them in their homes.

5. The Medical Officer of Health should at once inform the Public Vaccinators and Vaccination officers of the name and address of every case of smallpox as it occurs, in order that all practical methods may be taken to secure prompt vaccination or revaccination of persons willing to avail themselves of this protection.

County Councils, County Borough Councils and Metropolitan Borough Councils are responsible for the administration of the Vaccination Acts in their respective areas, and in a county district the Medical Officer of Health should report his action to the County Medical Officer of Health.

DISEASES AND HOSPITALS

The Medical Officer of Health is himself empowered by the Public Health (Smallpox Prevention) Regulations, 1917, to vaccinate or revaccinate contacts.

6. The infected house and its contents, together with the clothing of all persons known to have been in close contact with the patient, should be disinfected. In variola minor a less stringent standard of disinfection may be adopted at the discretion of the Medical Officer of Health.

7. It is important that all doubtful cases of the disease should at once be seen by the Medical Officer of Health, and, with this end in view, medical practitioners should be notified of the presence of the disease in the district, and invited to inform the Medical Officer of Health promptly of any cases suspected to be smallpox.

8. In this connection the possible confusion with chickenpox should be borne in mind, as should also the fact that this disease can be made compulsorily notifiable by the Local Authority on the advice of the Medical Officer of Health, in accordance with the procedure set out in Section 147 of the Public Health Act, 1936, and Section 305 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1936.

9. The Medical Officer of Health should notify the Medical Officers of Health of adjoining areas of the occurrence of smallpox, in order that they take any precautionary measure which the circumstances require.

10. In order to ascertain the source from which the case of smallpox derived infection, careful inquiry should be made concerning the movements of the patient during the three weeks preceding the commencement of his attack, and particularly on the 12th, 13th and 14th days prior to the onset of his illness. In this way, a case of smallpox which has not previously been recognised may be discovered.

ELECTION PETITIONS.

GENERAL RULES.

S. R. & O., Rev., 1904, XII., Supreme Court, England, p. 656.

The following is the text of the general rules for the effectual execution of Part IV. of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, made by Sir Charles Edward Pollock, Knight; Sir Henry Manisty, Knight; and Sir Henry Charles Lopes, Knight, the judges for the time being on the rota for the trial of parliamentary election petitions:

1. The presentation of a Municipal Election Petition shall be made by leaving it at the office of the Master for the time being nominated as prescribed officer, under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, and such Master or his clerk shall (if required) give a receipt which may be in the following form:

Received on the day of at the Master's office a petition touching the election of A. B., alderman, councillor [etc., as the case may be], for the borough of , purporting to be signed by [insert the name of petitioners].

C. D., Master's Clerk.

With the petition shall also be left a copy thereof for the Master to send to the town clerk, pursuant to section 88, sub-section (3) of the Act.

2. A municipal election petition shall contain the following statements:

(1) It shall state the right of the petitioner or petitioners to petition within section 88, sub-section (1), of the Act.

(2) It shall state the holding and result of the election, and shall briefly state the facts and grounds relied on to sustain the prayer.

3. The petition shall be divided into paragraphs, each of which, as nearly as may be, shall be confined to a distinct portion of the subject, and every paragraph shall be numbered consecutively, and no costs shall be allowed of drawing or copying any petition not substantially in compliance with this rule, unless otherwise ordered by the High Court or a judge thereof.

4. The petition shall conclude with a prayer, as for instance, that some specified person should be declared duly returned or elected, or that the election should be declared void, or that a return may be enforced, (as the case may be,) and shall be signed by all the petitioners.

5. The following form, or one to the like effect, shall be sufficient:

In the High Court of Justice,

The Municipal Corporations Act, 1882.

Election for [state the place and office for which election held] holden on the day of A.D.

The petition of A. of [or of A. of , and B. of , as the case may be] whose names are subscribed.

1. Your petitioner A. is a person who voted [or had a right to vote, as the case may be.] at the above election [or was a candidate at the above election]; and your petitioner B. [here state in like manner the right of each petitioner].

2. And your petitioners state that the election was holden on the day of A.D. , when A. B., C. D., and E. F. were candidates, and that A. B. and C. D. have been in the usual manner declared to be duly elected.

3. And your petitioners say that [here state the facts and grounds on which the petitioners rely].

Wherefore your petitioners pray that it may be determined that the said A. B. was not duly elected, and that the election was void [or that the said E. F. was duly elected, and ought to have been returned, or as the case may be].

(Signed)
A.
B.

6. Evidence need not be stated in the petition, but the High Court or a judge thereof may order such particulars (a) as may be necessary to prevent surprise and unnecessary expense, and to insure a fair and effectual trial in the same way as in ordinary proceedings in the said High Court, and upon such terms as to costs and otherwise as may be ordered.

7. When a petitioner claims the office for an unsuccessful candidate, alleging that he had a majority of lawful votes, the party complaining of or defending the election shall, six days before the day appointed for trial, deliver to the Master and also at the address, if any given by the petitioners and respondent, as the case may be, a list of the votes intended to be objected to, and the heads of objection to each such vote, and the Master shall allow inspection and office copies of such lists to all parties concerned; and no evidence shall be given against the validity of any vote, nor upon any head of objection not specified in the list, except by leave of the High Court or a judge thereof, upon such terms as to amendment of the list, postponement of the inquiry, and payment of costs, as may be ordered (b).

(a) An order for particulars of the corrupt practices alleged in a municipal election petition was made at chambers in the following form: That the petitioners do within a week deliver to the respondents particulars of all the persons alleged to have been bribed or treated, by whom, and when and where; and of all persons alleged to have been retained or employed as canvassers and by whom, and when and where; and of all persons to whom money was paid or agreed to be paid on account of the conveyance of voters to the poll, and by whom, and when and where such moneys were paid or agreed to be paid (Maude v. Lowley (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 165; 38 J. P. 280; 20 Digest 185, 1603). Where a judge in chambers ordered a petitioner to furnish particulars of his charges against the respondent ten clear days before the hearing of the petition, the Divisional Court refused to interfere with the order (Barrow-in-Furness Election Petition (1886),

ELECTIONS

2 T. L. R. 356). The ordinary time for delivery of particulars is seven days before the trial (Lenham v. Barber (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 293; 48 J. P. 23; 20 Digest 186, 1606). See also Clark v. Lowley (1883), 47 J. P. 551; 52 L. J. Q. B. 321; 20 Digest 185, 1604. But this is not a hard and fast rule, and in determining whether there are special circumstances upon which it will act in extending the time the court will take into consideration the size and nature of the constituency, the population and the number of voters, and also the number of witnesses whom it is proposed to call (Rushmere v. Isaacson, [1893] 1 Q. B. 118; 57 J. P. 790; 20 Digest 160, 1327). The respondent to a petition in which the seat is claimed upon a scrutiny is not entitled to obtain particulars under this rule, but r. 7 applies exclusively to such a case (Munro v. Balfour, [1893] 1 Q. B. 113; 57 J. P. 789; 20 Digest 159, 1314; Furness v. Beresford, [1898] 1 Q. B. 495; 20 Digest 159, 1315).

(b) The trial of a municipal election petition was appointed for January 20th. A list of objections was tendered at the Rule Office of the Common Pleas on January 18th, and refused on the ground that it was too late, and it was taken away by the person tendering it. On the 14th a list of objections was left at the Rule Office, and one was also delivered to the respondent:—Held, that the list was not delivered in due time according to the rule, and that the court had no jurisdiction to order delivery nunc pro tunc under the last clause of the rule (Neild v. Batty (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 104; 38 J. P. 264).

8. When the respondent in a petition under the Act complaining of an undue election and claiming the office for some person, intends to give evidence to prove that the election of such party was undue, pursuant to the 93rd section of the Act, sub-section (10), such respondent shall, six days before the day appointed for trial, deliver to the Master, and also at the address, if any, given by the petitioner, a list of the objections to the election upon which he intends to rely, and the Master shall allow inspection and office copies of such list to all parties concerned; and no evidence shall be given by a respondent of any objection to the election not specified in the list, except by leave of the High Court or a judge thereof, upon such terms as to amendment of the list, postponement of the inquiry, and payment of costs, as may be ordered.

9. With the petition the petitioner or petitioners shall leave at the office of the Master a writing, signed by him or them or on his or their behalf, giving the name of some person entitled to practise as a solicitor in the High Court of Justice, whom he or they authorise to act as his or their agent, or stating that he or they act for himself or themselves, as the case may be, and in either case giving an address, within three miles of the General Post Office, at which notices addressed to him or them may be left; and if no such writing be left or address given, then notice of objection to the recognizances, and all other notices and proceedings may be given by sticking up the same at the Master's office.

10. Any person elected to any municipal office may at any time after he is elected send to or leave at the office of the Master a writing signed by him or on his behalf, appointing a person entitled to practise as a solicitor in the High Court of Justice, to act as his agent in case there should be a petition against him, or stating that he intends to act for himself, and in either case giving an address within three miles from the General Post Office at which notices may be left, and in default of such writing being left in a week after service of the petition, notices and proceedings may be given and served respectively by sticking up the same at the Master's office.

11. The Master shall keep a book or books at his office in which he shall enter all addresses and the names of agents given under either of the preceding rules, which book shall be open to inspection by any person during office hours.

12. The Master shall upon the presentation of the petition, forthwith send a copy of the petition to the town clerk, pursuant to section 88 of the Act, sub-section (3), and shall therewith send the name of the petitioner's agent, if any, and the address, if any, given as prescribed, and also the name of the respondent's agent, and the address, if any, given as prescribed, and the town clerk shall forthwith publish those particulars along with the petition.

The cost of publication of this and any other matter required to be published by the town clerk shall be paid by the petitioner or person moving in the matter, and shall form part of the general costs of the petition.

13. The time for giving notice of the presentation of a petition and of the nature of the proposed security shall be five days, exclusive of the day of presentation.

14. When the respondent has named an agent or given an address, the service of a municipal election petition may be by delivery of it to the agent, or by posting it in a registered letter to the address given at such time that, in the ordinary course of post, it would be delivered within the prescribed time.

In other cases the service must be personal on the respondent, unless a judge of the High Court, on an application made to him not later than five days after the petition is presented on affidavit, showing what has been done, shall be satisfied that all reasonable effort has been made to effect personal service and cause the matter to come to the knowledge of the respondent, in which case the judge may order that what has been done shall be considered sufficient service, subject to such conditions as he may think reasonable. An agent employed for the petitioner or respondent shall forthwith leave written notice at the office of the Master of his appointment to act as such agent, and service of notices and proceedings upon such agent shall be sufficient for all purposes.

15. In case of evasion of service the sticking up a notice in the office of the Master of the petition having been presented, stating the petitioner, the prayer, and the nature of the proposed security, shall be deemed equivalent to personal service if so ordered by a judge.

16. The deposit of money by way of security for payment of costs, charges, and expenses payable by the petitioner, shall be made by payment into the Bank of England to an account to be opened there by the description of "The Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, Security Fund," which shall be vested in and drawn upon from time to time by the Lord Chief Justice of England for the time being, for the purposes for which security is required by the said Act, and a bank receipt or certificate for the same shall be forthwith left at the Master's office.

17. The Master shall file such receipt or certificate, and keep a book open to inspection of all parties concerned, in which shall be entered from time to time the amount and the petition to which it is applicable.

18. All claims at law or in equity to money so deposited or to be deposited in the Bank of England shall be disposed of by the High Court of Justice or a judge thereof.

19. Money so deposited shall, if, and when the same is no longer needed for securing payment of such costs, charges, and expenses, be returned or otherwise disposed of as justice may require, by rule of the High Court, or order of a judge thereof.

20. Such rule or order may be made after such notice of intention to apply, and proof that all just claims have been satisfied or otherwise sufficiently provided for, as the court or judge may require.

21. The rule or order may direct payment either to the party in whose name the same is deposited, or to any person entitled to receive the same.

22. Upon such rule or order being made, the amount may be drawn for by the Lord Chief Justice of England for the time being.

23. The draft of the Lord Chief Justice of England for the time being shall in all cases be a sufficient warrant to the Bank of England for all payments made thereunder.

24. The recognizance as security for costs may be acknowledged before a judge of the High Court or the Master in town, or a justice of the peace in the country.

There may be one recognizance acknowledged by all the sureties, or separate recognizances by one or more, as may be convenient.

25. The recognizance shall contain the name and usual place of abode of each surety, with such sufficient description as shall enable him to be found or ascertained and may be as follows :

Be it remembered that on the day of , in the year of our Lord, 18 , before me [name and description] came A. B., of [name and description as above prescribed] and acknowledged himself [or severally acknowledged themselves] to owe to our Sovereign Lady the Queen the sum of five hundred pounds [or the following sums], (that is to say) the said C. D. the sum of £ , the said E. F. the sum of £ , the said G. H. the sum of £ , and the said J. K. the sum of , to be levied on his [or their respective goods and chattels, lands and tenements, to the use of our said Sovereign Lady the Queen, her heirs and successors.

The condition of this recognizance is that if [here insert the names of all the petitioners, and if more than one, add or any of them] shall well and truly pay all costs, charges, and expenses in respect of the election petition signed by him [or them] relating to the [here insert the name of the borough] which shall become payable by the petitioner [or petitioners, or any of them] under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, to any person or persons, then this recognizance to be void, otherwise to stand in full force.

Signed,

[Signatures of sureties.]

Taken and acknowledged by the above-named [names of sureties] on the at before me,

C. D.

A justice of the peace [or as the case may be].

26. The recognizance or recognizances shall be left at the Master's office, by or on behalf of the petitioner, in like manner as before prescribed for the leaving of a petition forthwith after being acknowledged.

The security may (unless the High Court or a judge thereof shall otherwise order on summons) be given to any amount not less than £300; but the High Court or a judge thereof may, on summons taken out within five days from the service of the notice of the nature and amount of the security, order that the same shall be increased within a time to be fixed in the order by further security to be given in the manner directed by the Act, for a further amount, not exceeding with the amount for which security shall have been already given £500. And in default of compliance with such order, no further proceedings shall be had on the petition.

27. The time for giving notice of any objection to a recognizance under the 89th section of the Act, sub-section (4), shall be within five days from the date of service of the notice of the petition and of the nature of the security, exclusive of the day of service, or in case of further security within five days after service of notice of the nature thereof, exclusive of the day of such service.

28. An objection to the recognizance must state the ground or grounds thereof, as that the sureties, or any and which of them, are insufficient, or that a surety is dead, or that he cannot be found, or that a person named in the recognizance has not duly acknowledged the same.

29. An objection made to the security shall be heard and decided by the Master, subject to appeal within five days to a judge, upon summons taken out by either party to declare the security sufficient or insufficient.

30. Such hearing and decision may be either upon affidavit or personal examination of witnesses, or both, as the Master or judge may think fit.

31. If an objection be allowed and the security be declared insufficient, the Master or judge shall in his order state what amount he deems requisite to make the security sufficient, and the further prescribed time to remove the objection by deposit shall be within five days from the date of the order, not including the day of the date, and such deposit shall be made in the manner already prescribed.

32. The costs of hearing and deciding the objections made to the security given shall be paid as ordered by the Master or judge, and in default of such order shall form part of the general costs of the petition.

33. The costs of hearing and deciding an objection upon the ground of insufficiency of a surety or sureties, shall be paid by the petitioner, and a clause to that effect shall be inserted in the order declaring its sufficiency or insufficiency, unless at the time of leaving the recognizance with the Master there be also left with the Master an affidavit of the sufficiency of the surety or sureties sworn by each surety before a justice of the peace, which affidavit any justice of the peace is hereby authorised to take, or before some person authorised to take affidavits in the High Court of Justice that he is seised or possessed of real or personal estate, or both, above what will satisfy his debts, of the clear value of the sum for which he is bound by his recognizance, which affidavit may be as follows:

34. The order of the Master for payment of costs shall have the same force as an order made by a judge, and may be enforced in like manner as a judge's order in an ordinary proceeding in the High Court of Justice.

35. A copy of every order (other than an order giving further time for delivering particulars, or for costs only), or, if the Master shall so direct, the order itself or a duplicate thereof, also a copy of every particular delivered, shall be forthwith filed with the Master, and the same shall be produced at the trial by the registrar, stamped with the official seal. Such order shall be filed by the party obtaining the same, and such particular by the party delivering the same.

36. The petitioner or his agent shall, immediately after notice of the presentation of a petition and of the nature of the proposed security shall have been served, file with the Master an affidavit of the time and manner of service thereof (a).

(a) See Williams v. Tenby Corporation (1879), 5 C. P. D. 135; 44 J. P. 348; 20 Digest 184, 1598.

37. The days mentioned in Rules 7 and 8, and in any rule of court or judge's order, whereby particulars are ordered to be delivered, or any act is directed to be done, so many days before the day appointed for trial, shall be reckoned exclusively of the day of delivery, or of doing the act ordered and the day appointed for trial, and exclusively also of Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday, and any day set apart for a public fast or public thanksgiving.

38. When the last day for presenting petitions, or filing lists of votes or objections, under Rules 7 and 8, or recognizances, or any other matter required to be filed within a given time, shall happen to fall on a holiday, the petition or other matter shall be deemed duly filed if put into the letter box at the Master's office at any time during such day; but an affidavit, stating with reasonable precision the time when such delivery was made, shall be filed on the first day after the expiration of the holidays.

39. The Master shall make out the municipal election list. In it he shall insert the names of the agents of the petitioners and respondents, and the addresses to which notices may be sent, if any. The list may be inspected at the Master's office at any time during office hours, and shall be put up for that purpose upon a notice board appropriated to proceedings under the said Act, and headed "Municipal Election List."

40. The time of the trial of each municipal election petition shall be fixed by the election judges on the rota or any one of them, who shall signify the same to the Master, and notice thereof shall be given in writing by the Master by sticking notice up in his office, sending one copy by post to the address given by the petitioner, another to the address given by the respondent, if any, and a copy by the post to the town clerk of the borough to which the petition relates, fifteen days before the day appointed for the trial.

The town clerk shall forthwith publish the same in the borough.

41. The sticking up of the notice of trial at the office of the Master shall be deemed and taken to be notice in the prescribed manner within the meaning of the Act, and such notice shall not be vitiated by any miscarriage of or relating to the copy or copies thereof to be sent as already directed.

42. The notice of trial may be in the following form:

44. In the event of the barrister to whom the trial of the petition is assigned not having arrived at the time appointed for the trial, or to which the trial is postponed, the commencement of the trial shall ipso facto stand adjourned to the ensuing day, and so from day to day.

45. No formal adjournment of the court for the trial of a municipal election petition shall be necessary, but the trial is to be deemed adjourned, and may be continued from day to day until the inquiry is concluded.

66. Upon such notice being left at the Master's office, the Master shall forthwith send a copy thereof by the post to the petitioner or his agent, and to the town clerk, who shall cause the same to be published in the borough.

67. The time for applying to be admitted as a respondent in either of the events mentioned in the 97th section of the Act shall be within ten days after such notice is given as hereinbefore directed, or such further time as the High Court or a judge thereof may allow.

68. Costs shall be taxed by the Master, or at his request by any Master of the superior court upon the rule of court or judge's order by which the costs are payable, and costs when taxed may be recovered in like manner as if payable under a rule of court, judgment, or order of a judge in the ordinary proceedings in the High Court of Justice, or in case there be money in the bank available for the purpose, then to the extent of such money by order of the Lord Chief Justice of England for the time being.

ELECTIONS

A person shall not be validly nominated unless his consent to nomination (in this Schedule referred to as "the candidate's consent") given in writing on or within one month before the last day for the delivery of nomination papers, and attested by one witness, is delivered at the place and within the time appointed for the delivery of nomination papers:

Provided that in the case of an election to fill a casual vacancy if the returning officer is satisfied that owing to the absence of a person from the United Kingdom it has not been reasonably practicable for his consent in writing to be given as aforesaid, a telegram consenting to his nomination and purporting to have been sent by him shall be deemed, for the purpose of this paragraph, to be consent in writing given by him on the day on which it purports to have been sent and attestation of his consent shall not be required.

Time and Place for sending in Nomination Papers.

4.—(1) Every nomination paper shall be delivered at the place appointed for the purpose by the returning officer not later than the time appointed for that purpose by Part II of this Schedule.

Decision as to Validity of Nomination.

5.—(1) As soon as may be after the time for the delivery of nomination papers has expired, the returning officer shall examine the nomination papers, and decide whether the candidates have been validly nominated in accordance with the provisions of this Schedule (a).

(2) Where the returning officer decides that a candidate has been so validly nominated, his decision shall be final and shall not be questioned in any proceeding whatsoever.

(3) Where the returning officer decides that a candidate has not been so validly nominated, he shall endorse and sign on the nomination paper the fact and reasons for his decision (b).

(4) The decision of the returning officer under the last preceding sub-paragraph shall be subject to review on an election petition questioning the election.

(5) Not later than the time appointed for that purpose by Part II of this Schedule, the returning officer shall send notice of his decision to each candidate at his place of residence as stated on his nomination paper.

Statement as to Persons Nominated.

6. The returning officer shall, not later than the time appointed for that purpose by Part II of this Schedule, prepare a statement in the form prescribed by the Secretary of State containing the full names of all persons nominated and their places of residence and descriptions and his decision whether those persons have been validly nominated, and shall publish the statement by causing it to be affixed to the place appointed for the delivery of nomination papers (c).

Withdrawal of Candidates.

7. A candidate may withdraw from his candidature by notice of withdrawal signed by him and attested by one witness and delivered at the place appointed for the delivery of nomination papers not later than the time appointed for that purpose by Part II of this Schedule (d).

Nomination in more than one Ward.

8. A candidate who is validly nominated for more than one ward of an urban district shall, by notice signed, attested, and delivered as aforesaid, withdraw from his candidature

(a) He has no power to decide as to the qualifications of the candidates (Pritchard v. Mayor, etc. of Bangor (1888), 13 App. Cas. 241; 52 J. P. 564; 20 Digest 123, 999; Harford v. Linskey, [1899] 1 Q. B. 852; 63 J. P. 263; 20 Digest 183, 1593). But the only remedy is by petition, not mandamus (Ex parte Thompson, Times, March 5th, 1892). As to how soon a petition based on a rejection of a nomination may be presented, see In re Grangemellon Election Petition, [1909] 2 I. R. 90.

(b) An erroneous decision given bona fide is not misconduct so as to render him liable to be made respondent to an election petition (Harmon v. Park (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 323; 45 J. P. 436; 20 Digest 183, 1596).

(c) For form of statement as to persons nominated, see Sched. III, Form C, post, p. 2557.

(d) A withdrawal is irrevocable.

in all those wards except one, and if he does not so withdraw he shall be deemed to have withdrawn from his candidature in all those wards.

Method of Election and Publication of Result of Uncontested Election.

9.—(3) (a) If the number of persons remaining validly nominated (a) exceeds the number of vacancies, the councillors shall be elected in accordance with the provisions of Part III of this Schedule from among those persons (b);

(b) If the number of persons remaining validly nominated is the same as the number of vacancies, those persons shall be deemed to be elected;

(c) if the number of persons remaining validly nominated is less than the number of vacancies, those persons shall be deemed to be elected, and, if the election is an ordinary election, such of the retiring councillors of the urban district or ward, as the case may be, as were highest on the poll at the last ordinary election, or as filled the places of councillors who were highest on the poll at that election, or, if the poll was equal or there was no poll, as may be determined by the drawing of lots conducted under the direction of the returning officer, shall be deemed to be elected to make up the required number;

(d) if at an ordinary election no person is or remains validly nominated, the retiring councillors of the urban district or ward, as the case may be, shall be deemed to be elected.

(4) If an election is not contested, the returning officer shall, not later than eleven o'clock in the morning of the day of election, publish a list of the persons elected, and unless he is the clerk of the urban district council shall forthwith return the names of the persons elected to that clerk.

11. For the purposes of this Part of this Schedule a person shall be deemed to be registered as a local government elector for an urban district or ward, if he is registered in the register of local government electors for that urban district or ward, as the case may be, which will be in force on the day of election, or if, pending the coming into force of that register, his name appears in the electors lists for that register as corrected by the registration officer.

12. In computing any period of time for the purposes of this Schedule, a Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday, Bank Holiday, or day appointed for public thanksgiving or mourning, shall be disregarded, and any such day shall not be treated as a day for the purpose of any proceeding under this Schedule.

PART II.

[Note.—In computing any period of time for the purposes of this Part of this Schedule, a Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday, Bank Holiday or day appointed for public thanksgiving or mourning is to be disregarded in accordance with paragraph 12 of Part I of this Schedule.]

(a) That is, those to whose nomination no objection has been made before the returning officer, or to which any objection made has been disallowed by him, or who have died or withdrawn, not persons whose nominations are absolutely valid for all purposes. See per Lords WATSON and HERSCHELL in Pritchard v. Mayor, etc. of Bangor, supra. A disqualification for holding office does not render the nomination bad if it does not appear on the face of the nomination paper (Hobbs v. Morey, [1904] 1 K. B. 74; 68 J. P. 132; 20 Digest 125, 1004).

ELECTIONS

PART III.

PROVISIONS RELATING TO CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

THE POLL.

General conduct of poll.

1. At every contested election the votes shall be given by ballot, and the poll shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Schedule.

Notice of poll.

2.—(1) The returning officer shall on or before the day appointed for that purpose by Part II of this Schedule, give notice of the poll, specifying—

(a) the day and hours fixed for the poll;

(b) the number of councillors to be elected;

(c) the full name, place of residence, and description of each candidate remaining validly nominated;

(d) the names of the proposer and seconder who signed the nomination paper of each candidate; and

(f) the situation of each polling station (a) and the description of the persons entitled to vote thereat.

(2) For the purposes of this Part of this Schedule the first valid nomination paper delivered at the place appointed for the delivery of nomination papers in respect of a candidate shall be deemed to be the nomination paper of that candidate.

3. The poll shall be open during such hours as shall be fixed for the urban district by by county council by any general or special order, or, if no such order is in force in the urban district, during such hours as were applicable at the last ordinary election of urban district councillors:

Provided that the poll shall always be open between the hours of 6 and 8 in the evening (b).

Use of schools, public rooms, or churches.

4.—(1) The returning officer may use, free of charge, for the purpose of taking the poll or of counting the votes—

(a) a room in a school in receipt of a grant, or in respect of which a grant is made, out of moneys provided by Parliament, from or by the Board of Education; and

(b) a room the expense of maintaining which is payable out of any rate.

(2) The returning officer shall make good any damage done to, and defray any expense incurred by the persons having control over, any such room as aforesaid by reason of its being used for the purpose of taking the poll or of counting the votes.

(3) The use of a room in an unoccupied house for the purpose of taking the poll or of counting the votes shall not render a person liable to be rated or to pay any rate for that house.

5. An election shall not be held in a church, chapel or other place of public worship.

Death of candidate after nomination.

6. If after the latest time for delivery of nomination papers and before the commencement of the poll a candidate who remains validly nominated dies, the returning officer shall, upon being satisfied of the fact of death, countermand the poll.

(a) In Pembroke Election Petition, [1908] 2 I. R. 158, 433, two polling stations were announced: in fact there were ten polling tables at the two places indicated: held immaterial.

(b) The door of a polling station may be closed before the time if there are sufficient voters inside to occupy the remainder of the time in voting, and papers issued before the hour of closing may be placed in the box, though the hour has struck (Worcester (1880), 3 O'M. & H. 184). But no papers should be issued after the hour, though to persons already in the station when the doors are closed (Gribbin v. Kirker (1873), Ir. Rep. 7 C. L. 30; Ex parte Elliott, Times, June 3rd and October 27th, 1891; Medhurst v. Lough (1901), 17 T. L. R. 210; 20 Digest 115, 916).

Provision of polling stations, ballot boxes, etc.

7. The returning officer shall—

(a) provide a sufficient number of polling stations for the electors, and allot the electors to the polling stations in such manner as he thinks most convenient;

(b) appoint a presiding officer to preside at each polling station, and such other officers (including poll clerks) as may be necessary for taking the poll and counting the votes;

(c) furnish each polling station with such number of compartments as may be necessary in which the electors can mark their votes screened from observation;

(d) furnish each presiding officer with such number of ballot boxes and ballot papers (a) as in the opinion of the returning officer may be necessary;

(e) provide each polling station with materials to enable electors to mark the ballot papers, with instruments for stamping thereon the official mark, and with copies of the register of electors for the urban district or ward, as the case may be, or such part thereof as contains the names of the electors allotted to vote at the station;

(f) do such other acts and things as may be necessary for effectually conducting the election in manner provided by this Schedule.

8. One or more polling stations may be provided in the same room, but no premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor shall be used for a polling station.

9. A notice, in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances admit, giving directions for the guidance of electors in voting, shall be exhibited outside every polling station, and in every compartment in the polling station (b).

Ballot boxes, ballot papers, official mark.

10. Every ballot box shall be so constructed that the ballot papers can be put therein, but cannot be withdrawn therefrom, without the box being unlocked.

11. Every ballot paper shall be in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule or as near thereto as circumstances admit and—

(a) shall contain the full names, places of residence and descriptions of the candidates as shown on their respective nomination papers and arranged alphabetically in the order of their surnames and (if there are two or more candidates with the same surname) of their other names;

(b) shall be capable of being folded up;

(c) shall have a number printed on the back; and

(d) shall have attached a counterfoil with the same number printed on the face.

12. The official mark shall be kept secret.

Appointment of polling agents.

13.—(1) The candidates severally or jointly may appoint agents (in this Schedule referred to as "polling agents") to attend at the polling stations for the purpose of detecting personation; but not more than one polling agent shall be permitted to attend at any polling station on behalf of the same candidate, nor shall more than three, or, if the number of candidates exceeds twenty, more than four, polling agents be permitted to attend at any polling station (c).

(2) Notice in writing of any appointment, stating the names and addresses of the persons appointed, shall be given by the candidate or candidates to the returning officer two clear days at least before the opening of the poll; and if in respect of any polling station the number of polling agents exceeds the number permitted by this paragraph to attend, the returning officer shall determine which of them shall be permitted to attend, giving preference, so far as circumstances allow, to those appointed by the larger number of candidates.

(b) For form of notice, see Part IV, Form B, post, p. 2553.

(c) A candidate has a right to be present in a polling station if he does not interfere with the polling or misconduct himself, although he does not act as his own polling agent (Clementson v. Mason (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 209; 39 J. P. 360; 20 Digest 104, 839). The appointment of too many polling agents will not necessarily avoid an election.

(3) If a polling agent dies, or becomes incapable of acting, the candidate or candidates may appoint another polling agent in his place, and shall forthwith give to the returning officer notice in writing of the name and address of the polling agent so appointed.

(4) Subject to the provisions of this paragraph, a polling agent in respect of whom such notice as aforesaid has been given may, during the hours of the poll, attend at the polling station to which he has been appointed.

Admission to polling station.

14.—(1) No person shall be admitted to vote at any polling station except at the one allotted to him.

(2) The presiding officer shall regulate the number of electors to be admitted to the polling station at the same time, and shall exclude all other persons except the candidates, the polling agents, the officers appointed under this Schedule, the police officers on duty, and any person accompanying a blind elector for the purpose of assisting him to vote.

(3) Nothing in this paragraph shall affect the provisions of the Police Disabilities Removal Act, 1887, as applied to elections of urban district councillors by the Police Disabilities Removal Act, 1893.

Ballot boxes to be sealed.

15. Immediately before the commencement of the poll, the presiding officer shall show the ballot box empty to such persons, if any, as may be present in the polling station, so that they may see that it is empty, and shall then lock it up and place his seal upon it in such manner as to prevent it being opened without breaking the seal, and shall place it in his view for the receipt of ballot papers, and keep it so locked and sealed.

Questions to be put to electors.

16.—(1) The presiding officer may, and, if required by two local government electors or by a candidate or his polling agent, shall, put to any person applying for a ballot paper at the time of his application, but not afterwards, the following questions, or either of them, that it to say:—

(a) Are you the person registered in the register of local government electors now in force for this urban district [or ward] as follows [read the whole entry from the register] ?

(b) Have you already voted at the present election [adding in the case of an election for several wards in this or any other ward] ?

(2) A ballot paper shall not be delivered to any person required to answer the above questions, or either of them, unless he has answered the questions or questions satisfactorily (a).

(3) Save as by this paragraph authorised, no inquiry shall be permitted as to the right of any person to vote.

Challenge of elector by polling agent.

17.—(1) If at the time a person applies for a ballot paper, or after he has applied for a ballot paper and before he has left the polling station, a polling agent declares to the presiding officer that he has reasonable cause to believe that the applicant has committed an offence of personation under the Local Government Act, 1933, and undertakes to substantiate the charge in a court of law, the presiding officer may order a police officer to arrest the applicant, and the order of the presiding officer shall be sufficient authority for the police officer so to do.

(2) A person against whom a declaration is made under this paragraph by a polling agent shall not, by reason thereof, be prevented from voting, but the presiding officer shall cause the words "protested against for personation" to be placed against his name in the marked copy of the register of electors.

(3) A person arrested under the provisions of this paragraph shall be dealt with as a person taken into custody by a police officer for an offence without a warrant.

(a) The first question may be truthfully answered even if the name be erroneously spelled in the register (R. v. Thwaites (1853), 1 E. & B. 704), or even if it be a totally different name from the real name of the voter provided it was intended to designate him and no other person (R. v. Fox (1887), 16 Cox, C. C. 166). In either case the vote would be good on a scrutiny (Oldham Case (1869), 1 O'M. & H. 153). No oath can be administered to a voter.

Marking of ballot papers.

18. A ballot paper shall be delivered to an elector who applies therefor, and immediately before delivery—

(a) the ballot paper shall be marked with the official mark, either embossed or perforated;

(b) the number, name, and description of the elector as stated in the copy of the register shall be called out;

(c) the number of the elector shall be marked on the counterfoil together with the distinctive letter of the parliamentary polling district in which the elector is registered, and the distinguishing sign, if any; and

(d) a mark shall be placed in the register against the number of the elector to denote that he has received a ballot paper, but without showing the particular ballot paper which he has received.

19. The elector, on receiving the ballot paper, shall forthwith proceed into one of the compartments in the polling station and there secretly mark his paper and fold it up so as to conceal his vote, and shall then show to the presiding officer the back of the paper, so as to disclose the official mark, and put the ballot paper, so folded up, into the ballot box in the presence of the presiding officer. The elector shall vote without undue delay, and shall leave the polling station as soon as he has put his ballot paper into the ballot box.

20.—(1) The presiding officer, on the application of—

(a) an elector who is incapacitated by blindness or other physical cause from voting in manner directed by this Schedule; or

(b) if the poll is taken on a Saturday, of an elector who declares that he is a Jew, and objects on religious grounds to vote in manner directed by this Schedule; or shall, in the presence of the polling agents, cause the vote of the elector to be marked on a ballot paper in manner directed by the elector, and the ballot paper to be placed in the ballot box.

(c) of an elector who makes a declaration that he is unable to read (in this Schedule referred to as "the declaration of inability to read") (a)

(2) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is marked in pursuance of this paragraph, and the reason why it is so marked, shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the list of votes marked by the presiding officer").

21.—(1) Where an elector who is accompanied by another person makes application to the presiding officer to be allowed on the ground of blindness to vote with the assistance of the person accompanying him (in this Schedule referred to as "the companion"), the presiding officer shall require the elector to declare orally whether he is so incapacitated by his blindness as to be unable to vote without assistance.

(2) If the presiding officer is satisfied that the elector is so incapacitated and is also satisfied by a written declaration made by the companion (in this Schedule referred to as "the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector" (b)) that the companion is a qualified person within the meaning of this paragraph and has not previously assisted more than one blind person to vote at the election then being held, the presiding officer shall grant the application, and thereupon anything which is by this Schedule required to be done to or by the said elector in connection with the giving of his vote, may be done to, or with the assistance of, the companion, as the case may be.

(3) For the purposes of this paragraph a person shall be qualified to assist a blind elector to vote, if that person is either—

(a) a person who is entitled to vote at the election then being held; or

(b) the father, mother, brother, sister, husband, wife, son or daughter of the blind elector and has attained the age of twenty-one years.

(4) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is given in accordance with this paragraph and the name and address of the companion shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the list of blind electors assisted by companions").

(b) For form of declaration made by companion of a blind elector, see Part IV, Form E, post, p. 2554.

ELECTIONS

22.—(1) The declaration of inability to read and the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector—

(a) shall be in the appropriate form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances admit; and

(b) shall be made before the presiding officer at the time when the elector applies for a ballot paper or applies to vote with the assistance of the companion, as the case may be, and shall forthwith be handed to the presiding officer, who shall attest and retain it.

(2) No fee, stamp or other payment shall be charged in respect of the declaration.

Tendered ballot papers.

23. If a person, representing himself to be a particular elector named on the register, applies for a ballot paper after another person has voted as such elector, the applicant shall, upon satisfactorily answering the questions set out in paragraph 16 of this Part of this Schedule, be entitled to mark a ballot paper in the same manner as any other elector, but the ballot paper (in this Schedule called " a tendered ballot paper ") shall be of a colour differing from the other ballot papers, and instead of being put into the ballot box shall be given to the presiding officer and endorsed by him with the name of the elector and his number in the register of electors, and set aside in a separate packet, and shall not be counted by the returning officer; and the name of the elector and his number on the register together with the distinctive letter of the parliamentary polling district and the distinguishing sign, if any, shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called " the tendered votes list ").

Spoilt ballot papers.

24. An elector who has inadvertently dealt with his ballot paper in such manner that it cannot be conveniently used as a ballot paper may, on delivering it to the presiding officer and proving the fact of the inadvertence to the satisfaction of the presiding officer, obtain another ballot paper in the place of the ballot paper so delivered up (in this Schedule called " a spoilt ballot paper "), and the spoilt ballot paper shall be immediately cancelled.

Powers of presiding officer in adjourning poll.

25. For the purpose of the adjournment of the poll in the event of riot or open violence and of every other enactment relating to the poll, a presiding officer shall have the power by law belonging to a presiding officer at a parliamentary election.

Packets of ballot papers, etc., to be sealed.

26. As soon as practicable after the close of the poll, the presiding officer shall, in the presence of the polling agents, make up into separate packets, sealed with his own seal and the seals of such polling agents as desire to affix their seals,—

(a) each ballot box in use at his station, sealed so as to prevent the introduction of additional ballot papers and unopened, but with the key attached;

(b) the unused and spoilt ballot papers, placed together;

(c) the tendered ballot papers;

(d) the marked copies of the register of electors and the counterfoils of the ballot papers;

(e) the tendered votes list, the list of blind electors assisted by companions, the list of votes marked by the presiding officer, a statement of the number of electors whose votes are so marked by the presiding officer under the heads " physical incapacity," " Jews," and " unable to read," the declarations made by the companions of blind electors, and the declarations of inability to read;

and shall deliver the packets to the returning officer to be taken charge of by him.

27. The packets shall be accompanied by a statement (in this Schedule referred to as " the ballot paper account ") made by the presiding officer showing the number of ballot papers entrusted to him, and accounting for them under the heads of—

(a) ballot papers in the ballot box;

(b) unused and spoilt ballot papers;

(c) tendered ballot papers.

COUNTING OF VOTES.

Appointment of counting agents.

28.—(1) Each candidate may appoint an agent (in this Schedule referred to as " a counting agent ") to attend at the counting of the votes.

(2) Notice in writing of every appointment, stating the name and address of the person appointed, shall be given by the candidate to the returning officer two clear days at least before the opening of the poll; and the returning officer may refuse to admit to the place where the votes are counted any counting agent whose name and address has not been so given, notwithstanding that his appointment may be otherwise valid, and any notice required to be given to a counting agent by the returning officer may be delivered at or sent by post to the address stated in the notice.

(3) If a counting agent dies, or becomes incapable of acting, the candidate may appoint another counting agent in his place, and shall forthwith give to the returning officer notice in writing of the name and address of the counting agent so appointed.

29. The returning officer shall make arrangements for counting the votes in the presence of the counting agents as soon as practicable after the close of the poll, and shall give to the agents notice in writing of the time and place at which he will begin to count the votes.

The Count.

30. Except with the consent of the returning officer, no person other than the returning officer, the persons appointed to assist him, and the candidates and their counting agents may be present at the counting of the votes.

31. Before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall, in the presence of the counting agents, open each ballot box and, taking out the ballot papers therein, shall count and record the number thereof, and then mix together the whole of the papers contained in the ballot boxes.

32. The returning officer, while counting and recording the number of ballot papers and counting the votes, shall keep the ballot papers with their faces upwards, and take all proper precautions for preventing any person from seeing the numbers printed on the back of the papers.

33. The returning officer shall, so far as practicable, proceed continuously with counting the votes, allowing only time for refreshment, and excluding (if and so far as he thinks it necessary) the hours between eight o'clock in the evening and nine o'clock on the succeeding morning. During the excluded time the returning officer shall place the ballot papers and other documents relating to the election under his own seal and the seals of such of the counting agents as desire to affix their seals, and shall otherwise take proper precautions for the security of the papers and documents.

Void ballot papers.

34. Any ballot paper—

(a) which does not bear the official mark; or

(b) on which votes are given for more candidates than the elector is entitled to vote for; or

(c) on which anything is written or marked by which the elector can be identified except the printed number on the back; or shall not be counted (a).

(d) which is unmarked or void for uncertainty;

Provided that where the elector is entitled to vote for more than one candidate, the ballot paper shall not be deemed to be void as regards any vote as to which no uncertainty arises, and that vote shall be counted.

35.—(1) The returning officer shall endorse—

(a) the word "rejected" on any ballot paper which under the last preceding paragraph is not to be counted; and

(b) in the case of a ballot paper on which any vote is counted under the proviso to that paragraph, the words "rejected in part" and a memorandum specifying the votes counted.

(2) The returning officer shall in either case add to the endorsement the words "rejection objected to," if an objection is made by any counting agent to his decision.

(a) A ballot paper is validly marked if the voter has so placed his mark as to make it clear for which particular candidate he intended to vote, although the mark as placed is outside the ruled space or parallelogram printed on the paper for its reception (Pontardawe R. D. C. Election, [1907] 2 K. B. 313; 71 J. P. 371; 20 Digest 140, 1147. See also Woodward v. Sarsons (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 733; 39 J. P. 776; 20 Digest 111, 892; Stepney (1886), 4 O'M. & H. 37; Digest Supp.; Buckrose (1886), 4 O'M. & H. 110; 20 Digest 112, 898; Berwick-on-Tweed (1880), 44 L. As to the right of a candidate to be present at the counting, see Clementson v. Mason (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 209; 39 J. P. 360; 20 Digest 104, 839.

ELECTIONS

(3) The returning officer shall draw up a statement showing the number of ballot papers rejected, including those rejected in part, under the several heads of—

(a) want of official mark;

(b) voting for more candidates than entitled to;

(c) writing or mark by which elector could be identified;

(d) unmarked or wholly void for uncertainty;

(e) rejected in part;

and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

36. The decision of the returning officer as to any question arising in respect of any ballot paper shall be final, but shall be subject to review on an election petition questioning the election.

Equality of votes.

37. Where an equality of votes is found to exist, and the addition of a vote would entitle any of the candidates to be declared elected, the returning officer, whether or not entitled to vote in the first instance, may give a casting vote by word of mouth or in writing (a).

Declaration of result.

38.—(1) When the result of the poll has been ascertained, the returning officer shall forthwith declare to be elected the candidate or candidates to whom the majority of votes have been given, and shall as soon as possible publish the name or names of the candidate or candidates elected and the total number of votes given for each candidate, whether elected or not (b).

(2) The returning officer unless he is the clerk of the urban district council shall forthwith return the names of the persons elected to that clerk.

Disposal of ballot papers, etc. after poll.

39. Upon the completion of the counting the returning officer shall seal up in separate packets the counted and rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part. He shall not open the sealed packet of tendered ballot papers or the sealed packet containing the marked copy of the register of electors and counterfoils, but shall proceed, in the presence of the counting agents, to verify the ballot paper account given by each presiding officer by comparing it with the number of ballot papers recorded by him under paragraph 31 of this Part of this Schedule, and the unused and spoilt ballot papers in his possession and the tendered votes list, and shall reseal each sealed packet after examination. The returning officer shall draw up a statement as to the result of the verification and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

40. The returning officer shall forward to the clerk of the urban district council all the packets of ballot papers in his possession, together with the said statements, the ballot paper accounts, tendered votes lists, lists of blind electors assisted by companions, lists of votes marked by the presiding officer, statements relating thereto, declarations made by the companions of blind electors, declarations of inability to read, packets of counterfoils, and marked copies of registers sent by each presiding officer, endorsing on each packet a description of its contents and the date of the election to which they relate, and the name of the urban district or ward for which the election was held.

41.—(1) A county court having jurisdiction in the urban district, or any part thereof, or an election court, on being satisfied by evidence on oath—

(a) that the inspection or production of any rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part; or

(b) that the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils or the inspection of counted ballot papers, is required for the purpose of instituting or maintaining a prosecution for an offence in relation to ballot papers, or for the purpose of a petition questioning an election, may make an order for the inspection or production of any such ballot papers or the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils.

(a) If he votes when there is no tie, a petition will lie (Brittain v. Ritchie (1889), 43 Sol. Jo. 532), and the returning officer will be liable to an action for penalties (Brittain v. Whitehorn, Times, March 30th, 1900).

(b) This publication is entirely different from the declaration of the result of the poll, and cannot alter the effect of a numerical majority of the votes given for any candidate; see Pritchard v. Mayor, etc., of Bangor (1888), 13 App. Cas. 241: 52 J. P. 564; 20 Digest 123, 999.

(2) An order made under this paragraph may be made subject to such conditions as to persons, time, place and mode of inspection or production of ballot papers or of opening the sealed packet of counterfoils as the court may think expedient, and may direct the clerk of the urban district council having custody of the ballot papers and the sealed packet of counterfoils to retain them intact for such period as may be specified in the order.

(3) Any power given to a county court by this paragraph may be exercised by any judge of the county court otherwise than in open court.

(4) In making and carrying into effect an order under this paragraph, care shall be taken that the way in which any particular elector has voted shall not be disclosed, until it has been proved that he voted and his vote has been declared by a competent court to be invalid.

(5) An appeal shall lie to the High Court from any order of a county court made under this paragraph.

42. Except by order of a court made under the last preceding paragraph, no person shall be allowed to inspect any ballot papers in the custody of the clerk of the urban district council or to open the sealed packet of counterfoils.

43. Where an order is made for the production by the clerk of the urban district council of any document in his possession relating to any specified election, the production by that clerk or his agent of the document ordered, in such manner as may be directed by the order, shall be conclusive evidence that the document so produced relates to the specified election; and any endorsement appearing on any packet of ballot papers produced by that clerk or his agent shall be primâ facie evidence of those papers being what they are stated to be by the endorsement. The production from proper custody of a ballot paper purporting to have been used at any election, and of a counterfoil marked with the same printed number and having a number marked thereon in writing shall be primâ facie evidence that the person who voted by that ballot paper was the person who at the time of that election had affixed to his name in the register of electors at that election the same number as the number written on that counterfoil.

44. The clerk of the urban district council shall retain for six months among the records of the urban district all documents relating to an election forwarded to him by the returning officer in pursuance of this Schedule, and then unless otherwise directed by an order made under paragraph 41 of this Part of this Schedule, shall cause them to be destroyed.

45. All documents forwarded by a returning officer in pursuance of this Schedule to the clerk of the urban district council, other than ballot papers and counterfoils, shall, during a period of six months from the day of election, be open to public inspection at such time and in such manner as may be determined by the county council, and the clerk of the urban district council shall supply copies of or extracts from the said documents to any person demanding the same on payment of such fees and subject to such conditions as may be determined by the county council.

46. Subject to the provisions of this Part of this Schedule, the clerk of the urban district council shall, in respect of the custody and destruction of ballot papers and other documents coming into his possession in pursuance of this Part of this Schedule, be subject to the directions of the urban district council.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

47. The returning officer may, if he thinks fit, preside at a polling station, and the provisions of this Part of this Schedule relating to a presiding officer shall apply to a returning officer so presiding with the necessary modifications as to things to be done by the returning officer to the presiding officer, or by the presiding officer to the returning officer.

48.—(1) No returning officer, or officer appointed under this Schedule, or any partner or clerk of any such officer, shall act as a polling or counting agent.

(2) If any returning officer, or officer appointed under this Part of this Schedule, or the partner or clerk of any such officer, acts as a polling or counting agent in contravention of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

49. No person shall be appointed to act as an officer under this Part of this Schedule for the purposes of an election who has been employed by or on behalf of a candidate in or about the election.

50. A presiding officer may do, by the officers appointed to assist him, any act which he is required or authorised by this Part of this Schedule to do at a polling station except ordering the arrest, exclusion, or removal of any person from the polling station.

51. A candidate may himself do any act or thing which an agent of his, if appointed, would have been authorised or required to do, or may assist his agent in doing any such act or thing, but before acting under this paragraph the candidate shall make the declaration of secrecy required to be made by agents.

52. Where in this Part of this Schedule any act or thing is required or authorised to be done in the presence of the agents of the candidates, the non-attendance of any agents or agent at the time and place appointed for the purpose shall not, if the act or thing is otherwise duly done, invalidate the act or thing done.

Prohibition of disclosure of vote.

53. No person who has voted at an election shall, in any legal proceeding to question the election, be required to state for whom he has voted.

Requirement of Secrecy.

54.—(1) Every returning officer, and every officer, polling agent or counting agent, authorised to attend at a polling station or at the counting of the votes, shall, before the opening of the poll, or in the case of an agent appointed after the opening of the poll, before acting as such agent, make a declaration of secrecy in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or in a form as near thereto as circumstances admit (a).

(2) In the case of a returning officer the declaration shall be made in the presence of a justice of the peace, and in the case of any other officer or of an agent, the declaration shall be made either in the presence of a justice of the peace or of the returning officer.

(3) Save as aforesaid, no such returning officer, officer or agent shall be required, as such, to make any declaration or to take any oath on the occasion of an election.

(4) Every returning officer, and every officer, polling agent or counting agent in attendance at a polling station or at the counting of the votes, shall maintain and aid in maintaining secrecy of the voting.

(5) No person, being a returning officer, or officer appointed under this Part of this Schedule, or polling agent or counting agent, shall—

(a) except for some purpose authorised by law, communicate before the poll is closed to any person any information as to—

(i) the name or number on the register of any elector who has or has not applied for a ballot paper or voted at a polling station; or

(ii) the official mark; or

(b) ascertain or attempt to ascertain at the counting of the votes, the number on the back of any ballot paper; or

(c) communicate any information obtained at the counting of the votes, as to the candidate for whom any vote is given on any particular ballot paper.

(6) No person, whether or not such an officer, polling agent or counting agent as aforesaid, shall—

(a) interfere with or attempt to interfere with an elector when recording his vote; or

(b) otherwise obtain or attempt to obtain in a polling station information as to the candidate for whom an elector in that station is about to vote or has voted; or

(c) communicate at any time to any person any information obtained in a polling station as to the candidate for whom an elector in that station is about to vote or has voted, or as to the number on the back of the ballot paper given to an elector at that station; or

(d) directly or indirectly induce an elector to display his ballot paper after he has marked it so as to make known to any person the name of the candidate for or against whom he has so marked his vote.

(7) No person having undertaken to assist a blind elector to vote shall communicate at any time to any person any information as to the candidate for whom that elector intends to vote or has voted, or as to the number on the back of the ballot paper given for the use of that elector.

(8) If any person acts in contravention of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months.

55. Any justice of the peace, any returning officer and any presiding officer may take any declaration authorised by this Part of this Schedule to be made before him.

Keeping of order in station.

56.—(1) It shall be the duty of the presiding officer to keep order at his polling station.

(2) If any person misconducts himself in a polling station, or fails to obey the lawful orders of the presiding officer, he may immediately, by order of the presiding officer, be removed from the polling station by a police officer in or near that station, or by any other person authorised in writing by the returning officer to remove him; and the person so removed shall not, without the permission of the presiding officer, again enter the polling station during the day.

(3) Any person so removed may, if charged with the commission in the polling station of an offence, be dealt with as a person taken into custody by a police officer for an offence without a warrant.

(4) The powers conferred by this paragraph shall not be exercised so as to prevent an elector who is otherwise entitled to vote at a polling station from having an opportunity of voting at that station.

Spoilt ballot papers.

24. An elector who has inadvertently dealt with his ballot paper in such manner that it cannot be conveniently used as a ballot paper may, on delivering it to the presiding officer and proving the fact of the inadvertence to the satisfaction of the presiding officer, obtain another ballot paper in the place of the ballot paper so delivered up (in this Schedule called " a spoilt ballot paper "), and the spoilt ballot paper shall be immediately cancelled.

Powers of presiding officer in adjourning poll.

25. For the purpose of the adjournment of the poll in the event of riot or open violence and of every other enactment relating to the poll, a presiding officer shall have the power by law belonging to a presiding officer at a parliamentary election.

Packets of ballot papers, etc., to be sealed.

26. As soon as practicable after the close of the poll, the presiding officer shall, in the presence of the polling agents, make up into separate packets, sealed with his own seal and the seals of such polling agents as desire to affix their seals,—

(a) each ballot box in use at his station, sealed so as to prevent the introduction of additional ballot papers and unopened, but with the key attached;

(b) the unused and spoilt ballot papers, placed together;

(c) the tendered ballot papers;

(d) the marked copies of the register of electors and the counterfoils of the ballot papers;

(e) the tendered votes list, the list of blind electors assisted by companions, the list of votes marked by the presiding officer, a statement of the number of electors whose votes are so marked by the presiding officer under the heads " physical incapacity," " Jews," and " unable to read," the declarations made by the companions of blind electors, and the declarations of inability to read; and shall deliver the packets to the returning officer to be taken charge of by him.

(a) For forms, see post, p. 2573.

ELECTIONS

27. The packets shall be accompanied by a statement (in this Schedule referred to as "the ballot paper account") made by the presiding officer showing the number of ballot papers entrusted to him, and accounting for them under the heads of—

(a) ballot papers in the ballot box;

(b) unused and spoilt ballot papers,

(c) tendered ballot papers.

COUNTING OF VOTES

Appointment of counting agents.

28.—(1) Each candidate may appoint an agent (in this Schedule referred to as "a counting agent") to attend at the counting of the votes.

(2) Notice in writing of every appointment, stating the name and address of the person appointed, shall be given by the candidate to the returning officer two clear days at least before the opening of the poll; and the returning officer may refuse to admit to the place where the votes are counted any counting agent whose name and address has not been so given, notwithstanding that his appointment may be otherwise valid, and any notice required to be given to a counting agent by the returning officer may be delivered at or sent by post to the address stated in the notice.

(3) If a counting agent dies, or becomes incapable of acting, the candidate may appoint another counting agent in his place, and shall forthwith give to the returning officer notice in writing of the name and address of the counting agent so appointed.

29. The returning officer shall make arrangements for counting the votes in the presence of the counting agents as soon as practicable after the close of the poll, and shall give to the agents notice in writing of the time and place at which he will begin to count the votes.

The count.

30. Except with the consent of the returning officer, no person other than the returning officer, the persons appointed to assist him, and the candidates and their counting agents may be present at the counting of the votes.

31.—(1) If a poll has been taken for the election of rural district councillors only, before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall in the presence of the counting agents, open each ballot box, and taking out the papers therein, shall count and record the number thereof, and then mix together the whole of the ballot papers contained in the ballot boxes.

(2) If polls have been taken together for the election both of rural district councillors and of parish councillors, before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall, in the presence of the counting agents, open one of the ballot boxes and taking out the papers therein shall separate those relating to the election of rural district councillors from any relating to the election of parish councillors, and shall count and record the number of ballot papers relating to each election. He shall then place the ballot papers relating to each election in separate packets, and shall proceed in like manner with any other ballot boxes and papers therein. When all the ballot boxes and the papers therein have been so dealt with, he shall take all the packets of ballot papers relating to one election, and shall mix all such papers together and shall proceed to count the votes, keeping apart the papers relating to any other election until he has completed such counting. He shall afterwards deal in manner aforesaid with the packets and papers relating to the other election or elections.

32. The returning officer, while counting and recording the number of ballot papers and counting the votes, shall keep the ballot papers with their faces upwards, and take all proper precautions for preventing any person from seeing the numbers printed on the back of the papers.

33. The returning officer shall, so far as practicable, proceed continuously with counting the votes, allowing only time for refreshment, and excluding (if and so far as he thinks it necessary) the hours between eight o'clock in the evening and nine o'clock on the succeeding morning. During the excluded time the returning officer shall place the ballot papers and other documents relating to the election under his own seal and the seals of such of the counting agents as desire to affix their seals, and shall otherwise take proper precautions for the security of the papers and documents.

Void ballot papers.

34. Any ballot paper—

(a) which does not bear the official mark; or

(b) on which votes are given for more candidates than the elector is entitled to vote for; or

(c) on which anything is written or marked by which the elector can be identified except the printed number on the back; or

(d) which is unmarked or void for uncertainty;

shall not be counted (a):

Provided that where the elector is entitled to vote for more than one candidate, the ballot paper shall not be deemed to be void as regards any vote as to which no uncertainty arises, and that vote shall be counted.

35.—(1) The returning officer shall endorse—

(a) the word "rejected" on any ballot paper which under the last preceding paragraph is not to be counted; and

(b) in the case of a ballot paper on which any vote is counted under the proviso to that paragraph, the words "rejected in part" and a memorandum specifying the votes counted.

(2) The returning officer shall in either case add to the endorsement the words "rejection objected to," if an objection is made by any counting agent to his decision.

(3) The returning officer shall draw up a statement showing the number of ballot papers rejected, including those rejected in part, under the several heads of—

(a) want of official mark;

(b) voting for more candidates than entitled to;

(c) writing or mark by which elector could be identified;

(d) unmarked or wholly void for uncertainty;

(e) rejected in part;

and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

36. The decision of the returning officer as to any question arising in respect of any ballot paper shall be final, but shall be subject to review on an election petition questioning the election.

Equality of votes.

37. Where an equality of votes is found to exist, and the addition of a vote would entitle any of the candidates to be declared elected, the returning officer, whether or not entitled to vote in the first instance, may give a casting vote by word of mouth or in writing (b).

Declaration of result.

38.—(1) When the result of the poll has been ascertained, the returning officer shall forthwith declare to be elected the candidate or candidates to whom the majority of votes have been given, and shall as soon as possible publish the name or names of the candidate or candidates elected and the total number of votes given for each candidate, whether elected or not (c).

(2) The returning officer unless he is the clerk of the rural district council shall forthwith return the names of the persons elected to that clerk.

Disposal of ballot papers, etc., after poll.

39. Upon the completion of the counting the returning officer shall seal up in separate packets the counted and rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part. He shall not open the sealed packet of tendered ballot papers or the sealed packet containing the marked copy of the register of electors and counterfoils, but shall proceed, in the presence of the counting agents, to verify the ballot paper account given by each presiding officer by comparing it with the number of ballot papers recorded by him under paragraph 31 of this Part of this Schedule, and the unused and spoilt ballot papers in his possession and the tendered votes list, and shall reseal each sealed packet after examination. The returning officer shall draw up a statement as to the result of the verification and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

(b) See note (a), ante, p. 2550.
(c) See note (b), ante, p. 2550.

ELECTIONS

40. The returning officer shall forward to the clerk of the rural district council all the packets of ballot papers in his possession, together with the said statements, the ballot paper accounts, tendered votes lists, lists of blind electors assisted by companions, lists of votes marked by the presiding officer, statements relating thereto, declarations made by the companions of blind electors, declarations of inability to read, packets of counterfoils, and marked copies of registers, sent by each presiding officer, endorsing on each packet a description of its contents and the date of the election to which they relate, and the name of the parish or other electoral area for which the election was held.

41.—(1) A county court having jurisdiction in the rural district, or any part thereof, or an election court, on being satisfied by evidence on oath—

(a) that the inspection or production of any rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part; or

(b) that the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils or the inspection of counted ballot papers,

is required for the purpose of instituting or maintaining a prosecution for an offence in relation to ballot papers, or for the purpose of a petition questioning an election, may make an order for the inspection or production of any such ballot papers or the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils.

(2) An order made under this paragraph may be made subject to such conditions as to persons, time, place and mode of inspection or production of ballot papers or of opening the sealed packet of counterfoils as the court may think expedient, and may direct the clerk of the rural district council having custody of the ballot papers and the sealed packet of counterfoils to retain them intact for such period as may be specified in the order.

(3) Any power given to a county court by this paragraph may be exercised by any judge of the county court otherwise than in open court.

(4) In making and carrying into effect an order under this paragraph, care shall be taken that the way in which any particular elector has voted shall not be disclosed, until it has been proved that he voted and his vote has been declared by a competent court to be invalid.

(5) An appeal shall lie to the High Court from any order of a county court made under this paragraph.

42. Except by order of a court made under the last preceding paragraph, no person shall be allowed to inspect any ballot papers in the custody of the clerk of the rural district council or to open the sealed packet of counterfoils.

43. Where an order is made for the production by the clerk of the rural district council of any document in his possession relating to any specified election, the production by that clerk or his agent of the document ordered, in such manner as may be directed by the order, shall be conclusive evidence that the document so produced relates to the specified election; and any endorsement appearing on any packet of ballot papers produced by that clerk or his agent shall be primâ facie evidence of those papers being what they are stated to be by the endorsement. The production from proper custody of a ballot paper purporting to have been used at any election, and of a counterfoil marked with the same printed number and having a number marked thereon in writing shall be primâ facie evidence that the person who voted by that ballot paper was the person who at the time of that election had affixed to his name in the register of electors at that election the same number as the number written on that counterfoil.

44. The clerk of the rural district council shall retain for six months among the records of the rural district all documents relating to an election forwarded to him by the returning officer in pursuance of this Schedule, and then, unless otherwise directed by an order made under paragraph 41 of this Part of this Schedule, shall cause them to be destroyed.

45. All documents forwarded by a returning officer in pursuance of this Schedule to the clerk of the rural district council, other than ballot papers and counterfoils, shall, during a period of six months from the day of election, be open to public inspection at such time and in such manner as may be determined by the county council, and the clerk of the rural district council shall supply copies of or extracts from the said documents to any person demanding the same on payment of such fees and subject to such conditions as may be determined by the county council.

46. Subject to the provisions of this Part of this Schedule, the clerk of the rural district council shall, in respect of the custody and destruction of ballot papers and other documents coming into his possession in pursuance of this Part of this Schedule, be subject to the directions of the rural district council.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

47. The returning officer may, if he thinks fit, preside at a polling station, and the provisions of this Part of this Schedule relating to a presiding officer shall apply to a

52. Where in this Part of this Schedule any act or thing is required or authorised to be done in the presence of the agents of the candidates, the non-attendance of any agents or agent at the time and place appointed for the purpose shall not, if the act or thing is otherwise duly done, invalidate the act or thing done.

Prohibition of disclosure of vote.

53. No person who has voted at an election shall, in any legal proceeding to question the election, be required to state for whom he has voted.

Requirement of Secrecy.

54.—(1) Every returning officer, and every officer, polling agent or counting agent, authorised to attend at a polling station or at the counting of the votes, shall, before the opening of the poll, or in the case of an agent appointed after the opening of the poll, before acting as such agent, make a declaration of secrecy in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or in a form as near thereto as circumstances admit (a).

(2) In the case of a returning officer the declaration shall be made in the presence of a justice of the peace, and in the case of any other officer or of an agent, the declaration shall be made either in the presence of a justice of the peace or of the returning officer.

(3) Any person so removed may, if charged with the commission in the polling station of an offence, be dealt with as a person taken into custody by a police officer for an offence without a warrant.

Returning Officer.

2.—(1) The clerk of the council of the rural district in which the parish is situate shall be the returning officer, and if at an election of parish councillors the office of clerk of the rural district council is vacant, or the clerk is for any reason unwilling or unable to act, the rural district council or the chairman thereof shall forthwith appoint another person to be the returning officer at that election:

Nomination Papers to be asked for by Chairman.

7. The chairman of the meeting shall ask at the meeting that nomination papers be delivered to him, and they shall thereupon be delivered to him. He shall number them in the order in which they are received by him; and the first valid nomination paper received by him in respect of a candidate shall be deemed to be the nomination paper of that candidate.

If Chairman of Meeting is a Candidate.

8. If the chairman of the meeting is nominated for election, and he does not forthwith withdraw his candidature, he shall call upon the meeting to appoint some other person to take the chair. The meeting shall forthwith proceed to appoint some other person to take the chair, and as soon as such other person is appointed he shall become the chairman of the meeting, and the original chairman shall vacate the chair.

Decision as to Validity of Nomination.

9.—(1) The chairman shall examine the nomination papers, and decide whether the candidates have been validly nominated in accordance with the provisions of this Schedule.

(2) Where the chairman decides that a candidate has been so validly nominated, his decision shall be final and shall not be questioned in any proceeding whatsoever.

(3) Where the chairman decides that a candidate has not been so validly nominated, he shall endorse and sign on the nomination paper the fact and reasons for his decision, and shall state the fact and reasons to the meeting.

(4) The decision of the chairman under the last preceding sub-paragraph shall be subject to review on an election petition questioning the election.

Statement as to Persons Nominated.

10. When it appears to the chairman that all nomination papers have been handed in (including any fresh nomination paper in respect of a candidate who has been decided not to have been validly nominated) and not less than fifteen minutes have elapsed since he took the chair, he shall state to the meeting, in the alphabetical order of the surnames of the candidates, the full name of each candidate and his place of residence and description and the names of his proposer and seconder. After such statement has been made no further nomination papers shall be received except as provided by paragraph 13.

Questions to Candidates.

11. After making the statement as to persons nominated, the chairman shall give opportunity for putting questions to such of the candidates as have been validly nominated and are present, and receiving explanations from them.

Withdrawal of Candidates at Meeting.

12. Before the names of the candidates are put to the meeting, or, if under paragraph 14 the names are not required to be put to the meeting, before the chairman declares the names of the candidates elected, any candidate may withdraw his candidature. Any such withdrawal shall be in writing signed by the candidate, and shall be handed to the chairman; or, if the candidate is present at the meeting, he may by word of mouth declare that he withdraws his candidature, and the chairman shall thereupon write "Candidature withdrawn" on the back of the nomination paper, and the candidate shall sign his name or initials thereto. Except as aforesaid, no candidature shall be withdrawn at the meeting.

Additional Nominations.

13.—(1) If by reason of any withdrawal under the foregoing paragraph the number of candidates becomes less than the number of councillors to be elected, the chairman shall, if desired by any local government elector present at the meeting, allow a reasonable time at the meeting during which further nomination papers may be handed in to him.

(2) If any additional nomination papers are so delivered, the provisions of paragraphs 9, 10 and 11 shall apply, and the chairman shall proceed accordingly.

(3) The provisions of paragraph 12 shall apply to a candidate validly nominated in accordance with this paragraph.

ELECTIONS

Candidates not more than number to be elected.

14. If the number of candidates remaining validly nominated is not more than the number of councillors to be elected, those candidates shall be deemed to be elected and shall be declared by the chairman to be elected.

Candidates exceed Number to be Elected—Voting.

15. If the number of candidates remaining validly nominated exceeds the number of councillors to be elected, the chairman shall put separately to the meeting the names of those candidates in the alphabetical order of their surnames and shall take the votes by show of hands in favour only of each candidate and shall count the votes so given for each candidate.

Statement as to Result of Voting.

16. As soon as the votes have been counted, the chairman shall—

(a) state to the meeting the number of votes given for each candidate ;

(b) declare to be elected, subject to a poll having to be taken, the candidates (up to the number of councillors to be elected) whom he names, being those to whom the majority of votes have been given ;

(c) read to the meeting paragraph 18 of this Part of this Schedule ; and (d) ask whether a poll is demanded.

Conclusion of Meeting.

17. The meeting shall not be concluded until at least five minutes after the chairman has asked whether a poll is demanded.

Demand for Poll.

18. A demand may be made before the conclusion of the meeting for a poll to be taken as to which of the candidates whose names have been put to the meeting by the chairman shall be elected ; but a poll shall not be taken unless either the chairman consents or the poll is demanded by not less than five, or one-third, of the local government electors present at the meeting, whichever is the less.

Withdrawal of Demand for Poll.

19.—(1) If the demand for a poll is withdrawn before the conclusion of the meeting by all the persons who made it, a poll shall not be taken.

(2) If the demand for a poll is withdrawn before the conclusion of the meeting by so many of the persons who made it that the residue of those persons is less than five, or is less than one-third, of the local government electors who were present at the meeting when the demand was made, whichever is the less, the chairman shall decide whether a poll shall be taken or not.

If no Poll, Chairman's Declaration final.

20. If as the result of the proceedings at the meeting a poll has not to be taken, the declaration of the chairman as to the election of the candidates to whom the majority of votes have been given shall be final, and shall not be questioned in any proceedings whatever on the ground that the persons declared to be elected, or any of them, were not duly elected by a majority of lawful votes.

If no Poll, Publication of Result of Election.

21. If no poll is to be taken, the chairman shall, not later than the day after the meeting, publish a list of the persons whom he has declared to be elected under paragraph 14 or paragraph 16, as the case may be, and shall send a copy of that list to the returning officer.

Preliminaries to Poll.

22. If a poll is to be taken, the chairman shall—

(a) on the day after the meeting send by post or otherwise to each candidate whose name has been put to the meeting a notice stating that he has been nominated and that a poll has been demanded and giving the name and address of the returning officer ; and

(b) cause to be delivered to the returning officer not later than 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the day next but one after the meeting—

(ii) the remainder of the nomination papers ;

(iii) a statement of the names of any candidates who were decided not to be validly nominated or whose candidatures were withdrawn at the meeting.

Withdrawal of Candidates after Meeting.

23.—(1) If a poll is to be taken, a candidate may after the meeting withdraw from his candidature by notice of withdrawal signed by him and attested by one witness and delivered to the returning officer not later than the time appointed for that purpose by Part II of this Schedule.

(2) If by reason of any withdrawal under this paragraph the number of remaining candidates becomes equal to or less than the number of councillors to be elected, a poll shall not be taken, but those candidates shall be deemed to be elected and the returning officer shall certify the fact to the chairman of the meeting who shall as early as possible publish a list of the persons elected and send a copy to each of them.

Supplemental Provisions.

24. For the purposes of this Part of this Schedule a person shall be deemed to be registered as a local government elector for a parish or parish ward, if he is registered in the register of local government electors for that parish or parish ward which will be in force on the day of election, or if, pending the coming into force of that register, his name appears in the electors lists for that register as corrected by the registration officer.

(a) provide a sufficient number of polling stations for the electors, and allot the electors to the polling stations in such manner as he thinks most convenient;

(b) appoint a presiding officer to preside at each polling station, and such other officers (including poll clerks) as may be necessary for taking the poll and counting the votes;

(c) furnish each polling station with such number of compartments as may be necessary in which the electors can mark their votes screened from observation;

(d) furnish each presiding officer with such number of ballot boxes and ballot papers (b) as in the opinion of the returning officer may be necessary;

(e) provide each polling station with materials to enable electors to mark the ballot papers, with instruments for stamping thereon the official mark, and with copies of the register of electors for the parish or parish ward, as the case may be, or such part thereof as contains the names of the electors allotted to vote at the station;

(f) do such other act and things as may be necessary for effectually conducting the election in manner provided by this Schedule.

8. One or more polling stations may be provided in the same room, but no premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor shall be used for a polling station.

9. A notice, in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule (c), or as near thereto as circumstances admit, giving directions for the guidance of electors in voting, shall be exhibited outside every polling station, and in every compartment in the polling station.

(a) See note (b), ante, p. 2544.

(b) For form of ballot paper, see Part IV, Form A, post, p. 2595.

(c) For form of notice, see Part IV, Form B, post, p. 2596.

ELECTIONS

Ballot boxes, ballot papers, official mark.

10. Every ballot box shall be so constructed that the ballot papers can be put therein, but cannot be withdrawn therefrom, without the box being unlocked.

11. Every ballot paper shall be in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule or as near thereto as circumstances admit and—

(a) shall contain the full names, places of residence and descriptions of the candidates as shown on their respective nomination papers and arranged alphabetically in the order of their surnames and (if there are two or more candidates with the same surname) of their other names;

(b) shall be capable of being folded up;

(c) shall have a number printed on the back;

(d) shall have attached a counterfoil with the same number printed on the face; and

(e) shall be of a different colour from that of any ballot papers used in an election of rural district councillors held on the same date and for the same area.

12. The official mark shall be kept secret.

Appointment of polling agents.

13.—(1) The candidates severally or jointly may appoint agents (in this Schedule referred to as "polling agents") to attend at the polling stations for the purpose of detecting personation; but not more than one polling agent shall be permitted to attend at any polling station on behalf of the same candidate, nor shall more than three polling agents be permitted to attend at any polling station (a).

(2) Notice in writing of any appointment, stating the names and addresses of the persons appointed, shall be given by the candidate or candidates to the returning officer two clear days at least before the opening of the poll; and if in respect of any polling station the number of polling agents exceeds the number permitted by this paragraph to attend, the returning officer shall determine which of them shall be permitted to attend, giving preference, so far as circumstances allow, to those appointed by the larger number of candidates.

(3) If a polling agent dies, or becomes incapable of acting, the candidate or candidates may appoint another polling agent in his place, and shall forthwith give to the returning officer notice in writing of the name and address of the polling agent so appointed.

(4) Subject to the provisions of this paragraph, a polling agent in respect of whom such notice as aforesaid has been given may, during the hours of the poll, attend at the polling station to which he has been appointed.

Admission to polling station.

14.—(1) No person shall be admitted to vote at any polling station except at the one allotted to him.

(2) The presiding officer shall regulate the number of electors to be admitted to the polling station at the same time, and shall exclude all other persons except the candidates, the polling agents, the officers appointed under this Schedule, the police officers on duty, and any person accompanying a blind elector for the purpose of assisting him to vote.

(3) Nothing in this paragraph shall affect the provisions of the Police Disabilities Removal Act, 1887, as applied to elections of parish councillors by the Police Disabilities Removal Act, 1893.

Ballot boxes to be sealed.

15. Immediately before the commencement of the poll, the presiding officer shall show the ballot box empty to such persons, if any, as may be present in the polling station, so that they may see that it is empty, and shall then lock it up and place his seal upon it in such manner as to prevent it being opened without breaking the seal, and shall place it in his view for the receipt of ballot papers, and keep it so locked and sealed.

Questions to be put to electors.

16.—(1) The presiding officer may, and, if required by two local government electors or by a candidate or his polling agent, shall, put to any person applying for a ballot paper at the time of his application, but not afterwards, the following questions, or either of them, that is to say:—

(a) Are you the person registered in the register of local government electors now in force for this [parish] [parish ward] as follows [read the whole entry from the register]?

(a) See note (c), ante, p. 2545.

(b) Have you already voted at the present election [adding in the case of an election for for several parish wards in this or any other parish ward]?

(2) A ballot paper shall not be delivered to any person required to answer the above questions, or either of them, unless he has answered the question or questions satisfactorily (a).

(3) Save as by this paragraph authorised, no inquiry shall be permitted as to the right of any person to vote.

Challenge of elector by polling agent.

17.—(1) If at the time a person applies for a ballot paper, or after he has applied for a ballot paper and before he has left the polling station, a polling agent declares to the presiding officer that he has reasonable cause to believe that the applicant has committed an offence of personation under the Local Government Act, 1933, and undertakes to substantiate the charge in a court of law, the presiding officer may order a police officer to arrest the applicant, and the order of the presiding officer shall be sufficient authority for the police officer so to do.

(2) A person against whom a declaration is made under this paragraph by a polling agent shall not, by reason thereof, be prevented from voting, but the presiding officer shall cause the words "protested against for personation" to be placed against his name in the marked copy of the register of electors.

(3) A person arrested under the provisions of this paragraph shall be dealt with as a person taken into custody by a police officer for an offence without a warrant.

Marking of ballot papers.

18. A ballot paper shall be delivered to an elector who applies therefor, and immediately before delivery—

(a) the ballot paper shall be marked with the official mark, either embossed or perforated;

(b) the number, name, and description of the elector as stated in the copy of the register shall be called out;

(c) the number of the elector shall be marked on the counterfoil together with the distinctive letter of the parliamentary polling district in which the elector is registered, and the distinguishing sign, if any; and

(d) a mark shall be placed in the register against the number of the elector to denote that he has received a ballot paper, but without showing the particular ballot paper which he has received.

19. The elector, on receiving the ballot paper, shall forthwith proceed into one of the compartments in the polling station and there secretly mark his paper and fold it up so as to conceal his vote, and shall then show to the presiding officer the back of the paper, so as to disclose the official mark, and put the ballot paper, so folded up, into the ballot box in the presence of the presiding officer. The elector shall vote without undue delay, and shall leave the polling station as soon as he has put his ballot paper into the ballot box.

20.—(1) The presiding officer, on the application of—

(a) an elector who is incapacitated by blindness or other physical cause from voting in manner directed by this Schedule; or

(b) if the poll is taken on a Saturday, of an elector who declares that he is a Jew, and objects on religious grounds to vote in manner directed by this Schedule; or shall, in the presence of the polling agents, cause the vote of the elector to be marked on a ballot paper in manner directed by the elector, and the ballot paper to be placed in the ballot box.

(c) of an elector who makes a declaration that he is unable to read (in this Schedule referred to as "the declaration of inability to read" (b))

(2) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is marked in pursuance of this paragraph, and the reason why it is so marked, shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the list of votes marked by the presiding officer").

21.—(1) Where an elector who is accompanied by another person makes application to the presiding officer to be allowed on the ground of blindness to vote with the assistance of the person accompanying him (in this Schedule referred to as "the companion"), the presiding officer shall require the elector to declare orally whether he is so incapacitated by his blindness as to be unable to vote without assistance.

(a) See note (a), ante, p. 2546.

(b) For form of declaration of inability to read, see Part IV, Form D, post, p. 2596.

ELECTIONS

(2) If the presiding officer is satisfied that the elector is so incapacitated and is also satisfied by a written declaration made by the companion (in this Schedule referred to as "the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector" (a)) that the companion is a qualified person within the meaning of this paragraph and has not previously assisted more than one blind person to vote at the election then being held, the presiding officer shall grant the application, and thereupon anything which is by this Schedule required to be done to or by the said elector in connection with the giving of his vote, may be done to, or with the assistance of, the companion, as the case may be.

(3) For the purposes of this paragraph a person shall be qualified to assist a blind elector to vote, if that person is either—

(a) a person who is entitled to vote at the election then being held; or

(b) the father, mother, brother, sister, husband, wife, son or daughter of the blind elector and has attained the age of twenty-one years.

(4) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is given in accordance with this paragraph and the name and address of the companion shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the list of blind electors assisted by companions").

22.—(1) The declaration of inability to read and the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector—

(a) shall be in the appropriate form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances admit; and

(b) shall be made before the presiding officer at the time when the elector applies for a ballot paper or applies to vote with the assistance of the companion, as the case may be, and shall forthwith be handed to the presiding officer, who shall attest and retain it.

(2) No fee, stamp or other payment shall be charged in respect of the declaration (b).

Tendered ballot papers.

23. If a person, representing himself to be a particular elector named on the register, applies for a ballot paper after another person has voted as such elector, the applicant shall, upon satisfactorily answering the questions set out in paragraph 16 of this Part of this Schedule, be entitled to mark a ballot paper in the same manner as any other elector, but the ballot paper (in this Schedule called "a tendered ballot paper") shall be of a colour differing from the other ballot papers, and instead of being put into the ballot box shall be given to the presiding officer and endorsed by him with the name of the elector and his number in the register of electors, and set aside in a separate packet, and shall not be counted by the returning officer; and the name of the elector and his number on the register together with the distinctive letter of the parliamentary polling district and the distinguishing sign, if any, shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the tendered votes list").

Spoilt ballot papers.

24. An elector who has inadvertently dealt with his ballot paper in such manner that it cannot be conveniently used as a ballot paper may, on delivering it to the presiding officer and proving the fact of the inadvertence to the satisfaction of the presiding officer, obtain another ballot paper in the place of the ballot paper so delivered up (in this Schedule called "a spoilt ballot paper"), and the spoilt ballot paper shall be immediately cancelled.

Powers of presiding officer in adjourning poll.

25. For the purpose of the adjournment of the poll in the event of riot or open violence and of every other enactment relating to the poll, a presiding officer shall have the power by law belonging to a presiding officer at a parliamentary election.

Packets of ballot papers, etc., to be sealed.

26. As soon as practicable after the close of the poll, the presiding officer shall, in the presence of the polling agents, make up into separate packets, sealed with his own seal and the seals of such polling agents as desire to affix their seals,—

(a) each ballot box in use at his station, sealed so as to prevent the introduction of additional ballot papers and unopened, but with the key attached;

(b) the unused and spoilt ballot papers, placed together;

(a) For form of declaration made by companion of a blind elector, see Part IV, Form E, post, p. 2597.

(b) For forms, see post, pp. 2596, 2597.

(c) the tendered ballot papers;

(d) the marked copies of the register of electors and the counterfoils of the ballot papers;

(e) the tendered votes list, the list of blind electors assisted by companions, the list of votes marked by the presiding officer, a statement of the number of electors whose votes are so marked by the presiding officer under the heads "physical incapacity," "Jews," and "unable to read," the declarations made by the companions of blind electors, and the declarations of inability to read;

and shall deliver the packets to the returning officer to be taken charge of by him.

27. The packets shall be accompanied by a statement (in this Schedule referred to as "the ballot paper account") made by the presiding officer showing the number of ballot papers entrusted to him, and accounting for them under the heads of—

(a) ballot papers in the ballot box;

(b) unused and spoilt ballot papers;

(c) tendered ballot papers.

COUNTING OF VOTES.

Appointment of counting agents.

28.—(1) Each candidate may appoint an agent (in this Schedule referred to as "a counting agent") to attend at the counting of the votes.

(2) Notice in writing of every appointment, stating the name and address of the person appointed, shall be given by the candidate to the returning officer two clear days at least before the opening of the poll; and the returning officer may refuse to admit to the place where the votes are counted any counting agent whose name and address has not been so given, notwithstanding that his appointment may be otherwise valid, and any notice required to be given to a counting agent by the returning officer may be delivered at or sent by post to the address stated in the notice.

(3) If a counting agent dies, or becomes incapable of acting, the candidate may appoint another counting agent in his place, and shall forthwith give to the returning officer notice in writing of the name and address of the counting agent so appointed.

29. The returning officer shall make arrangements for counting the votes in the presence of the counting agents as soon as practicable after the close of the poll, and shall give to the agents notice in writing of the time and place at which he will begin to count the votes.

The count.

30. Except with the consent of the returning officer, no person other than the returning officer, the persons appointed to assist him, and the candidates and their counting agents may be present at the counting of the votes.

31.—(1) If a poll has been taken for the election of parish councillors only, before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall in the presence of the counting agents, open each ballot box, and taking out the papers therein, shall count and record the number thereof, and then mix together the whole of the ballot papers contained in the ballot boxes.

(2) If polls have been taken together for the election both of parish councillors and of rural district councillors, before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall, in the presence of the counting agents, open one of the ballot boxes and taking out the papers therein shall separate those relating to the election of parish councillors from any relating to the election of rural district councillors, and shall count and record the number of ballot papers relating to each election. He shall then place the ballot papers relating to each election in separate packets, and shall proceed in like manner with any other ballot boxes and papers therein. When all the ballot boxes and the papers therein have been so dealt with, he shall take all the packets of ballot papers relating to one election, and shall mix all such papers together and shall proceed to count the votes, keeping apart the papers relating to any other election until he has completed such counting. He shall afterwards deal in manner aforesaid with the packets and papers relating to the other election or elections.

32. The returning officer, while counting and recording the number of ballot papers and counting the votes, shall keep the ballot papers with their faces upwards, and take all proper precautions for preventing any person from seeing the numbers printed on the back of the papers.

33. The returning officer shall, so far as practicable, proceed continuously with counting the votes, allowing only time for refreshment, and excluding (if and so far as he thinks it necessary) the hours between eight o'clock in the evening and nine o'clock on the succeeding morning. During the excluded time the returning officer shall place the ballot papers and other documents relating to the election under his own seal and the seals of such of the counting agents as desire to affix their seals, and shall otherwise take proper precautions for the security of the papers and documents.

Void ballot papers.

34. Any ballot paper—

(a) which does not bear the official mark; or

(b) on which votes are given for more candidates than the elector is entitled to vote for; or

(c) on which anything is written or marked by which the elector can be identified except the printed number on the back; or

(d) which is unmarked or void for uncertainty;

shall not be counted (a):

Provided that where the elector is entitled to vote for more than one candidate, the ballot paper shall not be deemed to be void as regards any vote as to which no uncertainty arises, and that vote shall be counted.

35.—(1) The returning officer shall endorse—

(a) the word "rejected" on any ballot paper which under the last preceding paragraph is not to be counted; and

(b) in the case of a ballot paper on which any vote is counted under the proviso to that paragraph, the words "rejected in part" and a memorandum specifying the votes counted.

(2) The returning officer shall in either case add to the endorsement the words "rejection objected to," if an objection is made by any counting agent to his decision.

(3) The returning officer shall draw up a statement showing the number of ballot papers rejected, including those rejected in part, under the several heads of—

(a) want of official mark;

(b) voting for more candidates than entitled to;

(c) writing or mark by which elector could be identified;

(d) unmarked or wholly void for uncertainty;

(e) rejected in part;

and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

36. The decision of the returning officer as to any question arising in respect of any ballot paper shall be final, but shall be subject to review on an election petition questioning the election.

Equality of votes.

37. Where an equality of votes is found to exist, and the addition of a vote would entitle any of the candidates to be declared elected, the returning officer, whether or not entitled to vote in the first instance, may give a casting vote by word of mouth or in writing (b).

Declaration of result.

38.—(1) When the result of the poll has been ascertained, the returning officer shall forthwith declare to be elected the candidate or candidates to whom the majority of votes have been given, and shall as soon as possible publish the name or names of the candidate or candidates elected and the total number of votes given for each candidate, whether elected or not (c).

(2) The returning officer shall forthwith return the names of the persons elected to the clerk of the parish council or, if there is no such clerk, to the chairman of the parish council or, if there is no such chairman, to the chairman of the parish meeting for the parish.

Disposal of ballot papers, &c., after poll.

39. Upon the completion of the counting the returning officer shall seal up in separate packets the counted and rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part. He shall not open the sealed packet of tendered ballot papers or the sealed packet containing the marked copy of the register of electors and counterfoils, but shall proceed, in the presence of the counting agents, to verify the ballot paper account given by each presiding officer by comparing it with the number of ballot papers recorded by him under paragraph 31 of this Part of this Schedule, and the unused and spoilt ballot papers in his possession and the tendered votes list, and shall reseal each sealed packet after examination. The returning officer shall draw up a statement as to the result of the verification and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

40. The returning officer shall forward to the clerk of the council of the rural district in which the parish is situate all the packets of ballot papers in his possession together with the said statements, the ballot paper accounts, tendered votes lists, lists of blind electors assisted by companions, lists of votes marked by the presiding officer, statements relating thereto, declarations made by the companions of blind electors, declarations of inability to read, packets of counterfoils, and marked copies of registers, sent by each presiding officer, endorsing on each packet a description of its contents and the date of the election to which they relate, and the name of the parish or parish ward for which the election was held.

41.—(1) A county court having jurisdiction in the parish, or any part thereof, or an election court, on being satisfied by evidence on oath—

(a) that the inspection or production of any rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part; or

(b) that the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils or the inspection of counted ballot papers,

is required for the purpose of instituting or maintaining a prosecution for an offence in relation to ballot papers, or for the purpose of a petition questioning an election, may make an order for the inspection or production of any such ballot papers or the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils.

(2) An order made under this paragraph may be made subject to such conditions as to persons, time, place and mode of inspection or production of ballot papers or of opening the sealed packet of counterfoils as the court may think expedient, and may direct the clerk of the rural district council having custody of the ballot papers and the sealed packet of counterfoils to retain them intact for such period as may be specified in the order.

(3) Any power given to a county court by this paragraph may be exercised by any judge of the county court otherwise than in open court.

(4) In making and carrying into effect an order under this paragraph, care shall be taken that the way in which any particular elector has voted shall not be disclosed, until it has been proved that he voted and his vote has been declared by a competent court to be invalid.

(5) An appeal shall lie to the High Court from any order of a county court made under this paragraph.

42. Except by order of a court made under the last preceding paragraph, no person shall be allowed to inspect any ballot papers in the custody of the clerk of the rural district council or to open the sealed packet of counterfoils.

43. Where an order is made for the production by the clerk of the rural district council of any document in his possession relating to any specified election, the production by that clerk or his agent of the document ordered, in such manner as may be directed by the order, shall be conclusive evidence that the document so produced relates to the specified election; and any endorsement appearing on any packet of ballot papers produced by that clerk or his agent shall be primâ facie evidence of those papers being what they are stated to be by the endorsement. The production from proper custody of a ballot paper purporting to have been used at any election, and of a counterfoil marked with the same printed number and having a number marked thereon in writing shall be primâ facie evidence that the person who voted by that ballot paper was the person who at the time of that election had affixed to his name in the register of electors at that election the same number as the number written on that counterfoil.

44. The clerk of the rural district council shall retain for six months among the records of the rural district all documents relating to an election forwarded to him by the returning officer in pursuance of this Schedule, and then, unless otherwise directed by an order made under paragraph 41 of this Part of this Schedule, shall cause them to be destroyed.

45. All documents forwarded by a returning officer in pursuance of this Schedule to the clerk of the rural district council, other than ballot papers and counterfoils, shall, during a period of six months from the day of election, be open to public inspection at such time and in such manner as may be determined by the county council, and the clerk of the rural district council shall supply copies of or extracts from the said documents to any person demanding the same on payment of such fees and subject to such conditions as may be determined by the county council.

46. Subject to the provisions of this Part of this Schedule, the clerk of the rural district council shall, in respect of the custody and destruction of ballot papers and other documents coming into his possession in pursuance of this Part of this Schedule, be subject to the directions of the rural district council.

52. Where in this Part of this Schedule any act or thing is required or authorised to be done in the presence of the agents of the candidates, the non-attendance of any agents or agent at the time and place appointed for the purpose shall not, if the act or thing is otherwise duly done, invalidate the act or thing done.

Prohibition of disclosure of vote.

53. No person who has voted at an election shall, in any legal proceeding to question the election, be required to state for whom he has voted.

Requirement of Secrecy.

54.—(1) Every returning officer, and every officer, polling agent or counting agent, authorised to attend at a polling station or at the counting of the votes, shall, before the opening of the poll, or in the case of an agent appointed after the opening of the poll, before acting as such agent, make a declaration of secrecy in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or in a form as near thereto as circumstances admit (a).

(2) In the case of a returning officer the declaration shall be made in the presence of a justice of the peace, and in the case of any other officer or of an agent, the declaration shall be made either in the presence of a justice of the peace or of the returning officer.

(d) directly or indirectly induce an elector to display his ballot paper after he has marked it so as to make known to any person the name of the candidate for or against whom he has so marked his vote.

(7) No person having undertaken to assist a blind elector to vote shall communicate at any time to any person any information as to the candidate for whom that elector intends to vote or has voted, or as to the number on the back of the ballot paper given for the use of that elector.

(3) Any person so removed may, if charged with the commission in the polling station of an offence, be dealt with as a person taken into custody by a police officer for an offence without a warrant.

(4) The powers conferred by this paragraph shall not be exercised so as to prevent an elector who is otherwise entitled to vote at a polling station from having an opportunity of voting at that station.

The elector will go into one of the compartments, and, with the pencil provided in the compartment, place a cross on the right-hand side of the ballot paper, opposite the name of each candidate for whom he votes, thus X.

The elector will then fold up the ballot paper so as to show the official mark on the back, and leaving the compartment will, without showing the front of the paper to any person, show the official mark on the back to the presiding officer, and then, in the presence of the presiding officer, put the paper into the ballot box, and forthwith quit the polling station.

If the elector inadvertently spoils a ballot paper, he can return it to the officer, who will, if satisfied of such inadvertence, give him another paper.

If the elector votes for more than candidate , or places any mark on the paper by which he may be afterwards identified, his ballot paper will be void, and will not be counted.

If the elector fraudulently takes a ballot paper out of the polling station, or deposits in the ballot box any other paper than the one given him by the officer, he will be liable, on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months.

ELECTIONS

(4) A polling agent in respect of whom such notice as aforesaid has been given may, during the hours of the poll, attend at the polling station to which he has been appointed.

Admission to polling station.

14.—(1) No person shall be admitted to vote at any polling station except at the one allotted to him.

(2) The presiding officer shall regulate the number of electors to be admitted to the polling station at the same time, and shall exclude all other persons except the polling agents, the officers appointed under this Schedule, the police officers on duty, and any person accompanying a blind elector for the purpose of assisting him to vote.

15. Immediately before the commencement of the poll, the presiding officer shall show the ballot box empty to such persons, if any, as may be present in the polling station, so that they may see that it is empty, and shall then lock it up and place his seal upon it in such manner as to prevent it being opened without breaking the seal, and shall place it in his view for the receipt of ballot papers, and keep it so locked and sealed.

Questions to be put to electors.

16.—(1) The presiding officer may, and, if required by two local government electors or by a polling agent, shall, put to any person applying for a ballot paper at the time of his application, but not afterwards, the following questions, or either of them, that is to say :—

(a) Are you the person registered in the register of local government electors now in force for this parish as follows [read the whole entry from the register] ?

(b) Have you already voted at the present poll ?

(2) A ballot paper shall not be delivered to any person required to answer the above questions, or either of them, unless he has answered the question or questions satisfactorily.

(3) Save as by this paragraph authorised, no inquiry shall be permitted as to the right of any person to vote.

Challenge of elector by polling agent.

17.—(1) If at the time a person applies for a ballot paper, or after he has applied for a ballot paper and before he has left the polling station, a polling agent declares to the presiding officer that he has reasonable cause to believe that the applicant has committed an offence of personation under the Local Government Act, 1933, and undertakes to substantiate the charge in a court of law, the presiding officer may order a police officer to arrest the applicant, and the order of the presiding officer shall be sufficient authority for the police officer so to do.

(2) A person against whom a declaration is made under this paragraph by a polling agent shall not, by reason thereof, be prevented from voting, but the presiding officer shall cause the words " protested against for personation " to be placed against his name in the marked copy of the register of electors.

(3) A person arrested under the provisions of this paragraph shall be dealt with as a person taken into custody by a police officer for an offence without a warrant.

Marking of ballot papers.

18. A ballot paper shall be delivered to an elector who applies therefor, and immediately before delivery—

19. The elector, on receiving the ballot paper, shall forthwith proceed into one of the compartments in the polling station and there secretly mark his paper and fold it up so as to conceal his vote, and shall then show to the presiding officer the back of the paper, so as to disclose the official mark, and put the ballot paper, so folded up, into the ballot box in the presence of the presiding officer. The elector shall vote without undue delay, and shall leave the polling station as soon as he has put his ballot paper into the ballot box.

20.—(1) The presiding officer, on the application of—

(c) of an elector who makes a declaration that he is unable to read (in this Schedule referred to as "the declaration of inability to read")

shall, in the presence of the polling agents, cause the vote of the elector to be marked on a ballot paper in manner directed by the elector, and the ballot paper to be placed in the ballot box.

(2) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is marked in pursuance of this paragraph, and the reason why it is so marked, shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the list of votes marked by the presiding officer") (a).

21.—(1) Where an elector who is accompanied by another person makes application to the presiding officer to be allowed on the ground of blindness to vote with the assistance of the person accompanying him (in this Schedule referred to as "the companion"), the presiding officer shall require the elector to declare orally whether he is so incapacitated by his blindness as to be unable to vote without assistance.

(2) If the presiding officer is satisfied that the elector is so incapacitated and is also satisfied by a written declaration made by the companion (in this Schedule referred to as "the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector") that the companion is a qualified person within the meaning of this paragraph and has not previously assisted more than one blind person to vote at the poll then being taken, the presiding officer shall grant the application, and thereupon anything which is by this Schedule required to be done to or by the said elector in connection with the giving of his vote, may be done to, or with the assistance of, the companion, as the case may be.

(3) For the purposes of this paragraph a person shall be qualified to assist a blind elector to vote, if that person is either—

(a) a person who is entitled to vote at the poll then being taken; or

(b) the father, mother, brother, sister, husband, wife, son or daughter of the blind elector and has attained the age of twenty-one years.

(4) The name and number on the register of electors of every elector whose vote is given in accordance with this paragraph and the name and address of the companion shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the list of blind electors assisted by companions") (b).

22.—(1) The declaration of inability to read and the declaration made by the companion of a blind elector—

(a) shall be in the appropriate form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances admit; and

(b) shall be made before the presiding officer at the time when the elector applies for a ballot paper or applies to vote with the assistance of the companion, as the case may be, and shall forthwith be handed to the presiding officer, who shall attest and retain it.

(2) No fee, stamp or other payment shall be charged in respect of the declaration.

Tendered ballot papers.

23. If a person, representing himself to be a particular elector named on the register, applies for a ballot paper after another person has voted as such elector, the applicant shall, upon satisfactorily answering the questions set out in paragraph 16 of this Part of this Schedule, be entitled to mark a ballot paper in the same manner as any other elector, but the ballot paper (in this Schedule called "a tendered ballot paper") shall be of a colour differing from the other ballot papers, and instead of being put into the ballot box shall be given to the presiding officer and endorsed by him with the name of the elector and his number in the register of electors, and set aside in a separate packet, and shall not be counted by the returning officer; and the name of the elector and his number on the register together with the distinctive letter of the parliamentary polling district and the distinguishing sign, if any, shall be entered on a list (in this Schedule called "the tendered votes list").

Spoilt ballot papers.

24. An elector who has inadvertently dealt with his ballot paper in such manner that it cannot be conveniently used as a ballot paper may, on delivering it to the presiding officer and proving the fact of the inadvertence to the satisfaction of the presiding officer, obtain another ballot paper in the place of the ballot paper so delivered up (in this Schedule called "a spoilt ballot paper"), and the spoilt ballot paper shall be immediately cancelled.

Powers of presiding officer in adjourning poll.

25. For the purpose of the adjournment of the poll in the event of riot or open violence and of every other enactment relating to the poll, a presiding officer shall have the power by law belonging to a presiding officer at a parliamentary election.

Packets of ballot papers, &c., to be sealed.

26. As soon as practicable after the close of the poll, the presiding officer shall, in the presence of the polling agents, make up into separate packets, sealed with his own seal and the seals of such polling agents as desire to affix their seals,—

(a) each ballot box in use at his station, sealed so as to prevent the introduction of additional ballot papers and unopened, but with the key attached;

(b) the unused and spoilt ballot papers, placed together;

(c) the tendered ballot papers;

(d) the marked copies of the register of electors and the counterfoils of the ballot papers;

(e) the tendered votes list, the list of blind electors assisted by companions, the list of votes marked by the presiding officer, a statement of the number of electors whose votes are so marked by the presiding officer under the heads "physical incapacity," "Jews," and "unable to read," the declarations made by the companions of blind electors, and the declarations of inability to read; and unless he is himself the returning officer shall deliver the packets to the returning officer to be taken charge of by him.

27. The packets shall be accompanied by a statement (in this Schedule referred to as "the ballot paper account") made by the presiding officer showing the number of ballot papers entrusted to him, and accounting for them under the heads of—

(a) ballot papers in the ballot box;

(b) unused and spoilt ballot papers;

(c) tendered ballot papers.

COUNTING OF VOTES.

Appointment of counting agents.

28.—(1) If the poll is taken on a question other than a question of appointment to any office, the proposer of each resolution in respect of which a poll is taken or, if the poll is taken on a question of appointment to any office, each candidate for that office, may appoint an agent (in this Schedule referred to as "a counting agent") to attend at the counting of the votes.

(2) Notice in writing of every appointment, stating the name and address of the person appointed, shall be given by the proposer or candidate, as the case may be, to the returning officer two clear days at least before the opening of the poll; and the returning officer may refuse to admit to the place where the votes are counted any counting agent whose name and address has not been so given, notwithstanding that his appointment may be otherwise valid, and any notice required to be given to a counting agent by the returning officer may be delivered at or sent by post to the address stated in the notice.

(3) If a counting agent dies, or becomes incapable of acting, the proposer or candidate, as the case may be, may appoint another counting agent in his place, and shall forthwith give to the returning officer notice in writing of the name and address of the counting agent so appointed.

29. The returning officer shall make arrangements for counting the votes in the presence of the counting agents as soon as practicable after the close of the poll, and shall give to the agents notice in writing of the time and place at which he will begin to count the votes.

The count.

30. Except with the consent of the returning officer, no person other than the returning officer, the persons appointed to assist him, and the counting agents may be present at the counting of the votes.

31.—(1) If a poll has been taken only on a question of appointment to an office, or only on some other question or questions, before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall, in the presence of the counting agents, open each ballot box, and taking out his papers therein, shall count and record the number thereof, and then mix together the whole of the ballot papers contained in the ballot boxes.

(2) If polls have been taken together both on a question of appointment to an office and on some other question or questions, before the returning officer proceeds to count the votes, he shall, in the presence of the counting agents, open one of the ballot boxes and taking out the papers therein shall separate those relating to the one poll from any relating to the other poll, and shall count and record the number of ballot papers relating to each poll. He shall then place the ballot papers relating to each poll in separate packets, and shall proceed in like manner with any other ballot boxes and papers therein. When all the ballot boxes and the papers therein have been so dealt with, he shall take all the packets of ballot papers relating to one poll and shall mix all such papers together and shall proceed to count the votes, keeping apart the papers relating to any other poll until he has completed such counting. He shall afterwards deal in manner aforesaid with the packets and papers relating to the other poll or polls.

32. The returning officer, while counting and recording the number of ballot papers and counting the votes, shall keep the ballot papers with their faces upwards, and take all proper precautions for preventing any person from seeing the numbers printed on the back of the papers.

33. The returning officer shall, so far as practicable, proceed continuously with counting the votes, allowing only time for refreshment, and excluding (if and so far as he thinks it necessary) the hours between eight o'clock in the evening and nine o'clock on the succeeding morning. During the excluded time the returning officer shall place the ballot papers and other documents relating to the poll under his own seal and the seals of such of the counting agents as desire to affix their seals, and shall otherwise take proper precautions for the security of the papers and documents.

Void ballot papers.

34. Any ballot paper—

(a) which does not bear the official mark; or

(b) on which votes are given for more candidates than the elector is entitled to vote for; or

(c) on which anything is written or marked by which the elector can be identified except the printed number on the back; or

(d) which is unmarked or void for uncertainty;

shall not be counted:

Provided that where the elector is entitled to vote for more than one candidate, the ballot paper shall not be deemed to be void as regards any vote as to which no uncertainty arises, and that vote shall be counted.

35.—(1) The returning officer shall endorse—

(a) the word "rejected" on any ballot paper which under the last preceding paragraph is not to be counted; and

(b) in the case of a ballot paper on which any vote is counted under the proviso to that paragraph, the words "rejected in part" and a memorandum specifying the votes counted.

(2) The returning officer shall in either case add to the endorsement the words "rejection objected to," if an objection is made by any counting agent to his decision.

(3) The returning officer shall draw up a statement showing the number of ballot papers rejected, including those rejected in part, under the several heads of—

(a) want of official mark;

(b) voting for more candidates than entitled to;

(c) writing or mark by which elector could be identified;

(d) unmarked or wholly void for uncertainty;

(e) rejected in part;

and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

ELECTIONS

36. The decision of the returning officer as to any question arising in respect of any ballot paper shall be final, but shall be subject to review on an election petition questioning the poll.

Equality of votes.

37. Where an equality of votes is found to exist, and the addition of a vote would decide the question on which the poll is taken, or would entitle any of the candidates to be declared elected, the returning officer, whether or not entitled to vote in the first instance, may give a casting vote by word of mouth or in writing.

Declaration of result.

38.—(1) When the result of the poll has been ascertained, the returning officer shall forthwith—

(i) in the case of a poll on a question other than a question of appointment to any office, declare the number of votes given for and against the proposal to which the question relates, and whether the proposal has been carried (regard being had to any particular majority which may be required) or lost, and shall as soon as possible publish a notice, in the form prescribed by the Secretary of State, of the result as declared; or

(ii) in the case of a poll on a question of appointment to any office, declare to be elected the candidate or candidates to whom the majority of votes have been given, and shall as soon as possible publish a notice, in the form prescribed by the Secretary of State, showing the name or names of the candidate or candidates elected and the total number of votes given for each candidate, whether elected or not.

(2) The returning officer, if he is not the chairman of the meeting at which the poll was demanded, shall forthwith return the result of the poll, or the names of the persons elected, as the case may be, to that chairman (a).

Disposal of ballot papers, &c., after poll.

39. Upon the completion of the counting the returning officer shall seal up in separate packets the counted and rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part. He shall not open the sealed packet of tendered ballot papers or the sealed packet containing the marked copy of the register of electors and counterfoils, but shall proceed, in the presence of the counting agents, to verify the ballot paper account given by each presiding officer by comparing it with the number of ballot papers recorded by him under paragraph 31 of this Part of this Schedule, and the unused and spoilt ballot papers in his possession and the tendered votes list, and shall reseal each sealed packet after examination. The returning officer shall draw up a statement as to the result of the verification and shall, on request, allow any counting agent to copy the statement.

40. The returning officer shall carefully preserve for the period specified in paragraph 44 all the packets of ballot papers in his possession, together with the said statements, the ballot paper accounts, tendered votes lists, lists of blind electors assisted by companions, lists of votes marked by the presiding officer, statements relating thereto, declarations made by the companions of blind electors, declarations of inability to read, packets of counterfoils, and marked copies of registers, sent by each presiding officer, endorsing on each packet a description of its contents and the date of the poll to which they relate, and the name of the parish for which the poll was held.

41.—(1) A county court having jurisdiction in the parish, or any part thereof, or an election court, on being satisfied by evidence on oath—

(a) that the inspection or production of any rejected ballot papers, including ballot papers rejected in part; or

(b) that the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils or the inspection of counted ballot papers,

is required for the purpose of instituting or maintaining a prosecution for an offence in relation to ballot papers, or for the purpose of a petition questioning a poll, may make an order for the inspection or production of any such ballot papers or the opening of the sealed packet of counterfoils.

(2) An order made under this paragraph may be made subject to such conditions as to persons, time, place and mode of inspection or production of ballot papers or of opening the sealed packet of counterfoils as the court may think expedient, and may direct the returning officer having custody of the ballot papers and the sealed packet of counterfoils to retain them intact for such period as may be specified in the order.

(a) For forms of declaration of result in cases of appointment to an office or otherwise see respectively Sched. III, Forms C and D, post, pp. 2616, 2617.

(3) Any power given to a county court by this paragraph may be exercised by any judge of the county court otherwise than in open court.

(4) In making and carrying into effect an order under this paragraph, care shall be taken that the way in which any particular elector has voted shall not be disclosed, until it has been proved that he voted and his vote has been declared by a competent court to be invalid.

(5) An appeal shall lie to the High Court from any order of a county court made under this paragraph.

42. Except by order of a court made under the last preceding paragraph, no person shall be allowed to inspect any ballot papers in the custody of the returning officer or to open the sealed packet of counterfoils.

43. Where an order is made for the production by the returning officer of any document in his possession relating to any specified election, the production by that returning officer or his agent of the document ordered, in such manner as may be directed by the order, shall be conclusive evidence that the document so produced relates to the specified poll; and any endorsement appearing on any packet of ballot papers produced by that returning officer or his agent shall be primâ facie evidence of those papers being what they are stated to be by the endorsement. The production from proper custody of a ballot paper purporting to have been used at any poll, and of a counterfoil marked with the same printed number and having a number marked thereon in writing shall be primâ facie evidence that the person who voted by that ballot paper was the person who at the time of that poll had affixed to his name in the register of electors at that poll the same number as the number written on that counterfoil.

44. The returning officer shall retain for six months all documents relating to a poll, and then, unless otherwise directed by an order made under paragraph 41 of this Part of this Schedule, shall cause them to be destroyed.

45. All documents retained by a returning officer in pursuance of this Schedule, other than ballot papers and counterfoils, shall, during a period of six months from the day of the poll, be open to public inspection at such time and in such manner as may be determined by the county council, and the returning officer shall supply copies of or extracts from the said documents to any person demanding the same on payment of such fees and subject to such conditions as may be determined by the county council.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO POLLS.

47. The returning officer may, if he thinks fit, preside at a polling station, and the provisions of this Part of this Schedule relating to a presiding officer shall apply to a returning officer so presiding with the necessary modifications as to things to be done by the returning officer to the presiding officer, or by the presiding officer to the returning officer.

48.—(1) No returning officer, or officer appointed under this Schedule, or any partner or clerk of any such officer, shall act as a polling or counting agent.

(2) If any returning officer, or officer appointed under this Part of this Schedule, or the partner or clerk of any such officer, acts as a polling or counting agent in contravention of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

49. No person shall be appointed to act as an officer under this Part of this Schedule for the purposes of a poll who has been employed by or on behalf of any person in or about the poll.

50. A presiding officer may do, by the officers appointed to assist him, any act which he is required or authorised by this Part of this Schedule to do at a polling station except ordering the arrest, exclusion, or removal of any person from the polling station.

51. A person authorised by paragraph 13 or paragraph 28 of this Part of this Schedule to appoint a polling agent or a counting agent may himself do any act or thing which an agent of his, if appointed, would have been authorised or required to do, but before acting under this paragraph the person shall make the declaration of secrecy required to be made by agents.

52. Where in this Part of this Schedule any act or thing is required or authorised to be done in the presence of the polling agents or counting agents, the non-attendance of any agents or agent at the time and place appointed for the purpose shall not, if the act or thing is otherwise duly done, invalidate the act or thing done.

Prohibition of disclosure of vote.

53. No person who has voted at a poll shall, in any legal proceeding to question the poll, be required to state how or for whom he has voted.

ELECTIONS

Requirement of Secrecy.

54.—(1) Every returning officer, and every officer, polling agent or counting agent, authorised to attend at a polling station or at the counting of the votes, shall, before the opening of the poll, or in the case of an agent appointed after the opening of the poll, before acting as such agent, make a declaration of secrecy in the form set forth in Part IV of this Schedule, or in a form as near thereto as circumstances admit.

(2) In the case of a returning officer the declaration shall be made in the presence of a justice of the peace, and in the case of any other officer or of an agent, the declaration shall be made either in the presence of a justice of the peace or of the returning officer.

(3) Save as aforesaid, no such returning officer, officer or agent shall be required, as such, to make any declaration or to take any oath on the occasion of an election.

(4) Every returning officer, and every officer, polling agent or counting agent in attendance at a polling station or at the counting of the votes, shall maintain and aid in maintaining secrecy of the voting.

(5) No person, being a returning officer, or officer appointed under this Part of this Schedule, or polling agent or counting agent, shall—

(a) except for some purpose authorised by law, communicate before the poll is closed to any person any information as to—

(i) the name or number on the register of any elector who has or has not applied for a ballot paper or voted at a polling station; or

(ii) the official mark; or

(b) ascertain or attempt to ascertain at the counting of the votes, the number on the back of any ballot paper; or

(c) communicate any information obtained at the counting of the votes, as to the manner in which, or as to the candidate for whom, any vote is given on any particular ballot paper.

(6) No person, whether or not such an officer, polling agent or counting agent as aforesaid, shall—

(a) interfere with or attempt to interfere with an elector when recording his vote; or

(b) otherwise obtain or attempt to obtain in a polling station information as to the manner in which, or as to the candidate for whom, an elector in that station is about to vote or has voted; or

(c) communicate at any time to any person any information obtained in a polling station as to the manner in which, or as to the candidate for whom, an elector in that station is about to vote or has voted, or as to the number on the back of the ballot paper given to an elector at that station; or

(d) directly or indirectly induce an elector to display his ballot paper after he has marked it so as to make known to any person the manner in which, or the name of the candidate for or against whom, he has so marked his vote.

(7) No person having undertaken to assist a blind elector to vote shall communicate at any time to any person any information as to the manner in which, or as to the candidate for whom, that elector intends to vote or has voted, or as to the number on the back of the ballot paper given for the use of that elector.

(8) If any person acts in contravention of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months (a).

55.—Any justice of the peace, any returning officer and any presiding officer may take any declaration authorised by this Part of this Schedule to be made before him.

Keeping of order in station.

56.—(1) It shall be the duty of the presiding officer to keep order at his polling station.

(2) If any person misconducts himself in a polling station, or fails to obey the lawful orders of the presiding officer, he may immediately, by order of the presiding officer, be removed from the polling station by a police officer in or near that station, or by any other person authorised in writing by the returning officer to remove him; and the person so removed shall not, without the permission of the presiding officer, again enter the polling station during the day.

(3) Any person so removed may, if charged with the commission in the polling station of an offence, be dealt with as a person taken into custody by a police officer for an offence without a warrant.

(a) For form of declaration of secrecy, see Part IV, Form C, post, p. 2615.

(4) The powers conferred by this paragraph shall not be exercised so as to prevent an elector who is otherwise entitled to vote at a polling station from having an opportunity of voting at that station.

THE MINISTRY OF HEALTH (REGISTRATION AND ELECTIONS, TRANSFER OF POWERS) ORDER, 1921. DATED MAY 27TH, 1921.

Whereas by sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 3 of the Ministry of Health Act, 1919, it is provided that His Majesty may by Order in Council transfer from the Minister of Health to any other Government Department any of the powers and duties of the Minister which appear to His Majesty not to relate to matters affecting or incidental to the health of the people, and may by Order in Council make such incidental, consequential and supplemental provisions as may be necessary or expedient for the purposes of giving full effect to such transfer :

And whereas the Minister of Health as successor to the Local Government Board exercises and performs under divers statutes certain powers and duties relating to the registration of electors and the conduct of elections, which appear to His Majesty not to affect or be incidental to the health of the people, and it is expedient that the said powers and duties should be transferred to the Secretary of State :

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, is pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows :—

1.—(1) This Order may be cited as the Ministry of Health (Registration and Elections, Transfer of Powers) Order, 1921.

2.—(1) As from the date of this Order, the powers and duties of the Minister of Health, as successor to the Local Government Board, set out in the Schedule to this Order, shall be transferred to the Secretary of State, and the enactments specified in the first column of the said Schedule shall be read as though the Secretary of State were substituted for the Local Government Board in those enactments.

(2) For the purposes of paragraphs (d) and (e) of sub-section (1) of section 57 of the Local Government Act, 1888, of section 71 of the Local Government Act, 1894 (but only so far as regards Orders made by a county council relating to elections), and of sub-section (3) of section 31 of, and paragraph (27) of the First Schedule to the Representation of the People Act, 1918, the Secretary of State shall be substituted for the Local Government Board in those sections, sub-sections or paragraphs, as the case may be.

ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACTS, 1882 TO 1926.

REGULATIONS PRESCRIBED BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS UNDER SECTION 4 OF THE ELECTRIC LIGHTING ACT, 1888.

DEFINITIONS.

In the following Regulations :—

The expression "Energy" means electrical energy, and for the purpose of the Electric Lighting Act, 1888 (a), and these Regulations, electrical energy shall be deemed to be an agency within the meaning of the word "electricity" as defined in the Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (a).

The expression "Owner" means any body or person owning or using or entitled to use any electric lines or works, upon whom notice has been served by the Electricity Commissioners requiring that such electric lines or works shall be continued and used only in accordance with these Regulations.

The expression "Consumer" means any body or person supplied with energy by the owner.

The expression "sub-station" means any premises in which energy is transformed or converted for the purpose of supply to consumers, and which are large enough to admit the entrance of a person after the transforming or converting apparatus is in position, provided that for the purpose of these Regulations any place within any such premises which is used solely for some purpose other than such transformation or conversion shall not be deemed to form part of a sub-station.

The expression "Overhead line" means any electric line which is placed above ground and in the open air.

The expression "Service line" means an electric line through which energy may be supplied or intended to be supplied by the owner to any premises other than the premises where the energy is generated.

The expression "Pressure" means the difference of electrical potential between any two conductors through which a supply of energy is given, or between any part of either conductor and the earth; and

(a) Where the conditions of the supply are such that the pressure at any pair of consumer's terminals does not exceed 250 volts, the supply shall be deemed a low pressure supply.

(b) Where the conditions of the supply are such that the pressure exceeds 250 volts but does not exceed 650 volts, the supply shall be deemed a medium pressure supply.

(c) Where the conditions of the supply are such that the pressure exceeds 650 volts but does not exceed 3,000 volts, the supply shall be deemed a high pressure supply; and

(d) Where the conditions of the supply are such that the pressure exceeds 3,000 volts, the supply shall be deemed an extra high pressure supply.

The expression "neutral point" means that point in a generating or transforming arrangement which is placed symmetrically with respect to the terminal points of the arrangement.

The expression "neutral wire" means a wire directly connected to a neutral point.

Other expressions to which meanings are assigned in the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1926 (b), have the same respective meanings in these Regulations.

I.—GENERAL.

Regulations not to imply Power to interfere with Streets.

1. Nothing in these Regulations shall be deemed to authorise the owner to break up or interfere with any street.

Pressure Exceeding 250 Volts.

2. Where the pressure of the supply exceeds 250 volts, all wires, switches, and metal work in connection with the supply shall be so enclosed or shall be fixed in such a manner that there shall be no risk of any shock being obtained by inadvertence or in the ordinary handling thereof.

Insulation Test.

3. The insulation of every electric circuit (whether connected with earth in accordance with these Regulations or not) including all machinery and apparatus forming part of or in connection with that circuit, shall be so maintained that the leakage current shall not exceed one-thousandth part of the maximum current; and suitable means shall be provided for the indication and localisation of leakage. Every leakage shall be remedied without delay. Every such circuit shall be periodically tested for insulation.

Precautions against Shock or Fire.

4. In the use or delivery of energy, the owner shall exercise all due precautions so as to avoid the risk of causing electric shock or fire, and shall be responsible for, all electric lines, fittings, and apparatus belonging to him, or under his control, being maintained in a safe condition.

Protection from Lightning.

5. Any electric line or any support therefor exposed to liability to injury from lightning, shall be efficiently protected against such liability.

Protection of Mains.

6. All mains below ground shall be so laid and protected as to avoid risk of damage by accumulation of gas or leakage of electric current.

Reports of Accidents.

7. Where any accident by explosion or fire, or any other accident of such kind as to have caused or to be likely to have caused loss of life or personal injury has occurred at any part of any electric line or other works, the owner shall give immediate notice thereof to the Electricity Commissioners.

(a) For the Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 and 1888, see Vol. IV, post.

(b) The Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1936 (that is to say the Electric Lighting Acts, 1882, 1888 and 1909, and the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1919, 1922, 1926, 1928, 1933, 1935 and 1936), are printed in the later volumes of this work.

Notice to Postmaster-General.

8.—(a) The owner, on receipt of a request in writing by the Postmaster-General, shall serve forthwith on the Postmaster-General, a notice describing every electric line used for the supply of energy, together with a plan showing the mode and position in which such electric line is laid.

(b) The owner in placing and using his electric lines shall employ every reasonable means to prevent injurious affection, whether by induction or otherwise, of any telegraphs of the Postmaster-General, or the communication through such telegraphs. The Postmaster-General may at any time serve upon the owner notice requiring such alteration in the position and mode of laying or mode of use of any electric line of the owner or compliance with such other conditions as the Postmaster-General may think necessary for the due protection of his electric lines or other works, and failure on the part of the owner to comply with any such notice shall be deemed to be a non-compliance with the requirements of the Electricity Commissioners' Notice to which these Regulations are annexed.

(c) Any notice required to be served upon the Postmaster-General under these Regulations may be served by being addressed to the General Post Office, London, E.C.1, or by being addressed to and left at or transmitted through the post to the office of the Sectional Engineer in whose area the works specified in the notice are situated, and any notice required to be served on the owner may be served by being addressed to him and left at or transmitted through the post to his office or last known place of address.

Sub-stations and Transformers.

9. Sub-stations shall be established in suitable places and shall be in the sole occupation and charge of the owner and subject to any requirements of the Home Office. Where transformers are used in any other premises (not being sub-stations as defined for the purposes of these Regulations) they shall be so guarded and protected as to avoid the risk of causing electric shock.

II.—EXTRA HIGH PRESSURE MAINS, ETC.

Testing of Insulation.

10. An extra high pressure main shall not be brought into use unless, after it has been placed in position and before it is used for the purposes of supply, the insulation of every part thereof has withstood the continuous application, during half an hour, of pressure exceeding the maximum pressure to which it is intended to be subjected in use, that is to say, in the case of every electric line to be used for a pressure not exceeding 10,000 volts twice the said maximum pressure, and in the case of a line to be used for a pressure exceeding 10,000 volts a pressure exceeding the said maximum pressure by 10,000 volts, and the owner shall record the results of the tests of each main or section of a main.

Protection by Fuses or Circuit Breakers.

11. Every extra high pressure main shall be protected by a suitable fuse or automatic circuit-breaker, but in the case of a concentric main that fuse or circuit-breaker shall not be inserted in any external conductor thereof which is connected with earth.

Prevention of Leakage in Transformers.

12. In every case where an extra high pressure supply is transformed or converted to a reduced pressure, some suitable automatic and quick-acting means shall be provided to protect the reduced pressure circuits from any accidental contact with or leakage from the extra high pressure system, either within or without the transforming or converting apparatus.

Electrical Continuity of Metal Conduits, etc.

13. All metal conduits, pipes, or casings, containing any extra high pressure electric line shall be efficiently connected with earth, and shall be so jointed and connected across all street boxes and other openings so as to make good electrical connection throughout their whole length.

Lines above Ground or in Subways.

14. Every portion of any extra high pressure electric line placed above the surface of the ground, otherwise than in a sub-station, or in any subway not in the sole occupation of the owner shall be completely enclosed either in a tube of highly insulated material embedded in brickwork, masonry, or cement concrete, or in strong metal casing efficiently connected with earth.

Prevention of Leakage.

15. Where extra high pressure mains for three-phase supply consist of insulated conductors laid together, provision shall be made to ensure that neither the ground nor any neighbouring electric line or conductor can become charged by leakage from any such main.

Where this provision is made by a copper strip under a lead sheath, that strip shall be not less than sixteen-thousandths of an inch in thickness, and where it is made by steel wires outside a lead sheath, each of those wires shall not be less than one-tenth of an inch in diameter.

Where the mains are enclosed in a lead sheath, that sheath shall not be less than one-tenth of an inch in thickness, and shall be permanently and efficiently connected with earth.

Mains for Single Phase Supply.

16. Extra high pressure mains for single phase supply and all cables connected therewith shall consist either of two concentric conductors or of separate conductors. Where concentric conductors are used the insulation shall be maintained efficiently throughout except that the outer conductor shall be connected with earth at one point, and where separate conductors are used, provision shall be made as in the case of mains for three phase supply to ensure that neither the ground nor any neighbouring electric line or conductor can become charged by leakage.

Completion and Control.

17. An extra high pressure electric line shall not be brought into use for the supply of energy before it has been completely laid, properly jointed, examined, and tested, or until it is in the sole charge of the owner and every such line shall during its use be in the sole charge of the owner.

Street Boxes.

18. Extra high pressure mains shall not pass through the same street box with other mains, unless they are enclosed in strong metal casing; and street boxes containing extra high pressure mains shall not contain pipes for water, gas, or other service, or electric mains belonging to any other body or person, provided that any such street box may contain telephone wires belonging to the owner.

Sub-stations.

19. Sub-stations supplied at extra high pressure shall be established in suitable places and shall be in the sole occupation of the owner.

Sub-station below Streets.

20. Sub-stations constructed below the surface of any street to which an extra high pressure supply is to be given shall not contain switches or other apparatus than transformers.

Transforming Apparatus in Sub-stations.

21. The transforming apparatus at any sub-station supplied at extra high pressure shall be so arranged that there shall be no danger of any mains connected therewith being charged to any pressure beyond the limits of pressure for which these mains are intended.

Fire Risks.

22. In delivering the energy to a sub-station at extra high pressure the owner shall exercise all due precautions so as to avoid risk of causing fire on the premises.

Insulation, etc., of Electric Lines and Apparatus in Sub-stations.

23. All extra high pressure electric lines and apparatus placed in a sub-station shall be highly insulated and thoroughly protected against injury to the insulation or access of moisture, and any metal forming part of the electric circuit shall not unless efficiently connected with earth be exposed so that it can be inadvertently touched. All such lines shall be so fixed and protected as to prevent the possibility of electrical discharge to any adjacent metallic substance.

III.—OVERHEAD LINES.

[See the Overhead Lines Regulations, 1928, post, p. 2669.]

Danger Notices.

42. Supports shall be numbered consecutively and each support shall have a danger notice of a permanent character securely fixed to it. Adequate provisions shall also be made to prevent unauthorised climbing.

IV.—CONNECTION OF CIRCUITS WITH EARTH.

Continuous Current Circuits.

43. Where the pressure of a supply between the adjacent conductors of a three-wire continuous current system of mains exceeds 125 volts, the intermediate conductor shall be connected with earth, in accordance with the following conditions:—

(a) The connection with earth of the intermediate conductor shall be made at one point only on each distinct circuit, namely, at the generating station or sub-station, and the insulation of the circuit shall be efficiently maintained at all other parts.

(b) The current from the intermediate conductor to earth shall be continuously recorded, and if it at any time exceeds one-thousandth part of the maximum supply current, steps shall be immediately taken to improve the insulation of the system.

Alternating Current Circuits.

44. Alternating current circuits may, with the approval of the Electricity Commissioners and with the concurrence of the Postmaster-General, be connected with earth in accordance with the following conditions, etc.:—

I.—GENERAL.

(a) The connection with earth shall be made only where energy is delivered to each circuit, that is to say, at a generating station, a sub-station or transformer, and shall, wherever practicable, be made at a neutral point in the circuit and in such a manner as will ensure at all times an immediate and safe discharge of energy.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

(b) The connection with earth shall be efficiently maintained, except when it is interrupted by means of a switch or link for the purpose of periodical tests for ascertaining whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth.

(c) The insulation of the mains shall be efficiently maintained at all other parts.

(d) Tests shall be periodically made to ascertain whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth, and if at any time the current so passing exceeds one-thousandth part of the maximum supply current of the circuit, steps shall be immediately taken to improve the insulation.

II.—SPECIAL.

Where separate or three- or four-core mains are used for alternating current and the pressure between any two conductors exceeds 125 volts, the connection with earth shall be made in the case of—

(a) A single phase supply, at the neutral point on the winding of the transformer;

(b) A two-phase three-wire supply, by means of the third wire;

(c) A two-phase four-wire supply, at the neutral point on the winding;

(d) A three-phase three-wire or four-wire supply, at the neutral point on the star winding.

Concentric Mains.

45. Concentric mains used either for continuous or for alternating current shall be connected with earth by means of the external conductor in accordance with the following conditions:—

(a) The connection with earth shall be made by means of the external conductor.

(b) The connection with earth shall be made only at the point or points where energy is given to each distinct circuit, namely, at a generating station, sub-station, or transformer.

(c) The insulation of the external conductor shall be efficiently maintained at all other parts.

(d) The external conductor shall form a complete metal sheathing round the inner conductor.

(e) The connection with earth shall be efficiently maintained except when it is interrupted by means of a switch or link for the purpose of periodical tests for ascertaining whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth.

(f) Tests shall be periodically made to ascertain whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth, and if at any time the current passing by means of the connection with earth exceeds one-thousandth part of the maximum supply current of the circuit, steps shall be immediately taken to improve the insulation.

Nothing in these Regulations shall be deemed to be in substitution for Regulations made under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901; the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887; and the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872.

N.B.—These Regulations are prescribed subject to the power of the Electricity Commissioners to prescribe such further or other Regulations as they may think expedient.

(1) The supply will be given—

(a) for general supply at high pressure to transformers, converters or motors on the consumers' premises, or at medium or low pressure;

(b) for traction purposes at medium pressure.

(2) The extra high pressure and high pressure supply will be given by alternating current, and the medium pressure and low pressure supply will be given by alternating current or by direct current.

(3) All alternating current will be at a frequency not varying from 50 complete cycles per second by more than 2½ per cent. plus or minus.

Mains.

(4) The mains will consist of insulated conductors laid together and enclosed in a lead sheath, and either

(a) braided, compounded, and armoured, and laid direct in the ground, and covered with—

(i) wooden planks 2 inches thick, and (except for making up pieces and at bends) 10 feet long, and treated with preservative compound to prevent decay; or

(ii) reinforced concrete slabs, 3 feet long by 2 inches thick, and 6 inches wide, and suitably interlocked so as to prevent lateral displacement; or

(iii) concrete, made in situ, 3 inches thick, of a minimum width of 9 inches, and overlapping the breadth of the mains by at least 2 inches on each side; or

(b) drawn into pipes or ducts of approved design; or

Any joint electricity authority or authorised undertakers within the meaning of the above-mentioned Acts adopting an extra high pressure system of supply in pursuance of this General Approval must notify the Electricity Commissioners in order that the Regulations as to extra high pressure for securing the safety of the public and for ensuring a proper and sufficient supply of electrical energy may be prescribed on such authority or undertakers where necessary.

Any extra high pressure system of supply other than that described above will require special approval by the Electricity Commissioners.

9. For the purpose of raising any moneys which the joint authority are authorised to borrow or for the purpose of securing any advances to be made to the joint authority under the Article of the Regulations of which the marginal note is " Temporary borrowing by Joint Authority " the joint authority may instead of or in temporary substitution for any other method of raising money prescribed by the foregoing provisions of the Regulations issue and renew bonds subject to and in accordance with the provisions contained in the Second Schedule to the Regulations.

Bonds may be issued shortly before any other bonds fall due in order to pay off those bonds notwithstanding that the statutory borrowing power of the joint authority would thereby be temporarily exceeded.

10.—(1) The joint authority shall have power to borrow—

(a) for the purpose of paying off any moneys previously borrowed by them which are intended to be forthwith repaid ; or

(b) for the purpose of paying off loans or of redeeming a continuing liability taken over by the joint authority under the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1922 ; or

(2) Any moneys borrowed under this Article shall for the purpose of repayment be deemed to form part of the original loan, and shall be repaid within that portion of the period prescribed for the repayment of that loan which remains unexpired and the provisions which are for the time being applicable to the original loan shall apply to the moneys borrowed under this Article.

Provided that the joint authority shall not have power to borrow (except temporarily as provided in the Regulations) for the purpose of making any payment to a sinking fund or of paying any annual or other instalment of principal which

(a) by instalments or annual payment; or

(b) by means of a sinking fund; or

(c) out of moneys derived from the sale of land; or

(d) out of any capital moneys properly applicable to the purpose of the repayment other than moneys borrowed for that purpose.

Provided also that the power of reborrowing conferred by this Article shall not be exercised in respect of mortgages issued for a period of less than ten years and that mortgages shall not be issued for a period of less than ten years for roborrowing purposes.

11. The joint authority may from time to time subject to such conditions as the Commissioners may see fit to impose for the purpose of providing temporarily for any current expenses borrow by way of temporary loan or overdraft from any bank or otherwise such sums as they may from time to time require not exceeding in the aggregate at any time one-third of the approximate amount of the revenue of the joint authority for the year then current.

Any amount so borrowed together with the interest thereon shall be repaid out of the revenue of the joint authority received in respect of the financial year in which the expenses were incurred.

The joint authority may until provision can be made for borrowing money on mortgage or in any other manner provided by the Regulations borrow temporarily with the consent of the Commissioners for the purpose of any statutory borrowing power and for a period not exceeding six months [or such extended period not exceeding a further period of six months as the Commissioners may allow] any sum or sums from any bank or otherwise on such terms and conditions and in such form as may be agreed and any money so borrowed shall be repaid out of moneys duly borrowed on mortgage or in such other manner as aforesaid.

Except as provided by the Article of the Regulations whereof the marginal note is "Power to issue Bonds" the provisions of the Regulations as to borrowing and the repayment of moneys borrowed shall not apply to advances under this Article.

The words in square brackets were added by the Joint Electricity Authorities (Borrowing Power) Amendment Regulations, 1931, dated October 7th, S. R. & O., 1931, No. 905.

Application of Money borrowed.

12. All money borrowed by the joint authority shall be applied only to the purposes for which the statutory borrowing power is being exercised and (except in the case of money borrowed under the powers of the last preceding Article) to which capital is properly applicable provided that if after the raising of such money it is found that any part thereof is not required for the purposes to which it is applicable as aforesaid the joint authority shall carry the same to the sinking fund established under the Article of the Regulations of which the marginal note is "Sinking Fund" or apply it in the reduction of moneys already borrowed or in such other manner as the Commissioners may approve.

The joint authority may from time to time invest temporarily in statutory securities any sum raised by borrowing and not for the time being required for the purpose for which it was raised.

Repayment of Money borrowed and Sinking Fund.

13. The joint authority shall make provision for the repayment of all moneys borrowed by them in accordance with the Regulations within such period or periods not exceeding sixty years from the date or dates of the borrowing of the same as the Commissioners shall prescribe (hereinafter referred to as "the prescribed period").

Provided that in the case of money borrowed for the purpose of capital expenditure which will not become immediately remunerative the provision for repayment may with the sanction of the Commissioners be suspended for a period not exceeding five years from the commencement of the financial year next after that in which such expenditure commences to be incurred.

14. The joint authority shall either pay off the moneys borrowed in accordance with the provisions of the Regulations by equal yearly or half-yearly instalments of principal or of principal and interest combined, or they shall set apart as a sinking fund an equal annual sum sufficient without accumulations (hereinafter referred to as a non-accumulating sinking fund) to repay the moneys so borrowed within the prescribed period, or an equal annual sum which if accumulated at compound interest at such rate as may from time to time be approved by the Commissioners (hereinafter referred to as an accumulating sinking fund) would be sufficient to pay off the moneys so borrowed within such period. In the case of an accumulating sinking fund the yearly appropriation from the revenue of the undertaking of the joint authority shall comprise the equal annual sum aforementioned increased by a sum equivalent to interest on the amount from time to time standing to the credit of the fund at the rate per centum per annum on which the aforesaid equal annual sum is based.

Provided that the joint authority may if they think fit pay off the moneys borrowed partly by one of the above methods, and partly by another or others of them, and the payment of the first instalment or the first payment to the sinking fund shall subject to the proviso to the last preceding Article be made within twelve months or when the moneys are repaid by half-yearly instalments within six months from the commencement of the prescribed period.

15.—(1) Every sum paid to a sinking fund shall unless applied in accordance with the Article of the Regulations of which the marginal note is "Application of Sinking Fund" in repayment of the loan in respect of which the sinking fund is formed or in accordance with the Article of the Regulations of which the marginal note is "Use of Sinking Fund instead of borrowing" be immediately invested in statutory securities the joint authority being at liberty from time to time to vary and transpose such investments.

(2) The interest on the investments of the sinking fund shall form part of the revenue of the undertaking of the joint authority and may be applied by the joint authority towards the annual payments to the fund.

(3) Any expenses connected with the formation maintenance investment application management or otherwise of any sinking fund under the Regulations shall be paid by the joint authority in addition to the payments provided for by the Regulations.

(4) If it appear to the joint authority at any time that the amount in or the investments of the sinking fund with the future payments thereto in accordance with the provisions of the Regulations will probably not be sufficient to repay within the prescribed period the moneys for the repayment of which the sinking fund is formed it shall be the duty of the joint authority to make such increased payments to the sinking fund as will cause the sinking fund to be sufficient for that purpose: Provided that if it appear to the Commissioners that any such increase is necessary the joint authority shall increase the payments to such extent as the Commissioners may direct.

(5) If the joint authority desire to accelerate the repayment of any loan they may increase the amounts payable to any sinking fund.

(6) If the amount in or the investments of any sinking fund with the future payments thereto in accordance with the provisions of the Regulations will in the opinion of the Commissioners be more than sufficient to repay within the prescribed period the moneys for the repayment of which the sinking fund is formed the joint authority may reduce the payments to be made to the sinking fund either temporarily or permanently to such an extent as the Commissioners shall approve.

(7) If the amount in or the investments of any sinking fund at any time will in the opinion of the Commissioners be sufficient to repay the loan in respect of which it is formed within the prescribed period the joint authority may with the consent of the Commissioners discontinue the annual payments to such sinking fund until the Commissioners shall otherwise direct.

(8) Any surplus of any sinking fund remaining after the discharge of the whole of the moneys for the repayment of which it was formed shall be applied to such purpose or purposes as the joint authority with the consent of the Commissioners may determine.

16. The joint authority may at any time apply the whole or any part of any sinking fund set apart under the Regulations in or towards the discharge of the moneys for the repayment of which the fund has been established.

Provided that in the case of an accumulating sinking fund they shall pay into the fund each year an additional sum equivalent to the interest which would have been produced by the sinking fund or the part of the sinking fund so applied, if invested at the rate per centum per annum on which the equal annual payments to the sinking fund are based.

17. For the purpose of exercising any statutory borrowing power the joint authority may, with the consent of the Commissioners, instead of raising further moneys in accordance with the Regulations, employ any moneys for the time being standing to the credit of any sinking fund established under the Regulations and may realise and employ the proceeds of the realisation of any securities in which the moneys of any such fund are for the time being invested.

Provided that no such moneys shall be so employed unless provision is made in such manner as the Commissioners approve for replacing the same together with any loss of interest occasioned in any such fund by reason of so employing such moneys at or before the date (if any) at which loans repayable by means of such moneys are required to be repaid.

18.—(1) The clerk shall, if and when he is requested by the Commissioners so to do, transmit to the Commissioners a return showing the provision made for the repayment of money borrowed in accordance with the Regulations.

(2) The return shall show such particulars and shall be made up to such date and in such form as the Commissioners may require, and shall, if so required by them, be verified by statutory declaration of the clerk or other the chief accounting officer of the joint authority, and shall be transmitted within one month after the making of the request; and in the event of his failing to make such return the clerk shall for each offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds to be recovered by the Minister in a court of summary jurisdiction, and notwithstanding the recovery of such penalty the making of the return shall be enforceable by writ of mandamus to be obtained by the Minister out of the High Court.

(3) If it appear to the Commissioners by such a return as aforesaid or otherwise that the joint authority have failed to pay any instalment or annual payment required to be paid or to appropriate any sum required to be appropriated or to set apart any sum required for any sinking fund (whether such instalment or annual payment or sum is required by the Regulations or by the Commissioners in virtue thereof to be paid appropriated or set apart), or have applied any portion of any sinking fund to any purpose other than those authorised the Commissioners shall report the matter to the Minister who may by order direct that the sum in such order mentioned not exceeding the amount in respect of which default has been made shall be paid or applied in the manner and by the date in such order mentioned, and the joint authority shall notify the Minister as soon as the order is complied with, and any such order shall be enforceable by writ of mandamus to be obtained by the Minister out of the High Court.

In the application of this Article to Scotland the words "which shall be recoverable by the Minister as a debt due to the Crown is recoverable" shall be substituted for the words "to be recovered by the Minister in a court of summary jurisdiction" in the second paragraph and the words "by decree of either Division of the Inner House of the Court of Session in Scotland pronounced in a summary application presented for the purpose" shall be substituted for the words "by writ of mandamus to be obtained by the Minister out of the High Court" in the second and third paragraphs.

If any question arises between the Undertakers and the owner of any such wire or line as to whether the Undertakers have constructed, laid down or placed their electric lines or other works or worked their undertaking in contravention of this sub-section and as to whether the working of that wire or line or the current therein is or is not injuriously affected thereby, that question shall be determined by arbitration; and the arbitrator (unless he is of opinion that the wire or line not having been so in existence at such time as aforesaid has been placed in unreasonable proximity to the electric lines or works of the Undertakers) may direct the Undertakers to make any alterations in, or additions to their system so as to comply with the provisions of this section, and the Undertakers shall make those alterations or additions accordingly.

(2) Seven days before commencing to lay down or place any electric line or to use any electric line in any manner whereby the work of telegraphic or telephonic or electric signalling communication or electrical control of railways through any wire or line lawfully laid down or placed in any position may be injuriously affected, the Undertakers shall, unless otherwise agreed between the parties interested give to the owner of the wire or line notice in writing specifying the course, nature, and gauge of the electric line and the manner in which the electric line is intended to be used, and the amount and nature of the currents intended to be transmitted thereby, and the extent to and manner in which (if at all) earth returns are proposed to be used; and any owner entitled to receive that notice may serve a requisition on the Undertakers requiring them to adopt such precautions as may be therein specified in regard to the laying, placing or user of the electric line for the purpose of preventing the injurious affection; and the Undertakers shall conform with such reasonable requirements as may be made by the owner for the purpose of preventing the communication through the wire or line from being injuriously affected as aforesaid.

If any difference arises between any such owner and the Undertakers with respect to the reasonableness of any requirement so made, that difference shall be determined by arbitration.

Provided that the Undertakers shall not be subject to any such penalty as aforesaid if the court are of opinion that the case was one of emergency and that the Undertakers complied with the requirements of this section so far as was reasonable under the circumstances, or that the default was due to the fact that the Undertakers were ignorant of the position of the wire or line affected thereby and that that ignorance was not owing to any negligence on the part of the Undertakers.

OVERHEAD LINE REGULATIONS FOR SECURING THE SAFETY OF THE PUBLIC MADE BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS UNDER THE ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACTS, 1882 TO 1928 (a).

[Note.—These Regulations differ only from those made by the Electricity Commissioners in 1928 in respect of Regulations 5 and 18.]

DEFINITION.

In the following Regulations the expression "line conductors" means conductors used for transmitting a supply of electrical energy, including so much of any service line as may be under the control of the undertakers.

I.—GENERAL.

Material of Line Conductors.

1. Line conductors shall be of copper, aluminium, or such other materials as may be approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

Strength of Line Conductors.

2. All line conductors at the time of erection shall comply, as regards elongation, breaking load and elasticity, with the specification of the British Engineering Standards Association then in force.

(a) See note (b) to p. 2622, ante.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Minimum Size of Line Conductor.

3. The minimum permissible size for copper and other line conductors (other than service lines) shall be such as to have an actual breaking load of not less than 1,237 pounds, the equivalent minimum cross-sectional area and weight per mile for copper being as follows:—

Conductor.	Cross-sectional area. sq. ins.	Weight per Mile. Lbs.
No. 8 S.W.G.	0.0201	409

The minimum permissible size of service line shall be such as to have an actual breaking load of not less than 816 pounds, the equivalent minimum cross sectional area and weight per mile for copper being as follows:—

Conductor.	Cross-sectional area. sq. ins.	Weight per Mile. Lbs.
No. 10 S.W.G.	0.0129	262

Line Conductors to be inaccessible.

4. Line conductors shall be rendered inaccessible to any person from any building or other place without the use of a ladder or other special appliance.

Regard shall be had to the normal use by the occupier of any premises or land and where necessary (a) the height of the line conductors shall be increased to provide sufficient clearance for safety in accordance with such use, and (b) provision as hereinafter prescribed in Regulations 14 or 17 shall be made to prevent danger.

Line Conductors Crossing other Lines.

5. Where a line conductor crosses over or under, or is in proximity to any other overhead wire, precautions shall be taken by the Undertakers to prevent contact, due to breakage or otherwise, between the line conductor and the other overhead wire, or between the other wire and the line conductor.

Provided that where a line conductor crosses over any overhead wire other than a telegraph or telephone line of the Postmaster-General, the precautionary means to be adopted shall be as hereinafter prescribed in paragraph (3) of Regulation 18.

Provided further that this Regulation shall not be deemed to require the Undertakers to take precautions against contact between a broken line conductor and other auxiliary conductors and earth wires carried on the same support and forming part of the same overhead line.

Supports.

6. Line conductors shall be attached to suitable insulators carried on supports of wood, iron, steel or reinforced concrete. All wooden supports other than oak or hard wood cross-arms shall unless otherwise approved by the Electricity Commissioners be of red fir impregnated with creosote. Special precautions shall be taken to prevent the corrosion of all metal work at or below the surface of the ground.

Factor of Safety of Supports.

7. The supports, in conjunction with stays or struts if provided, shall withstand the longitudinal, transverse and vertical loads due to the ice loadings and wind pressure hereinafter specified without damage and without movement in the ground. In no case shall the strength of a support in the direction of the overhead line be less than one-quarter the required strength in a direction transverse to the line.

The following factors of safety shall apply to each support.

Material.	Factory of Safety.
Iron or Steel	2·5
Wood	3·5
Reinforced Concrete	3·5

These factors of safety shall be calculated on the assumption that all line conductors cables and wires carried by the supports are at a temperature of 22° F., and have a covering of ice to the radial thickness specified in Regulation 12 (or Regulation 15 according to the voltage) and that together with the supports they are subjected to a wind of 50 miles per hour at right angles to the line, this wind to be taken as exerting a pressure equivalent to 8 pounds per square foot calculated on the whole of the projected area.

The wind pressure on the lee side members of lattice steel or other compound structures, including A and H Poles, shall be taken as one-half of the wind pressure on the windward side members. The factor of safety shall be calculated on the crippling load of struts and upon the elastic limit of tension members.

Service Lines.

8. Service lines shall be connected to line conductors at a point of support only and shall be fixed to insulators on consumers' premises. Every part of a service line (other than a neutral conductor connected with earth) which is accessible from a building with the use of a ladder or other special appliance shall be efficiently protected either by insulating material or by other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

Erection of line conductors at different voltages on same supports.

9. Where line conductors forming parts of systems at different voltages are erected on the same poles or supports adequate provision shall be made to guard against danger to linesmen and from the lower voltage system being charged above its normal voltage by leakage from or contact with the higher voltage system ; and the type of construction shall be subject to the prior approval of the Electricity Commissioners.

Inspection and Maintenance of Lines.

10. Every overhead line, including its supports and structural parts, and electrical appliances and devices belonging to or connected therewith, shall be regularly inspected and efficiently maintained.

Materials used.

11. All materials used shall at the time of erection conform to the specifications of the British Engineering Standards Association and to the Post Office Technical Instructions for the Construction of Aerial Lines for the time being in force, so far as the same are applicable and are not inconsistent with these Regulations.

II.—SPECIFIC REGULATIONS.

[Applicable according to the voltage between line conductors where no part of the system is connected with earth, or according to the voltage to earth where part of the system is connected with earth.]

A. For voltages not exceeding 650 volts direct current and 325 volts alternating current.

Factor of Safety of Line Conductors.

12. The factor of safety of line conductors shall be 2. The factor of safety shall be based on the breaking load and shall be calculated on the assumption that the line conductors are at a temperature of 22° F. and have a covering of ice to a radial thickness of three-sixteenths of an inch, and that they are simultaneously subjected to a wind of 50 miles per hour at right angles to the line, this wind to be taken as exerting a pressure eqivalent to 8 pounds per square foot calculated on the whole of the projected area of the ice-covered lines.

The weight of ice is to be taken as 57 pounds per cubic foot.

The elasticity of the metal may be allowed for in calculating the sag for line conductors.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Minimum Height of Conductors.

13. The height from the ground of any line conductor (other than a service line), earth wire, or auxiliary conductor at any point of the span at a temperature of 122° F. shall not, except with the consent of the Electricity Commissioners, be less than 19 feet across a public road or 17 feet in other positions. A height of 15 feet may be adopted in situations inaccessible to vehicular traffic.

Where a service line is carried across or along a carriage-way, the height of the line from the ground at any part of the carriage-way shall not, except with the consent of the Electricity Commissioners, be less than 19 feet and 17 feet respectively.

Provision to Prevent Danger.

14. Where the voltage to earth exceeds 250 volts direct current or 125 volts alternating current, precautions should be taken to prevent danger—

(1) from a broken line conductor by the provision of—

(a) a neutral or earthed conductor carried continuously from pole to pole, and so arranged in relation to the other conductors that in the event of breakage of any one of them the line conductor shall make contact with the earthed wire; or

(b) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

(2) from leakage by the provision—

(a) in cases where metal poles are used, of

(i) an earthed wire, running from pole to pole and connected to the poles; or

(ii) a suitable metal framework to support the insulators carrying the line conductors, the framework being insulated from the pole but connected to the neutral conductor; or

(iii) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners

(b) in cases where wooden poles are used, of

(i) a bonding wire connected to the supporting metal-work of all insulators, the bonding wire terminating at the lowest part of the supporting metal-work; or

(ii) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

Where lightning conductors are used or other uninsulated conductors are run down wooden poles to within 10 feet from the ground, the precautions for the prevention of danger from leakage shall be as for metal poles.

All stay wires other than those which are connected with earth by means of a continuous earth wire shall be insulated to prevent danger from leakage. For this purpose an insulator shall be placed in each stay wire at a height of not less than 10 feet from the ground.

B. For voltages exceeding 650 volts direct current and 325 volts alternating current.

Factor of Safety of Line Conductors.

15. The factor of safety of line conductors shall be 2. The factor of safety shall be based on the breaking load and shall be calculated on the assumption that the line conductors are at a temperature of 22° F., and have a covering of ice to a radial thickness of three-eighths of an inch, and that they are simultaneously subjected to a wind of 50 miles per hour at right angles to the line, this wind to be taken as exerting a pressure equivalent to 8 pounds per square foot calculated on the whole of the projected area of the ice-covered lines.

The weight of ice is to be taken as 57 pounds per cubic foot.

The elasticity of the metal may be allowed for in calculating the sag for line conductors.

Minimum Height of Conductors.

16. The height from the ground of any line conductor at any point on the span at a temperature of 122° F. shall not, except with the consent of the Electricity Commissioners, be less than the height hereunder stated:—

Voltages not exceeding 66,000 volts.	20 feet.
Voltages exceeding 66,000 volts and not exceeding 110,000 volts.	21 feet.
Voltages exceeding 110,000 volts and not exceeding 165,000 volts.	22 feet.
Voltages exceeding 165,000 volts.	23 feet.

The height from the ground of an earth wire or auxiliary conductor shall not be less than the minimum heights prescribed in Regulation 13.

Provision to Prevent Danger.

17. Adequate means shall be provided to render any line conductor dead in the event of it falling due to breakage or otherwise.

All metal work other than conductors shall be permanently and efficiently connected with earth. For this purpose a continuous earth wire shall be provided and connected with earth at four points in every mile, the spacing between the points being as nearly equidistant as possible, or, alternatively, the metal work shall be connected to an effective earthing device at each individual support. The design and construction of the system of earth connections shall be such that when contact is made between a line conductor and metal connected with earth the resulting leakage current shall not be less than twice the leakage current required to operate the devices which make the line dead.

Road Crossings, &c.

18. Where an overhead line is erected along or across a public road or canal or across a railway or crosses over any other overhead wire, all wires forming part of the overhead line including earth wires and auxiliary conductors shall be placed at the appropriate height from the ground specified in Regulation 16 for line conductors, and the following additional precautions shall be taken to prevent danger:—

(1) In the case of a line erected along a public road or canal (or within 50 feet thereof) there shall be provided—

(a) duplicate insulators supporting the conductors; or

(b) a device to ensure that in the event of a line conductor falling it shall be put to earth; or

(c) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

(2) In the case of a line erected across a public road, canal or railway there shall be provided—

(a) duplicate insulators for supporting the line conductor and a device to ensure that in the event of a line conductor falling it shall be put to earth; or

(b) duplicate insulators supporting duplicate conductors tied at intervals not exceeding five feet; or

(c) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

(3) In the case of a line crossing over any other overhead wire there shall be provided—

(a) duplicate insulators for supporting the line conductor and a device to ensure that in the event of a line conductor falling it shall be put to earth; or

(b) duplicate insulators supporting duplicate conductors tied at intervals not exceeding five feet;

the provision prescribed in (a) or (b) hereof being supplemented in the case of line conductors at voltages exceeding 650 volts by the provision of arcing horns or rings; or

(c) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Danger Notices.

19. Supports shall be numbered consecutively and each support shall have a danger notice of a permanent character securely fixed to it. Adequate provision shall also be made to prevent unauthorised climbing.

These Regulations are made subject to the power of the Electricity Commissioners to make such further or other Regulations as they may think expedient and shall apply to any overhead lines erected by authorised undertakers:

Provided that these Regulations shall not apply to any overhead lines in existence at the date hereof and constructed and maintained by authorised undertakers under and in accordance with the provisions of any prior Regulations for overhead lines made by the Board of Trade or the Electricity Commissioners.

Signed by order of the Electricity Commissioners this 22nd day of May, 1931.

R. T. G. FRENCH,
Secretary to the Electricity Commissioners.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM ON THE REVISED CODE OF OVERHEAD LINE REGULATIONS (a) MADE BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS AND ON MATTERS RELEVANT THERETO.

The Electricity Commissioners have recently reviewed the Code of Overhead Line Regulations adopted by them in the latter part of 1923, with the object of determining whether relaxations consistent with the maintenance of a reasonable degree of safety to the public could be made for the purpose more particularly of facilitating the development of overhead distribution at the lower voltages in rural areas.

Due regard has been given to various representations on this matter which have been made to the Commissioners from time to time on behalf of the Electricity Supply Industry, and the technical aspects have formed the subject of conferences between the Commissioners and Electrical Engineers who have had considerable experience in the erection of overhead lines in rural districts and elsewhere. The Commissioners have also conferred with the Postmaster-General on the question of the relaxation of his requirements as to protection between telegraph or telephone lines and electric supply lines.

As a result, the Commissioners have adopted a revised Code of Overhead Line Regulations with effect as from April 16th, 1928 (b), and the following explanatory notes dealing with the various relaxations and with other relevant questions have been prepared for the information of the Electricity Supply Industry.

Regulation 1 (Materials for Line Conductors).

This Regulation remains unaltered, but it may be noted that the "other mater ials" for line conductors which have already been approved by the Electricity Commissioners in certain cases include steel-cored aluminium, steel, cadmium copper and other appropriate alloys of high tensile strength.

Regulation 3 (Minimum size of Line Conductor).

In view of the relaxation which has been made in the assumed ice loading on line conductors (Regulations 12 and 15) and in guarding requirements (Regulation 14), the minimum size of copper conductor (other than service lines) is in future to be No. 8 S.W.G. or the nearest equivalent section of stranded conductor (being not less than No. 8 S.W.G.). The minimum size of lines in general (other than service lines) is to be such that the actual breaking load shall be not less than 1,237 lbs.

(b) These are printed ante, p. 2669, as revised in 1931.

Regulation 6 (Supports).

Under this Regulation, as amended, the Commissioners will be prepared in special cases to consent to the use of wooden poles other than of red fir, provided that suitable precautions are taken in the felling, selection and treatment of the timber.

Regulation 7 (Factor of Safety of Supports).

After consultation with the Air Ministry, the National Physical Laboratory and the British Electrical and Allied Industries Research Association on the questions of climatic conditions, wind velocities and wind pressures, the Commissioners have decided to retain the same wind pressure and the same factors of safety as are prescribed by the existing Code in respect of supports and also of line conductors The wind pressure on the supports alone has been shown to vary with different types of support, but is usually only a small proportion of the total load on the supports.

The Commissioners have concluded, however, that the relaxed conditions with regard to the assumed ice loading on line conductors (Regulations 12 and 15) will enable supports of suitable size and strength, but of less expensive construction than hitherto, to be adopted consistently with securing the safety of the public. An enquiry is being continued into the factor of safety of reinforced concrete supports.

With regard to the foundation of supports, the Regulation now requires that the supports shall withstand the specified ice loadings and wind pressure without movement in the ground. As the working load under the Revised Code will constitute a greater proportion of the ultimate strength of the supports than under the prior Code, it will be more particularly necessary to pay attention to the foundations of wooden poles, which will require the addition of cross members or " kicking blocks " (excepting in the case of poles of small sizes) in order that the foundation may be as strong as the pole itself.

Regulation 8 (Service Lines).

The requirement for the protection of persons working on the outside of buildings may be generally assumed to involve the covering of all live conductors with durable insulating material for so much of their length as lies within 6 feet of the building.

Regulation 9 (Erection of line conductors at different voltages on same supports).

Although the construction of lines at different voltages on the same supports was not precluded under the prior Code, the Commissioners have considered it desirable to include a new Regulation dealing specifically with this matter. The Commissioners will be prepared to approve of types of construction under this Regulation which make adequate provision for avoiding danger to linesmen working on the lines and for preventing contact between the higher and lower voltage systems.

Regulation 12 (Factor of Safety of Line Conductors).

The Commissioners have made a relaxation in the assumed ice loading on lower voltage lines from one quarter of an inch to three-sixteenths of an inch, but, as previously indicated, have retained the provisions of the prior Code as to wind pressure and factor of safety. The assumed ice loading and unaltered factor of safety will permit of line conductors being strung to a tension which is at least as high as may profitably be used and is consistent with the tension when the line without the assumed ice loading is subjected to a wind of gale force equivalent to a pressure of 20 lbs. per sq. foot.

Regulation 13 (Minimum Height of Conductors).

The minimum height from the ground of lower voltage line conductors has been reduced from 20 feet to 19 feet across public roads ; to 17 feet along public roads and in other positions ; and to 15 feet in situations inaccessible to vehicular traffic.

The minimum height of service lines has been reduced from 20 feet to 19 feet across carriage ways and to 17 feet along carriageways.

Regulation 14 (Provision to Prevent Danger).

Provided that one of the conductors is properly connected to earth at the point of supply and that the lines are so arranged that the earthed conductor is placed below the other conductors, no other guarding on lower voltage lines will be required.

If the conductors are arranged in a vertical plane with the earthed conductor placed lowermost, the protection afforded is adequate. If the conductors are not so arranged, then the earthed conductor, which must still be erected in the lowermost position, should be staggered from right to left of each succeeding support so as to afford a reasonable certainty that a broken conductor will make contact with the earthed conductor.

With the reduction in the minimum height from the ground afforded by Regulation 13, many lower voltage lines will be able to pass beneath other lines such as telegraph or telephone wires. The Commissioners are in a position to state that in such cases the requirements of the Postmaster-General for guard wires will be satisfied if a single earthed wire is run above the power wires for the length of the span.

The Postmaster-General has further agreed to a relaxation in the Post Office Memorandum T.E. 80 (protection of telegraphs from contact with low and medium pressure power circuits) by modifying his present requirement of 4 feet clearance between low and medium pressure power wires and telegraph lines to the extent of allowing a minimum of 2 feet if the power line supports are placed in such a position with respect to Post Office wires that there shall be no danger to men working on the Post Office poles and that there shall be no appreciable difference in sag under the worst conditions of ice loading.

The requirement of a bonding wire connected to the supporting metalwork of all insulators used with wooden poles appears to be necessary in the interest of Authorised Undertakers; and a suitable earthing of metal poles is likewise necessary. These features are therefore retained in the new Regulations.

Where lightning conductors are used with wooden poles, it is desirable that to a height of 10 feet from the ground they should either be insulated or connected to a continuous earth wire having an efficient earth connection. The Commissioners have also concluded that where stay wires are used in conjunction with wooden poles, it is necessary that insulators should be interposed in the stay wire. Such insulators would not be necessary in stay wires fixed to metal poles which are protected from leakage in accordance with Regulation 14 (2).

Regulation 15 (Factor of Safety of Line Conductors).

The Commissioners have made a reduction in the assumed ice loading on higher voltage lines from one half of an inch to three-eighths of an inch, but, as previously indicated, have retained the provisions of the prior Code as to wind pressure and factor of safety. The relaxation affords a reasonable measure of relief from the original requirement.

Regulation 16 (Minimum Height of Conductors).

In the case of higher voltage line conductors, the Commissioners have decided to retain the provisions of the prior Code as to minimum height above ground. The Regulation has been amplified, however, to deal with the minimum height of associated earth wires or auxiliary conductors.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

The combined effect of the preceding relaxations in the case of lower voltage lines will be found to be such as to enable supports of reduced diameter as well as of reduced length to be employed. For example, making due allowance for the reduction in the height of a lower voltage line above the ground from 20 feet to 17 feet (Regulation 13), a wooden pole having a diameter of only 7¼ inches at a distance of 5 feet from the butt will hereafter be needed where previously a diameter of 8¼ inches would have been required under the prior Code.

As a further means of facilitating the extension of overhead distribution in rural areas, the Commissioners are prepared, under their Regulations for securing the safety of the public and for ensuring a proper and sufficient supply of electrical energy, to give consent in special cases to a voltage variation within the limits of plus 4 and minus 8 per cent. of the declared voltage on rural lines for a provisional period pending the completion of the distribution system and its full measure of interconnection. After such provisional period, the variation can reasonably be limited to the normal requirement of plus or minus 4 per cent.

PROCEDURE.

The Commissioners suggest that Authorised Undertakers should take a reasonably long view of the probable development of low voltage overhead distribution in their area and should, where practicable, make application to the Minister of Transport for a consent to more comprehensive proposals than hitherto instead of making repeated applications for individual lines, thus saving time and expense.

With the view of expediting the consideration of applications, the procedure formerly adopted by the Board of Trade and continued by the Commissioners on behalf of the Minister of Transport, of referring all overhead line applications to the Postmaster-General for his observations will, by agreement between the Departments, be abandoned as from the issue of the Revised Regulations. The Commissioners suggest, however, that in all cases where it is intended to run high voltage or extra high voltage overhead lines for an appreciable distance parallel with Post Office overhead routes, the Authorised Undertakers concerned should adopt the general practice of conferring with the Post Office Engineers in their district prior to applying for consent to such overhead lines, so that the possibility of inductive interference may be considered before the route is actually fixed. It will, of course, still be necessary for the Undertakers to give statutory notice to the Postmaster-General in compliance with Section 14 of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899.

With the concurrence of the Minister of Transport, the existing Memorandum of particulars required in connection with proposals to erect overhead lines (Form El. C. 34) has been modified with the view of simplifying procedure. The main alterations in the Revised Memorandum (El. C. 53B) are as follows:—

(a) Legible tracings or prints taken from 6-inch Ordnance maps may now be submitted in lieu of the maps themselves; and in cases relating to overhead lines at extra high voltage, duplicate maps will not in future be required.

(b) Where an undertaker has submitted full technical details with one application and consent is subsequently sought to the construction of further overhead lines to the same specification, it will not be necessary to resubmit full technical details, but only to furnish certain limited particulars.

(c) A form of communication which the Undertakers should send to the Local Authority or County Council when proposing to apply to the Minister for consent to erect overhead lines has been drawn up and is included in the Revised Memorandum.

(5) It shall be lawful for any annual provision required to be made by the Board for the repayment of money borrowed for any of the purposes of this Act, to be suspended whilst the expenditure out of such moneys remains unremunerative, for such period and subject to such conditions as the Electricity Commissioners after consultation with the Treasury may determine.

Provided that such suspension shall not be for a longer period than five years from the commencement of the financial year next after that in which such expenditure is incurred.

28.—(1) The Board may, for the purpose of raising money which they are authorised to borrow under this Act, issue stock (to be called Central Electricity Stock).

(2) Such sums as may from time to time be required by the Treasury for fulfilling any guarantees given under this section shall be charged on and issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom or the growing produce thereof.

(3) The repayment to the Treasury of any sums so issued out of the Consolidated Fund, together with interest thereon at such rate as the Treasury may fix, shall be a charge on the undertaking and all the revenues of the Board next after the principal and interest of the guaranteed loan, and any sinking fund payments for the repayment of the principal thereof, and in priority to any other charges not existing at the date on which the loan is raised.

(4) All sums paid from time to time in or towards the repayment of any sum issued out of the Consolidated Fund under this section shall be paid into the Exchequer.

(5) The Treasury shall so long as any such guarantees are in force, lay before both Houses of Parliament in every year within one month after the thirty-first day of March a statement of the guarantees (if any) given during the year ended on that date, and an account up to that date of the total sums (if any) which have been either issued out of the Consolidated Fund under this section or paid in or towards repayment of any money so issued.

Now therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1926 (hereinafter called "the Act") and any and every other power thereunto him enabling the Minister of Transport with the approval of the Treasury hereby makes the following Regulations (hereinafter referred to as "the Regulations") and does hereby order and prescribe that the Regulations shall apply to the exercise by the Board of the powers of borrowing conferred by the Act and to the issue, transfer, dealing with and redemption of Central Electricity Stock.

PART V.—INTEREST.

ARTICLE 20.—(1) For the payment of the interest on the securities issued or granted by the Board there shall in each year be carried to accounts of the Electricity Fund entitled Interest Fund Accounts a sum or sums equal in the aggregate to the amount of all interest payable or accrued due during the year.

(2) There shall be a separate Interest Fund Account, distinguished by a number or otherwise, for each class of security.

(3) The Board shall from time to time pay the interest on each security and charge the same to the appropriate Interest Fund Account.

ARTICLE 21.—Interest on each security shall be paid at such half-yearly or other intervals and on such days as on the issue or grant thereof the Board shall prescribe.

ARTICLE 22.—Neither the Board nor any Registrar to be appointed as hereinafter provided shall be required to pay any executors or administrators any interest on any security held by their testator or intestate until the probate of the will or the letters of administration has or have been left with the appropriate Registrar for registration.

ARTICLE 23.—The appropriate Registrar before paying any interest on any security may, if the circumstances of the case appear to him to make it expedient, require evidence of the title of any person claiming a right to receive the interest, and that evidence shall be a statutory declaration of competent persons or of such other nature as such Registrar, with the approval of the Board, may require.

ARTICLE 24.—(1) Except so far as may be otherwise directed by any holder of a security interest on his security shall be paid by means of warrants sent through the post. Such warrants when sent by post shall subject as hereinafter provided be sent to the registered address of such holder or in the case of joint registered holders (except where otherwise directed by all such holders) to the registered address of that one of them whose name stands first on the register in respect of the security in question: Provided that:—

(a) where the registered address of any such holder is outside the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State such holder shall furnish to the Registrar an address within the United Kingdom or the Irish Free State to which the warrants are from time to time to be sent; and

(b) the registered holder may by writing under his hand direct that the interest on his security shall be sent to some other address within the United Kingdom or the Irish Free State and thereupon the warrant shall be sent accordingly.

(2) The posting by the appropriate Registrar or an officer of the Registrar or of the Board of a warrant for interest in a pre-paid letter directed to such an address as heretofore mentioned shall be a good discharge to the Board for such interest.

(3) Every warrant so sent by post shall be deemed to be a cheque and the Board and the appropriate Registrar shall in relation thereto be deemed to be bankers within the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (a).

(4) Where two or more joint registered holders of any security have given a direction as to the payment of interest thereon, and one of them becomes of unsound mind, such direction shall not thereby become void.

ARTICLE 25.—(1) If at any time any interest on any security is unclaimed at the time for payment thereof the same shall, nevertheless, on demand at any subsequent time be paid to the person showing his right to recover the same, but without interest in the meantime.

(2) Where any interest remains unclaimed for three years from the time for payment thereof, the Board shall cause notice thereof to be sent by post in a registered letter addressed to the holder of the security named in the register relating thereto, by the description and at the address therein appearing, and so at the expiration of a further period of three years if the same still remains unclaimed.

(3) When any interest on any security has been unclaimed for six years and upwards, the Board may transfer the amount then accrued due and all interest subsequently accruing due to the credit of their revenue account or any other account that the Board may think fit, or may otherwise deal with and apply the same for the purposes of the Board, and that whether with or without making any provision for the payment of the said interest if and when claimed: Provided always that any such transfer, dealing or application shall be without prejudice to the rights of any person entitled to such interest to recover the same from the Board.

(a) 2 Halsbury's Statutes 76.

PART VI.—REPAYMENT OF BORROWED MONEY AND REDEMPTION OF SECURITIES.

ARTICLE 26.—(1) For the redemption and repayment of all money borrowed in exercise of a statutory borrowing power, there shall be carried in each year of the prescribed period to accounts of the Electricity Fund entitled "the Redemption Fund Accounts" a sum or sums for paying off such money and for redeeming or purchasing and extinguishing the security or securities issued in respect thereof.

(2) There shall be a separate Redemption Fund Account distinguished by a number or otherwise for each security or class of security. Each such Account is hereinafter referred to as "the Redemption Fund Account."

(3) The sums to be carried to the Redemption Fund Account shall be either—

(a) equal yearly or half-yearly sums sufficient without accumulations to repay the money to which the Account relates within the prescribed period, or

(b) equal yearly sums which, if accumulated at compound interest at a rate not exceeding three and one half pounds per centum per annum or at such other rate as the Board, with the consent of the Minister, may from time to time determine, would be sufficient to pay off the money to which the account relates within such period, and in addition thereto a sum equivalent to interest on the amount from time to time standing to the credit of the Account at the rate per centum per annum on which the aforesaid equal yearly sums are based.

(4) The first contribution to the Redemption Fund Account shall, subject to the proviso to Article 7 hereof, be made within twelve months, or, when the money is repaid by half-yearly instalments, within six months from the commencement of the prescribed period.

ARTICLE 27.—(1) The Board may from time to time apply the whole or any part of any sums standing to the credit of any Redemption Fund Account in redeeming according to the terms of issue, the security to which the Account relates, or in purchasing the security, or for both purposes.

(2) Pending, or in default of, or to the extent to which the Board shall not have made any application of the said amount in manner aforesaid or in the manner authorised by Article 29 hereof the Board shall invest the said amount in statutory securities and the interest or annual proceeds arising from every such investment shall be carried to the general revenue account of the Electricity Fund.

(3) Where the sums to be carried to a Redemption Fund Account have been calculated in the manner provided by paragraph (3) (b) of the last preceding Article and money standing to the credit of that Account has been applied in manner provided by paragraph (1) of this Article, the Board shall carry to the credit of the Account each year an additional sum equivalent to the interest which would have been produced by the money so applied if invested at the rate per centum per annum on which the equal yearly payments to the Account are based.

ARTICLE 28.—(1) If it appears to the Board at any time that the amount standing to the credit of or the investments representing any Redemption Fund Account, together with the future yearly sums to be carried to the Account under the Regulations, will probably not be sufficient within the prescribed period to make up a sum equal to the amount required to redeem the security to which the Account relates, the sums to be carried to the Account shall be increased annually or otherwise to such extent as will make up the deficiency and if it appears to the Minister that any such increase is necessary the Board shall increase the sums to be carried to the Account to such extent as the Minister may direct.

(2) If the Board desire to accelerate the repayment of the loan to which any Redemption Fund Account relates they may, with the approval of the Minister increase, annually or otherwise, the sums to be carried to the Account.

(3) If it appears to the Board at any time that the amount standing to the credit of or the investments representing any Redemption Fund Account together with the future yearly sums to be carried to the Account under the Regulations will probably be more than sufficient within the prescribed period to make up a sum equal to the amount required to redeem the security, the sums to be carried to the Account may be reduced, either temporarily or permanently, to such extent as the Minister may allow.

(4) If at any time the total amount carried to the credit of and the investments representing any Redemption Fund Account will, in the opinion of the Minister, probably be sufficient within the prescribed period to make up the amount required to redeem the security, the Board may, for so long as the Minister may allow, cease to carry any further sums to the Account.

(5) Any surplus standing to the credit of any Redemption Fund Account after the redemption or purchase of the security and the discharge of the whole of the money to which the Account relates, shall be applied to such purpose or purposes as the Board, with the consent of the Minister, may determine.

ARTICLE 29.—For the purpose of exercising any statutory borrowing power either wholly or partially the Board may, with the consent of the Minister, instead of raising money in accordance with the Regulations, employ any money for the time being standing to the credit of any Redemption Fund Account and sell and employ the proceeds of any securities in which the last mentioned money is for the time being invested.

Provided that no money standing to the credit of a Redemption Fund Account shall be so employed unless provision is made for replacing the same, together with any loss of interest occasioned by reason of so employing such money, at or before the date at which the security redeemable by means of such money is required to be redeemed and within a period not exceeding that within which provision would have had to be made for the repayment of such money if the same had been raised by the creation and issue of an additional security.

ARTICLE 30.—(1) In any year where money, standing to the credit of the Redemption Fund Account relating to any stock or bonds, is applied in the purchase of stock or bonds of the class to which the Account relates, at a rate exceeding the redemption price of such stock or bonds, the Board shall carry to that Account during the year in which the purchase is made an additional sum or sums equal in amount to the sum or sums so paid in excess.

(2) Where the Board redeem or purchase any stock or bonds by the application of money standing to the credit of the Redemption Fund Account relating thereto, the stock or bonds so redeemed or purchased shall be deemed to be a security issued in respect of such one or more of the statutory borrowing powers exercised by the creation and issue of the security and, if in respect of more than one, in such proportions, as the Board may determine subject to the approval of the Minister, after consultation with the Treasury. Provided that no larger amount of stock or bonds shall be deemed to be redeemed or purchased in respect of any statutory borrowing power than the amount which, according to the actual price of redemption or purchase, could be redeemed or purchased with the money carried to the Redemption Fund Account in respect of that borrowing power.

(3) Where the Board in the exercise of a statutory borrowing power create and issue or grant any security for the purpose of re-borrowing money or of redeeming any security they shall make such adjustments (if any) as may be necessary in the Redemption Fund Accounts.

ARTICLE 31.—Any security redeemed or purchased by the Board shall by virtue of the Regulations be extinguished.

ARTICLE 32.—(1) If at the end of a period of ten years after the date (hereinafter referred to as "the date of redemption") at which any class of security is to be redeemed, the Board, by reason of the holder of any security of that class not being forthcoming or by reason of any doubt as to the ownership of any such security, shall not have been able to redeem the security, the Board shall invest in statutory securities a sum equal to the amount required to redeem the security which cannot be redeemed by reason as aforesaid, and thereupon the security shall be deemed to have been extinguished.

(2) Any investments by the Board as aforesaid shall, unless realised for the purpose of satisfying any claim in respect of the security represented by the same, be kept invested and the income therefrom shall be invested in statutory securities for a further period of ten years after which time the Board may appropriate the said sum and the accumulations thereof for such purposes as the Minister may approve, without prejudice nevertheless to the rights of any persons to recover the said sum and accumulations. No interest shall accrue or be payable by the Board on any unclaimed security in respect of any period subsequent to the date of redemption of such security.

PART VII.—REGISTRARS, TRANSFER OF SECURITIES, &c.

ARTICLE 33.—The Board shall before making each issue of stock or bonds and before granting any mortgage appoint and thereafter keep appointed on such terms and subject to such conditions and instructions not inconsistent with the Regulations as they think expedient, an officer of the Board or any other persons or the Bank of England or any banking or other company as Registrar of the stock or bonds to be issued or as Registrar or mortgages for all or any of the purposes of the Regulations. The general practice of the Bank of England shall apply to all securities issued under the Regulations of which they are the Registrar.

ARTICLE 34.—Each Registrar shall keep books relating to each class of security for which he is appointed Registrar (hereinafter referred to as "the register") in which shall be entered :—

(a) in the case of stock—

the name, address and description of each holder from time to time of stock of the class to which the register relates and the amount held by him ;

(b) in the case of mortgages—

(i) the names, addresses and descriptions of the parties to each mortgage, the number and date thereof, the amount for which the same is granted and particulars of the property mortgaged : and

(ii) the date of registration of each mortgage and the date on which the same is paid off ;

(c) in the case of bonds—

the name, address and description of each holder from time to time of bonds of the class to which the register relates, a statement of the amount of the bonds held by him, the periods for which they are issued, and, the property (if any) on which they are charged : and, if the bonds are secured by a trust deed, the numbers and dates of the certificates issued to him as hereinafter provided, or, if the bonds are not so secured, the number of each bond held by him, and the date of registration of each bond and the date on which the same is paid off.

ARTICLE 35.—On the registration of stock or of bonds secured by a trust deed, the appropriate Registrar shall issue to the holder of the stock or bonds a certificate of the proprietorship of such stock or bonds (as the case may be), and such certificate shall be primâ facie evidence of the title of the person named therein.

ARTICLE 36.—Subject to the Regulations and to the terms on which the security is issued the holder of any security may transfer the same in whole or in part, except that no mortgage or bond not secured by a trust deed shall be transferred in part, and no part of a bond secured by a trust deed shall be transferred which is not of an amount for which a bond may be issued by the Board.

ARTICLE 37.—(1) The Registrar of inscribed stock shall keep books (hereinafter referred to as "the stock transfer books") wherein transfers of inscribed stock shall be entered.

(2) Every such entry shall be framed in proper words for the purpose of transfer, and shall be signed by the person or persons making the transfer or by his or their agent lawfully authorised in writing under power of attorney in a form prepared, and executed as required, by the Registrar of inscribed stock.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

S. R. & O., 1931, No. 700.

THE SCALE OF DEPRECIATION (TRANSMISSION LINE ALLOWANCE) SPECIAL ORDER, 1931, MADE BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS UNDER THE ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACTS, 1882 TO 1928, AND CONFIRMED MAY 12TH, 1931, BY THE MINISTER OF TRANSPORT UNDER THE ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACT, 1919, FIXING A SCALE OF DEPRECIATION FOR THE PURPOSES OF SECTION 12 OF AND THE THIRD SCHEDULE TO THE ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACT, 1926, IN RELATION TO TRANSMISSION LINES USED BY CERTAIN AUTHORISED UNDERTAKERS FOR GIVING BULK SUPPLIES OF ELECTRICITY.

Whereas by Section 12 of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1926, (hereinafter referred to as " the Act of 1926 "), it is provided (inter alia) that where any authorised undertakers take a supply of electricity directly or indirectly from the Central Electricity Board the price charged by them for the supply of electricity in bulk to any other authorised undertakers or for a supply for haulage or traction purposes to a railway company shall notwithstanding anything in the Special Act or Order relating to their undertaking be on the same terms as those on which the undertakers receive the supply directly or indirectly from the said Board together with such charges and allowances in respect of any transmission line or part thereof used by the undertakers giving the supply in bulk for the purpose of that supply as are mentioned in the Third Schedule to the Act of 1926, subject to a proviso in respect of contracts made before the passing of the said Act:

And whereas the Third Schedule to the Act of 1926 provides that the charges and allowances therein mentioned which may be made in respect of a transmission line used by authorised undertakers for giving a supply in bulk to other authorised undertakers may include, where the authorised undertakers owning the transmission line are a company, an allowance for depreciation of an amount determined in accordance with a scale fixed by Special Order, subject in the case of any company which is a London Company, within the meaning of the London and Home Counties Electricity District Order, 1925, to the proviso set out in the said Third Schedule:

Now therefore in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1928 (a), and of any and every other power thereunto them enabling, the Electricity Commissioners do hereby make this Special Order as follows, that is to say:—

1. This Order may be cited as the Scale of Depreciation (Transmission Line Allowance) Special Order 1931.

2. For the purposes of this Order—

The expression " year of account " means the year of account of the owners of the transmission line.

The expression " the prescribed period " means in respect of each of the assets mentioned in Part I of the Schedule to this Order the number of years specified in that Part in relation to such asset, in each case from the commencement of the year of account next following that in which the particular asset first became available for use for the purposes of the transmission line, and in respect of each of the assets mentioned in Part II of the said Schedule the period therein specified in relation to such asset.

The expression " the prescribed rate " means the rate of four and one half pounds per centum per annum or such lower rate as the Electricity Commissioners may for the time being prescribe in any particular case.

The expression " original cost " means the amount properly expended for capital purposes and attributable to an asset forming part of the transmission line save that where such asset has been available for use for not less than the prescribed period and is subsequently displaced the amount properly expended in the provision of any new asset less a sum equal to the market value (if any) of the displaced asset at the date when it ceased to be used for the purposes of the transmission line shall be deemed to be the original cost of the new asset.

(a) As to the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1928, see note (b), on p. 2622, ante.

The expression " date of supply " means the date when the transmission line commenced to be used for the giving of a supply of electricity in respect of which the provisions as to price charges and allowances referred to in Section 12 of the Act of 1926 apply and where used in relation to any asset referred to in this Order means in respect of the transmission line of which the asset forms part such date.

3. Subject to the provisions of the Act of 1926, the scale of depreciation to be applied in determining the charges and allowances which may be made in any year of account (and so in proportion for any part of a year of account) in respect of any transmission line or part thereof whereof the owners are a company pursuant to Section 12 of and the Third Schedule to the Act of 1926 is hereby fixed as follows :—

From the date of supply or from the commencement of the year of account next following that in which a particular asset forming part of the transmission line first becomes available for use for the purposes of the transmission line whichever be the later—

(a) In respect of freehold land (including the cost of clearing the site)—Nil.

(b) In respect of each of the assets mentioned in the Schedule to this Order—

An allowance of such an amount as would if made annually throughout the prescribed period and accumulated at compound interest at the prescribed rate produce by the end of such period an amount equal to the original cost of the asset ; and subject as hereinafter provided such allowance shall cease at the end of the prescribed period or when the asset ceases to be used for the purposes of the transmission line whichever first occurs.

Provided always that where any asset by reason of obsolescence ceases to be used after the date of supply but before the end of the prescribed period the body or bodies taking the supply shall within such period not extending beyond the prescribed period as may be agreed between them and the Undertakers giving the supply or as failing agreement may be determined as in this Order provided make such further allowance or allowances as, when added to (i) the market value (if any) of such asset at the date of such cessation, (ii) the total amount which would have been allowed in respect of that asset if the depreciation allowances mentioned in paragraph (b) of this Section had been made from the commencement of the prescribed period up to the date of cessation and (iii) the sum which represents compound interest at the prescribed rate up to the end of the prescribed period on such market value from the date when it is realised and on each such depreciation allowance and further allowance from the date when it is made, will make up the original cost of the asset.

4. Except so far as may be otherwise provided by the Act of 1926 if any difference shall arise between the owner of a transmission line and any interested body under the provisions of this Order such difference shall, failing agreement, be determined by the Electricity Commissioners or at their option be referred to and determined by an arbitrator to be appointed by them.

5. This Order shall commence and come into force as soon as it shall have lain before each House of Parliament for a period of thirty days during which that House is sitting if neither of those Houses before the expiration of that period presents an Address to His Majesty against this Order or any part thereof.

Whereas by Section 7 of the Electricity Supply Act, 1926, (hereinafter referred to as " the Act of 1926 "), it is provided (inter alia) that as from such date as may be fixed by the Central Electricity Board (hereinafter referred to as " the Board ") the owners of a generating station which by virtue of a scheme under Section 4 of the said Act becomes a selected station shall be under obligation to sell to the Board all electricity generated at the station at a price which shall, unless otherwise agreed, be the cost of production ascertained in accordance with the rules contained in the Second Schedule to the Act of 1926:

And whereas it is further provided by Section 7 of the Act of 1926 that the owners of a selected station shall subject and without prejudice to the therein mentioned provisions and powers of the said Act be entitled to be supplied by the Board from that station with such amount of electricity as they may require for the purposes of their undertaking not exceeding the amount generated at the station at a price which shall, unless otherwise agreed, be either the cost of production ascertained as aforesaid and adjusted according to the load factor and power factor of the supply given to the owners of the selected station together with a proper proportion of the Board's expenses other than those incurred by the Board in the purchase or generation of electricity or according to the tariff fixed under the Act of 1926 for the supply of electricity by the Board, whichever is the lower:

And whereas the Second Schedule to the Act of 1926 provides that the cost of production of electricity at any selected station shall be ascertained by calculating the costs, charges and allowances therein mentioned in respect of the year of account including where the owners of the station are a company an allowance for depreciation of an amount determined in accordance with a scale fixed by Special Order, subject in the case of any company which is a London Company within the meaning of the London and Home Counties Electricity District Order, 1925, to the proviso set out in the said Second Schedule:

Now therefore in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1928 (a), and of any and every other power thereunto them enabling, the Electricity Commissioners hereby make this Special Order as follows, that is to say:—

The expression "original cost" means the amount properly expended for capital purposes and attributable to an asset forming part of the selected generating station save that where such asset has been available for use for not less than the prescribed period and is subsequently displaced the amount properly expended in the provision of any new asset less a sum equal to the market value (if any) of the displaced asset at the date when it ceased to be used for the purposes of the generating station shall be deemed to be the original cost of the new asset.

3. Subject to the provisions of the Act of 1926, the scale of depreciation to be applied in determining the cost of production of electricity in any year of account (and so in proportion for any part of a year of account) at any selected generating station whereof the owners are a company pursuant to Section 7 of and the Second Schedule to the Act of 1926 is hereby fixed as follows:—

From the date of operation or from the commencement of the year of account next following that in which a particular asset forming part of the generating station first becomes available for use for the purposes of the generating station whichever be the later—

Whereas by Section 5 of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1926 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1926"), it is provided that the Central Electricity Board (hereinafter referred to as "the Board") shall make arrangements with the owners of existing generating stations which by virtue of a scheme under Section 4 of the Act of 1926 become selected stations for the stations being operated in accordance with the provisions of the said Act and for such extensions and alterations thereof as may be required by the scheme and for such additional extensions and alterations as the Board with the approval of the Electricity Commissioners may from time to time direct; and that if the owners of any such station are unwilling to enter into or fail to carry out any such arrangements to the satisfaction of the Board, the Minister of Transport may by order empower any authorised undertakers or other company or person approved by the Board, or failing such authorised undertakers, company or person, the Board to acquire the generating station at a price to be determined in accordance with the provisions of the First Schedule to that Act:

And whereas by Sub-section (2) of Section 8 of the Act of 1926 it is provided that where a scheme under the said Act provides for the acquisition by the Board of any main transmission line belonging to any authorised undertakers, such transmission line shall, on notice being given by the Board to the undertakers and on payment or tender to the undertakers of the price to be determined in accordance with the First Schedule to that Act, vest in the Board upon an order to that effect being made by the Minister of Transport:

And whereas by the First Schedule to the said Act it is provided that the price of a generating station or main transmission line shall be such sum as may be certified or determined as therein provided to have been the amount of the expenses properly incurred on and incidental to the provision of the generating station or main transmission line, less depreciation on a scale fixed by Special Order:

Now therefore in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1928 (a), and of any and every other power thereunto them enabling, the Electricity Commissioners hereby make this Special Order as follows, that is to say:—

(b) In respect of a generating station for the portion of the prescribed period between the date of operation and the date of vesting—

An amount equal to the allowances for depreciation provided for by the Second Schedule to the Act of 1926 or by any Special Order made in pursuance of paragraph (f) (ii) of the said Schedule accumulated at compound interest up to the date of vesting at the rate at which the allowances are calculated together with a further amount representing compound interest from the date of operation up to the date of vesting at the rate of four and one half pounds per centum per annum on the total amount of depreciation at the date of operation calculated in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (a) (ii) hereof.

4. The expression " Service line " means an electric line through which energy may be supplied or intended to be supplied by the Owner to any premises other than the premises where the energy is generated.

The expression " Pressure " means the difference of electrical potential between any two conductors through which a supply of energy is given, or between any part of either conductor and the earth ; and

(a) Where the conditions of the supply are such that the pressure at any pair of consumer's terminals does not exceed 250 volts, the supply shall be deemed a low pressure supply.

(b) Where the conditions of the supply are such that the pressure exceeds 250 volts but does not exceed 650 volts, the supply shall be deemed a medium pressure supply.

(c) Where the conditions of the supply are such that the pressure exceeds 650 volts but does not exceed 3,000 volts, the supply shall be deemed a high pressure supply ; and

The expression " neutral wire " means a wire directly connected to a neutral point.

Other expressions to which meanings are assigned in the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1926 (a), have the same respective meanings in these Regulations.

I.—GENERAL.

Regulations not to imply power to interfere with streets.

1. Nothing in these Regulations shall be deemed to authorise the Owner to break up or interfere with any street.

Pressure exceeding 250 volts.

2. Where the pressure of the supply exceeds 250 volts, all wires, switches and metal work in connection with the supply shall be so enclosed or shall be fixed in such a manner that there shall be no risk of any shock being obtained by inadvertence or in the ordinary handling thereof.

Insulation Test.

3. The insulation of every electric circuit (whether connected with earth in accordance with these Regulations or not) including all machinery and apparatus forming part of or in connection with that circuit, shall be so maintained that the leakage current shall not exceed one-thousandth part of the maximum current ; and suitable means shall be provided for the indication and localisation of leakage. Every leakage shall be remedied without delay. Every such circuit shall be periodically tested for insulation.

Precautions against Shock or Fire.

4. In the use or delivery of energy, the Owner shall exercise all due precautions so as to avoid the risk of causing electric shock or fire, and shall be responsible for all electric lines, fittings and apparatus belonging to him, or under his control, being maintained in a safe condition.

(a) As to the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1926, see note (b) on p. 2622, ante.

Protection from Lightning.

5. Any electric line or any support therefor exposed to liability to injury from lightning, shall be efficiently protected against such liability.

Protection of Mains.

6. All mains below ground shall be so laid and protected as to avoid risk of damage by accumulation of gas or leakage of electric current.

Reports of Accidents.

7. Where any accident by explosion or fire, or any other accident of such kind as to have caused or to be likely to have caused loss of life or personal injury has occurred at any part of any electric line or other works, the Owner shall give immediate notice thereof to the Electricity Commissioners.

Notice to Postmaster-General.

8.—(a) The Owner, on receipt of a request in writing by the Postmaster-General, shall serve forthwith on the Postmaster-General a notice describing every electric line used for the supply of energy, together with a plan showing the mode and position in which such electric line is laid.

(b) The Owner in placing and using his electric lines shall employ every reasonable means to prevent injurious affection, whether by induction or otherwise, of any telegraphs of the Postmaster-General, or the communication through such telegraphs. The Postmaster-General may at any time serve upon the Owner notice requiring such alteration in the position and mode of laying or mode of use of any electric line of the Owner or compliance with such other conditions as the Postmaster-General may think necessary for the due protection of his electric lines or other works, and failure on the part of the Owner to comply with any such notice shall be deemed to be a non-compliance with the requirements of the Electricity Commissioners' Notice to which these Regulations are annexed.

(c) Any notice required to be served upon the Postmaster-General under these Regulations may be served by being addressed to the General Post Office, London, E.C.1, or by being addressed to and left at or transmitted through the post to the Office of the Sectional Engineer in whose area the works specified in the notice are situated, and any notice required to be served on the owner may be served by being addressed to him and left at or transmitted through the post to his Office or last known place of address.

Sub-stations and Transformers.

9. Sub-stations shall be established in suitable places and shall be in the sole occupation and charge of the Owner and subject to any requirements of the Home Office. Where transformers are used in any other premises (not being sub-stations as defined for the purposes of these Regulations) they shall be so guarded and protected as to avoid the risk of causing electric shock.

II.—EXTRA HIGH PRESSURE MAINS, &C.

Testing of Insulation.

10. An extra high pressure main shall not be brought into use unless, after it has been placed in position and before it is used for the purposes of supply, the insulation of every part thereof has withstood the continuous application, during half-an-hour, of pressure exceeding the maximum pressure to which it is intended to be subjected in use, that is to say, in the case of every electric line to be used for a pressure not exceeding 10,000 volts twice the said maximum pressure and in the case of a line to be used for a pressure exceeding 10,000 volts a pressure exceeding the said maximum pressure by 10,000 volts, and the Owner shall record the results of the tests of each main or section of a main.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Protection by Fuses or Circuit Breakers.

11. Every extra high pressure main shall be protected by a suitable fuse or automatic circuit-breaker, but in the case of a concentric main that fuse or circuit-breaker shall not be inserted in any external conductor thereof which is connected with earth.

Prevention of Leakage in Transformers.

12. In every case where an extra high pressure supply is transformed or converted to a reduced pressure, some suitable automatic and quick-acting means shall be provided to protect the reduced pressure circuits from any accidental contact with or leakage from the extra high pressure system, either within or without the transforming or converting apparatus.

Electrical Continuity of Metal Conduits, &c.

13. All metal conduits, pipes or casings, containing any extra high pressure electric line shall be efficiently connected with earth, and shall be so jointed and connected across all street boxes and other openings so as to make good electrical connection throughout their whole length.

Lines above Ground or in Subways.

14. Every portion of any extra high pressure electric line placed above the surface of the ground, otherwise than in a sub-station, or in any subway not in the sole occupation of the Owner shall be completely enclosed either in a tube of highly insulated material embedded in brickwork, masonry, or cement concrete, or in strong metal casing efficiently connected with earth.

Prevention of Leakage.

15. Where extra high pressure mains for three-phase supply consist of insulated conductors laid together, provision shall be made to ensure that neither the ground nor any neighbouring electric line or conductor can become charged by leakage from any such main.

Where this provision is made by a copper strip under a lead sheath, that strip shall be not less than sixteen-thousandths of an inch in thickness, and where it is made by steel wires outside a lead sheath, each of those wires shall be not less than one-tenth of an inch in diameter.

Where the mains are enclosed in a lead sheath, that sheath shall not be less than one-tenth of an inch in thickness, and shall be permanently and efficiently connected with earth.

Mains for Single Phase Supply.

16. Extra high pressure mains for single phase supply and all cables connected therewith shall consist either of two concentric conductors or of separate conductors. Where concentric conductors are used the insulation shall be maintained efficiently throughout except that the other conductor shall be connected with earth at one point, and where separate conductors are used, provision shall be made as in the case of mains for three phase supply to ensure that neither the ground nor any neighbouring electric line or conductor can become charged by leakage.

Completion and Control.

17. An extra high pressure electric line shall not be brought into use for the supply of energy before it has been completely laid, properly jointed, examined and tested, or until it is in the sole charge of the Owner and every such line shall during its use be in the sole charge of the Owner.

Streets Boxes.

18. Extra high pressure mains shall not pass through the same street box with other mains, unless they are enclosed in strong metal casing; and street boxes containing extra high pressure mains shall not contain pipes for water, gas or other service, or electric mains belonging to any other body or person, provided that any such street box may contain telephone wires belonging to the owner.

Sub-stations.

19. Sub-stations supplied at extra high pressure shall be established in suitable places and shall be in the sole occupation of the Owner.

Sub-stations below Streets.

20. Sub-stations constructed below the surface of any street to which an extra high pressure supply is to be given shall not contain switches or other apparatus than transformers.

Transforming Apparatus in Sub-stations.

21. The transforming apparatus at any sub-station supplied at extra high pressure shall be so arranged that there shall be no danger of any mains connected therewith being charged to any pressure beyond the limits of pressure for which these mains are intended.

Fire Risks.

22. In delivering the energy to a sub-station at extra high pressure the Owner shall exercise all due precautions so as to avoid risk of causing fire on the premises.

Insulation, &c., of Electric Lines and Apparatus in Sub-stations.

23. All extra high pressure electric lines and apparatus placed in a sub-station shall be highly insulated and thoroughly protected against injury to the insulation or access of moisture, and any metal forming part of the electric circuit shall not unless efficiently connected with earth be exposed so that it can be inadvertently touched. All such lines shall be so fixed and protected as to prevent the possibility of electrical discharge to any adjacent metallic substance.

III.—OVERHEAD LINES.

DEFINITION.

In the following Regulations the expression "line conductors" means conductors used for transmitting a supply of electrical energy, including so much of any service line as may be under the control of the undertakers.

I.—GENERAL.

Material of Line Conductors.

24. Line conductors shall be of copper, aluminium, or such other materials as may be approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

Strength of Line Conductors.

25. All line conductors at the time of erection shall comply, as regards elongation, breaking load and elasticity, with the specification of the British Engineering Standards Association then in force.

Conductor.	Cross-sectional area. sq. ins.	Weight per Mile. Lbs.
No. 10 S.W.G.	0·0129	262

Line Conductors to be inaccessible.

27. Line conductors shall be rendered inaccessible to any person from any building or other place without the use of a ladder or other special appliance.

Regard shall be had to the normal use by the occupier of any premises or land and where necessary (a) the height of the line conductors shall be increased to provide sufficient clearance or safety in accordance with such use, and (b) provision as hereinafter prescribed in Regulations 37 or 40 shall be made to prevent danger.

Line Conductors Crossing other Lines.

28. Where a line conductor crosses over or under, or is in proximity to any other overhead wire, precautions shall be taken by the Owner to prevent contact, due to breakage or otherwise, between the line conductor and the other overhead wire, or between the other wire and the line conductor.

Provided that where a line conductor crosses over any overhead wire other than a telegraph or telephone line of the Postmaster-General, the precautionary means to be adopted shall be as hereinafter prescribed in paragraph (3) of Regulation 41.

Provided further that this Regulation shall not be deemed to require the Owner to take precautions against contact between a broken line conductor and other auxiliary conductors and earth wires carried on the same support and forming part of the same overhead line.

Supports.

29. Line conductors shall be attached to suitable insulators carried on supports of wood, iron, steel or reinforced concrete. All wooden supports other than oak or hard wood cross-arms shall unless otherwise approved by the Electricity Commissioners be of red fir impregnated with creosote. Special precautions shall be taken to prevent the corrosion of all metal work at or below the surface of the ground.

Factor of Safety of Supports.

30. The supports, in conjunction with stays or struts if provided, shall withstand the longitudinal, transverse and vertical loads due to the ice loadings and wind pressure hereinafter specified without damage and without movement in the ground. In no case shall the strength of a support in the direction of the overhead line be less than one quarter the required strength in a direction transverse to the line.

The following factors of safety shall apply to each support.

Material.	Factor of Safety.
Iron or Steel	2·5
Wood	3·5
Reinforced Concrete	3·5

These factors of safety shall be calculated on the assumption that all line conductors cables and wires carried by the supports are at a temperature of 22° F., and have a covering of ice to the radial thickness specified in Regulation 35 (or Regulation 38 according to the voltage) and that together with the supports they are subjected to a wind of 50 miles per hour at right angles to the line, this wind to be taken as exerting a pressure equivalent to 8 pounds per square foot calculated on the whole of the projected area.

The wind pressure on the lee side members of lattice steel or other compound structures, including A and H Poles, shall be taken as one-half of the wind pressure on the windward side members. The factor of safety shall be calculated on the crippling loads of struts and upon the elastic limit of tension members.

Service Lines.

31. Service lines shall be connected to line conductors at a point of support only and shall be fixed to insulators on consumer's premises. Every part of a service line (other than a neutral conductor connected with earth) which is accessible from a building with the use of a ladder or other special appliance shall be efficiently protected either by insulating material or by other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

Erection of line conductors at different voltages on same supports.

32. Where line conductors forming part of systems at different voltages are erected on the same poles or supports adequate provision shall be made to guard against danger to linesmen and from the lower voltage system being charged above its normal voltage by leakage from or contact with the higher voltage system; and the type of construction shall be subject to the prior approval of the Electricity Commissioners.

Inspection and Maintenance of Lines.

33. Every overhead line, including its supports and structural parts, and electrical appliances and devices belonging to or connected therewith, shall be regularly inspected and efficiently maintained.

Materials used.

34. All materials used shall at the time of erection conform to the specifications of the British Engineering Standards Association and to the Post Office Technical Instructions for the Construction of Aerial Lines for the time being in force, so far as the same are applicable and are not inconsistent with these Regulations.

II.—SPECIFIC REGULATIONS.

[Applicable according to the voltage between line conductors where no part of the system is connected with earth, or according to the voltage to earth where part of the system is connected with earth.]

A. For voltages not exceeding 650 volts direct current and 325 volts alternating current.

Factor of Safety of Line Conductors.

35. The factor of safety of line conductors shall be 2. The factor of safety shall be based on the breaking load and shall be calculated on the assumption that the line conductors are at a temperature of 22° F. and have a covering of ice to a radial thickness of three-sixteenths of an inch, and that they are simultaneously subjected to a wind of 50 miles per hour at right angles to the line, this wind to be taken as exerting a pressure equivalent to 8 pounds per square foot calculated on the whole of the projected area of the ice-covered lines.

The weight of ice is to be taken as 57 pounds per cubic foot.

The elasticity of the metal may be allowed for in calculating the sag for line conductors.

Minimum Height of Conductors.

36. The height from the ground of any line conductor (other than a service line), earth wire, or auxiliary conductor at any point of the span at a temperature of 122° F. shall not, except with the consent of the Electricity Commissioners, be less than 19 feet across a public road or 17 feet in other positions. A height of 15 feet may be adopted in situations inaccessible to vehicular traffic.

Where a service line is carried across or along a carriage-way, the height of the line from the ground at any part of the carriage-way shall not, except with the consent of the Electricity Commissioners, be less than 19 feet and 17 feet respectively.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Provision to Prevent Danger.

37. Where the voltage to each exceeds 250 volts direct current or 125 volts alternating current, precautions should be taken to prevent danger—

(1) from a broken line conductor by the provision of—

(a) a neutral or earthed conductor carried continuously from pole to pole, and so arranged in relation to the other conductors that in the event of breakage of any one of them the line conductor shall make contact with the earthed wire; or

(b) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

(2) from leakage by the provision—

(a) in cases where metal poles are used, of

(i) an earthed wire, running from pole to pole and connected to the poles; or

(ii) a suitable metal framework to support the insulators carrying the line conductors, the framework being insulated from the pole but connected to the neutral conductor; or

(iii) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

(b) in cases where wooden poles are used, of

(i) a bonding wire connected to the supporting metal-work of all insulators, the bonding wire terminating at the lowest part of the supporting metal-work; or

(ii) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

Where lightning conductors are used or other uninsulated conductors are run down wooden poles to within 10 feet from the ground, the precautions for the prevention of danger from leakage shall be as for metal poles.

All stay wires other than those which are connected with earth by means of a continuous earth wire shall be insulated to prevent danger from leakage. For this purpose an insulator shall be placed in each stay wire at a height of not less than 10 feet from the ground.

B. For voltages exceeding 650 volts direct current and 325 volts alternating current.

Factor of Safety of Line Conductors.

38. The factor of safety of line conductors shall be 2. The factor of safety shall be based on the breaking load and shall be calculated on the assumption that the line conductors are at a temperature of 22° F., and have a covering of ice to a radial thickness of three-eighths of an inch, and that they are simultaneously subjected to a wind of 50 miles per hour at right angles to the line, this wind to be taken as exerting a pressure equivalent to 8 pounds per square foot calculated on the whole of the projected area of the ice-covered lines.

The weight of ice is to be taken as 57 pounds per cubic foot.

The elasticity of the metal may be allowed for in calculating the sag for line conductors.

Minimum Height of Conductors.

39. The height from the ground of any line conductor at any point on the span at a temperature of 122° F. shall not, except with the consent of the Electricity Commissioners, be less than the height hereunder stated:—

Voltages not exceeding 66,000 volts.	20 feet.	Voltages exceeding 110,000 volts and not exceeding 165,000 volts.	22 feet.
Voltages exceeding 66,000 volts and not exceeding 110,000 volts.	21 feet.	Voltages exceeding 165,000 volts.	23 feet.

The height from the ground of an earth wire or auxiliary conductor shall not be less than the minimum heights prescribed in Regulation 36.

Provision to Prevent Danger.

40. Adequate means shall be provided to render any line conductor dead in the event of it falling due to breakage or otherwise.

All metal work other than conductors shall be permanently and efficiently connected with earth. For this purpose a continuous earth wire shall be provided and connected with earth at four points in every mile, the spacing between the points being as nearly equidistant as possible, or, alternatively, the metal work shall be connected to an effective earthing device at each individual support. The design and construction of the system of earth connections shall be such that when contact is made between a line conductor and metal connected with earth the resulting leakage current shall not be less than twice the leakage current required to operate the devices which make the line dead.

Road Crossings, &c.

41. Where an overhead line is erected along or across a public road or canal or across a railway all wires including earth wires and auxiliary conductors shall be placed at the appropriate height from the ground specified in Regulation 39 for line conductors, and the following additional precautions shall be taken to prevent danger :—

(1) In the case of a line erected along a public road or canal (or within 50 feet thereof) there shall be provided—

(a) duplicate insulators supporting the conductors ; or

(b) a device to ensure that in the event of a line conductor falling it shall be put to earth ; or

(c) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

(2) In the case of a line erected across a public road, canal or railway there shall be provided—

(a) duplicate insulators for supporting the line conductor and a device to ensure that in the event of a line conductor falling it shall be put to earth ; or

(b) duplicate insulators supporting duplicate conductors tied at intervals not exceeding five feet ; or

(c) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

(3) In the case of a line crossing over any other overhead wire there shall be provided—

(a) duplicate insulators for supporting the line conductor and a device to ensure that in the event of a line conductor falling it shall be put to earth ; or

(b) duplicate insulators supporting duplicate conductors tied at intervals not exceeding five feet ;

the provision prescribed in (a) or (b) hereof being supplemented in the case of line conductors at voltages exceeding 650 volts by the provision of arcing horns or rings ; or (e) other means approved by the Electricity Commissioners.

Danger Notices.

42. Supports shall be numbered consecutively and each support shall have a danger notice of a permanent character securely fixed to it. Adequate provisions shall also be made to prevent unauthorised climbing.

IV.—CONNECTION OF CIRCUITS WITH EARTH.

(a) The connection with earth of the intermediate conductor shall be made at one point only on each distinct circuit, namely, at the generating station or sub-station, and the insulation of the circuit shall be efficiently maintained at all other parts.

(b) The current from the intermediate conductor to earth shall be continuously recorded, and if it at any time exceeds one-thousandth part of the maximum supply current, steps shall be immediately taken to improve the insulation of the system.

Alternating Current Circuits.

44. Alternating current circuits may, with the approval of the Electricity Commissioners and with the concurrence of the Postmaster-General, be connected with earth in accordance with the following conditions, etc. :—

I.—GENERAL.

(a) The connection with earth shall be made only where energy is delivered to each circuit, that is to say, at a generating station, a sub-station or transformer, and shall, wherever practicable, be made at a neutral point in the circuit and in such a manner as will ensure at all times an immediate and safe discharge of energy.

(b) The connection with earth shall be efficiently maintained, except when it is interrupted by means of a switch or link for the purpose of periodical tests for ascertaining whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth.

(c) The insulation of the mains shall be sufficiently maintained at all other parts.

(d) Tests shall be periodically made to ascertain whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth, and if at any time the current so passing exceeds one-thousandth part of the maximum supply current of the circuit, steps shall be immediately taken to improve the insulation.

II.—SPECIAL.

Where separate or three or four-core mains are used for alternating current and the pressure between any two conductors exceeds 125 volts, the connection with earth shall be made in the case of—

(a) A single phase supply, at the neutral point on the winding of the transformer ;

(b) A two-phase three-wire supply, by means of the third wire ;

(c) A two-phase four-wire supply, at the neutral point on the winding ;

(d) A three-phase three-wire or four-wire supply, at the neutral point on the star winding.

Concentric Mains.

45. Concentric mains used either for continuous or for alternating current shall be connected with earth by means of the external conductor in accordance with the following conditions :—

(a) The connection with earth shall be made by means of the external conductor.

(b) The connection with earth shall be made only at the point or points where energy is given to each distinct circuit, namely, at a generating station, sub-station, or transformer.

(c) The insulation of the external conductor shall be efficiently maintained at all other parts.

(d) The external conductor shall form a complete metal sheathing round the inner conductor.

(e) The connection with earth shall be efficiently maintained except when it is interrupted by means of a switch or link for the purpose of periodical tests for ascertaining whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth.

(f) Tests shall be periodically made to ascertain whether any current is passing by means of the connection with earth, and if at any time the current passing by means of the connection with earth exceeds one-thousandth part of the maximum supply current of the circuit, steps shall be immediately taken to improve the insulation.

Nothing in these Regulations shall be deemed to be in substitution for Regulations made under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901; the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887; and the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872.

N.B.—These Regulations are prescribed subject to the power of the Electricity Commissioners to prescribe such further or other Regulations as they may think expedient.

ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACTS, 1882 TO 1928.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE GUIDANCE OF AUTHORITIES MAKING APPLICATION FOR SANCTION TO THE BORROWING OF MONEY FOR ELECTRICITY PURPOSES.

1. Application for sanction to borrow should in all cases be made on Form El. C. 48A for Specified Works and on Form El. C. 48B for Unspecified Works. Forms are obtainable on application to the Electricity Commission.

2. Application should be made before any liability is incurred in respect of expenditure proposed to be met out of the loan.

3. Sanction to borrow is not usually granted until all other consents or approvals which may be necessary in respect of the works forming the subject of a loan application have been obtained; for example, in respect of the establishment or extension of generating stations and/or main transmission lines; the erection of overhead lines; arrangements for mutual assistance or bulk supplies; supplies to specific premises outside the authorised area of the applicants; alterations of existing frequency, systems and/or pressures of supply. An application for loan sanction should make reference to any such consents already obtained or applied for. Particulars as to the procedure for obtaining any necessary consents or approvals will be furnished on application to the Electricity Commission.

4. Where the undertaking of the applicants is situated in an Electricity District and the Electricity District Order makes provision for notification to or consultation with the Joint Electricity Authority or Electricity Advisory Board, as the case may be, as regards any works forming the subject of the loan application, evidence should be furnished showing that the Joint Authority or the Board has been so notified or consulted.

5. So far as is practicable, applications should be in respect of specified works (see para. 7). The Electricity Commissioners are prepared, however, to entertain applications for loan saction in respect of unspecified distribution works not relating to definite schemes (see para. 8). Separate applications should be made for specified and unspecified works respectively on the appropriate application forms.

6. The application for loan sanction should specify any local Act authorising the proposed expenditure or modifying the borrowing power provisions of the General Acts, and should be accompanied by a certified copy of the Resolution of the Authority authorising application for sanction to borrow to be made, together with other particulars as indicated below.

SPECIFIED WORKS.

7. An application for loan sanction for specified works should be made on Form El. C. 48A and should cover the complete cost of the works so far as such cost is proposed to be met out of borrowed moneys; it should be divided under the main heads set out below, and should be accompanied by—

(3) a detailed estimate of the expenditure involved on the various items included under the following headings so far as applicable, together with the additional information indicated in each case. (In any case where tenders have been provisionally accepted, the amount of such tenders should be specially shown. In any case where the Commissioners are satisfied generally in regard to the works proposed, but consider it desirable to defer the issue of loan sanction pending the receipt of details of tenders obtained and proposed to be accepted, an intimation to that effect will be given to the applicants):

The estimate should not only show the unit cost of each item but should indicate alongside the corresponding total. Where sanction to borrowing is being applied for in respect of the full amount of the estimated cost, the total of each head of the estimate should correspond with the amounts entered on Form El. ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

S. R. & O., 1937, No. 1075.

THE SCALE OF DEPRECIATION (PURCHASE OF ELECTRICITY UNDERTAKINGS) SPECIAL ORDER, 1937, MADE BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS AND CONFIRMED BY THE MINISTER OF TRANSPORT, JULY 21ST, 1937, UNDER THE ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACTS, 1882 TO 1936, FIXING A SCALE OF DEPRECIATION IN RELATION TO THE PURCHASE OF ELECTRICITY UNDERTAKINGS UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 39 (1) OF THE ELECTRICITY (SUPPLY) ACT, 1926.

Whereas by Section 39 (1) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1926, (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1926") it is provided that where after the commencement of the Act a special order is made authorising a company to supply electricity, and the area of supply consists of or includes the whole of the districts of two or more local authorities and is, in the opinion of the Electricity Commissioners, adequate in extent, the following provisions shall have effect with respect to the right of purchasing the undertaking:—

(a) The purchasing authority may within six months after the expiration of a period of fifty years from the date of the confirmation of the special order, or such shorter period as may be specified in that behalf in the special order, and within six months after the expiration of every subsequent period of ten years, or such shorter period as may be specified in that behalf in the special order, by notice in writing, require the company to sell, and thereupon the company shall sell to them their undertaking upon the terms of the payment to those undertakers of a sum equal to the capital properly expended for the provision of the land, buildings, works, material and plant of the undertakers in use or available and suitable for use at the time of the purchase for the purposes of their undertaking, less depreciation according to such scale as may be determined by special order:

Now, therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1936 (a), and of any and every other power thereunto them enabling, the Electricity Commissioners hereby make this Special Order as follows, that is to say:—

1. This Order may be cited as the Scale of Depreciation (Purchase of Electricity Undertakings) Special Order, 1937.

2. For the purposes of this Order—

The expression "date of purchase" means the date on which notice to purchase the undertaking is served on the undertakers by the purchasing authority.

The expression "year" means the calendar year ending the thirty-first day of December.

The expression "Schedule" means the Schedule to this Order.

The expression "expired period" means in respect of each of the assets mentioned in the Schedule the period expressed in years and/or fraction of a year beginning at the commencement of the year next following that in which the particular asset first became available for use for the purposes of the undertaking and ending at the expiration of the day immediately preceding the date of purchase.

The expression "original cost" means in respect of each of the assets mentioned in the Schedule the amount of capital properly expended on the provision of the particular asset for the purposes of the undertaking.

The expression "written down capital expenditure" means in respect of each of the assets mentioned in the Schedule at the commencement of any year of the expired period, the original cost of the asset less the total amount of the depreciation up to the end of the preceding year calculated in accordance with the scale determined by this Order.

Other expressions have the same meaning as in the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1936.

Electric Lines and Systems for Low and Medium Voltages.

1.—(a) Electric lines of the Undertakers for use at low voltage or medium voltage shall not be connected to a system for the purposes of the supply of energy unless the insulation of the said electric lines has withstood either (i) the tests prescribed in that behalf in the appropriate specification of the British Standards Institution then current, or (ii) in cases where no such tests have been prescribed, the continuous application of a testing voltage of not less than 500 volts between conductors and also between conductors and earth during a period of not less than 15 minutes.

(b) If the tests prescribed in paragraph (a) hereof are made prior to the said electric lines being placed in position for the purposes of the supply of energy, the said electric lines after having been placed in position and before being connected to the system shall have withstood a further test for resistance of insulation by the application of a testing voltage of not less than 500 volts between conductors and also between conductors and earth during a period of not less than one minute.

(c) Where any electric line for use at low voltage or medium voltage has been disconnected from a system for alteration or repair, such electric line shall not be reconnected to the system until the Undertakers have applied the test prescribed in paragraph (b) hereof and have satisfied themselves that the insulation of the electric line is in sound condition.

(d) The foregoing provisions of this Regulation shall not apply to overhead lines unless the Electricity Commissioners otherwise prescribe in any particular case.

2. The Undertakers shall maintain in sound condition the insulation of all electric lines and apparatus (including service lines up to the supply terminals) forming a system for use at low voltage or medium voltage, and so that the leakage current in the case of a direct current system shall not under normal conditions exceed one-thousandth part of the maximum supply current.

3. Where a system at medium voltage is employed for giving a general supply, the voltage between earth and any conductor forming part of the said system shall not under normal conditions exceed low voltage.

4. The following provisions shall apply to the connection with earth of alternating current systems at low voltage in cases where the voltage normally exceeds 125 volts, and of systems at medium voltage employed for giving a general supply:—

(i) Unless otherwise allowed by the Electricity Commissioners, a point of every such system shall be connected with earth.

(ii) The connection with earth shall, subject as hereinafter provided, be made at one point only in each system and the insulation of the system shall be efficiently maintained at all other parts.

(iii) In the case of a system comprising electric lines having concentric conductors, the external conductor shall be the one to be connected with earth.

(iv) The connection with earth may include a switch or link by means of which the connection may be temporarily interrupted for the purpose of testing or for locating a fault.

(v) In the case of a direct current system, an ammeter shall be permanently inserted in the connection with earth and a continuous record of the amount of the leakage current (if any) passing through the ammeter shall be taken and kept by the Undertakers. Where three-wire direct current systems are used, a fusible cut-out or automatic circuit breaker may be inserted in the connection with earth in parallel with a resistance of not more than five ohms.

(vi) In the case of an alternating current system, there shall not be inserted in the connection with earth any impedance (other than that required solely for the operation of switchgear or instruments), fusible cut-out or automatic circuit-breaker, and the result of any test made to ascertain whether the current (if any) passing through the connection with earth is normal shall be duly recorded by the Undertakers:

Provided that for the purpose of operating relays for the remote control of switches, the Undertakers may insert in the connection with earth the secondary winding of a high frequency transformer, the ohmic resistance of the said secondary winding not to exceed 2,000 microhms at a temperature of 60° F. and its inductance not to exceed 10 microhenries.

(vii) Alternating current systems which are connected with earth at one point as aforesaid may be electrically interconnected subject to the following conditions and qualifications:—

(a) Each connection with earth shall be bonded to the metal sheathing and metallic armouring (if any) of the electric lines concerned; and the Undertakers shall serve a notice on the Postmaster-General at least seven days prior to the making of any such interconnection, specifying the location of the point or points at which such interconnection is to be made and at which the interconnected systems are connected with earth, and the date on which such interconnection is to be made.

(b) Overhead lines forming a system or part of a system shall not be electrically interconnected with other electric lines (including other overhead lines) unless the neutral conductor or conductors of the overhead lines is or are of the same material and cross-sectional area as the corresponding phase conductors of the overhead lines.

(c) Where a system includes a generator or a transformer not having a mesh winding of low impedance, it shall not be electrically interconnected with another system if the neutral point of such generator or transformer is connected with earth.

(viii) Where an alternating current system having a point connected with earth (whether electrically interconnected as aforesaid with another system or not) is used for affording a supply of energy at low or medium voltage to an electrode boiler which is also connected with earth, the following conditions shall have effect:—

(a) The metal work of the electrode boiler shall be efficiently connected to the metal sheathing and metalic armouring (if any) of the electric line whereby energy is supplied to the electrode boiler.

(b) The Undertakers shall serve a notice on the Postmaster-General at least seven days prior to the date on which such supply of energy is to be afforded, specifying the location of every point (including the earth connection of the electrode boiler) at which the system (including any interconnected systems) is connected with earth.

(ix) Except as hereinbefore provided, it shall not be permissible for the Undertakers to connect any system or interconnected systems with earth at any further point unless such additional connection with earth is for the time being approved by the Electricity Commissioners with the concurrence of the Postmaster-General and is made in accordance with the conditions, if any, of that approval.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Nothing in this Regulation, or in any approval given by the Electricity Commissioners thereunder shall—

(a) relieve the Undertakers from the obligation to comply with the requirements of Regulation 21 (a); or (b) affect any rights or remedies of the Postmaster-General in relation to injury to or injurious affection of his telegraphic lines, or confer any exemption from any liability or penalty in respect of any such injurious affection.

Electric Lines, Systems and Apparatus for High Voltages.

5.—(a) Electric lines of the Undertakers for use at high voltage shall be placed in position, properly jointed and duly completed and examined before they are brought into use for the purposes of the supply of energy.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in these Regulations, every electric line as aforesaid during its use be in the sole charge of the Undertakers:

Provided that for any purpose connected with the efficiency and safety of the supply of energy to a particular consumer, the Undertakers may make arrangements with the consumer for control by an authorised person of the electric lines on the premises of the consumer through which energy is supplied to the premises.

6.—(a) Electric lines and apparatus of the Undertakers for use at high voltage shall not be connected to a system for the purposes of the supply of energy unless the insulation of the said electric lines and apparatus has withstood either (i) the tests prescribed in that behalf in the appropriate specification of the British Standards Institution then current; or (ii) in cases where no such tests have been prescribed, the continuous application between conductors and also between conductors and earth during a period of not less than 15 minutes of alternating current either at a testing voltage equal to at least one and one-quarter times the normal working voltage to which the electric lines or apparatus will be subject under conditions of supply, or at a testing voltage equal to the aforesaid working voltage with the addition of 10,000 volts, whichever be the less:

Provided that for the purposes of such alternative tests—

(i) the testing voltage between the outer conductor and earth in cases where the outer conductor of an electric line having concentric conductors is to be connected with earth shall be 1,000 volts;

(ii) the aforesaid working voltage between any phase of an alternating current system and earth in cases where the neutral conductor of the said system is not to be connected with earth shall be deemed to be the voltage between phases;

(iii) the duration of the test may be reduced to one minute in the case of apparatus for use at high voltage subject to the testing voltage being increased so as to equal not less than one and one-half times the aforesaid working voltage, or the aforesaid working voltage with the addition of 20,000 volts, whichever be the less;

(iv) direct current may be used instead of alternating current subject to the testing voltage being increased so as to exceed by at least 50 per cent. the corresponding testing voltage prescribed for alternating current.

(b) If the tests prescribed in paragraph (a) hereof are made prior to the said electric lines and apparatus being placed in position for the purposes of the supply of energy, the said electric lines and apparatus after having been placed in position and before being connected to the system shall have withstood a further test for resistance of insulation either by the application of the tests prescribed in paragraph (a) hereof whenever reasonably practicable, or by the application of a testing voltage of not less than 1,000 volts between conductors and also between conductors and earth during a period of not less than one minute.

(c) Where any electric line or apparatus for use at high voltage has been disconnected from a system for alteration or repair, such electric line or apparatus shall not be reconnected to the system until the Undertakers have applied the test prescribed in paragraph (b) hereof and have satisfied themselves that the insulation of the electric line or apparatus is in sound condition.

(d) The Undertakers shall duly record the result of every test made under this Regulation.

7.—(a) The following provisions shall apply to electric lines of the Undertakers for use at high voltage :—

(i) The conductors shall be enclosed in metal sheathing which shall be electrically continuous and connected with earth ; and the conductivity of the metal sheathing shall be maintained and reasonable precautions taken where necessary to avoid corrosion of the sheathing.

(ii) In the event of a failure of insulation occurring between one conductor and the metal sheathing at any point along an electric line as aforesaid, the impedance of the relevant circuit shall be such that with the full voltage maintained at the source of supply the current resulting from such failure shall be not less than twice the value of the current for which a suitable fusible cut-out of adequate rupturing capacity or other suitable overload preventive device has been set to operate or of the current required to operate a suitable discriminative fault current relay :

Provided that the operation of the aforesaid overload preventive device or of the discriminative fault current relay shall cause the automatic operation of a circuit breaker of adequate rupturing capacity.

(iii) The relevant circuit hereinbefore referred to means the complete circuit from the source of supply to the point of failure of the insulation, including any connection with earth of the system of which the electric line as aforesaid forms part and any current limiting device inserted in such connection with earth ; and the source of supply means the point at which energy is given to the system or circuit of which the electric line as aforesaid forms part.

(iv) Where an electric line as aforesaid has concentric conductors and the external conductor is insulated from an outer metal sheathing and connected with earth, the external conductor may be regarded as the metal sheathing for the purposes of this Regulation provided that the foregoing provisions as to conductivity are complied with.

(b) Nothing in the provisions of paragraph (a) hereof shall preclude the employment in generating stations, substations and switch stations (including outdoor substations and outdoor switch stations) of conductors for use at high voltage which are not enclosed in metal sheathing, or preclude the use of electric lines laid before the prescribed date to which the provisions of paragraph (a) of Regulation 17 apply.

(c) This Regulation shall not apply to overhead lines unless the Electricity Commissioners otherwise prescribe in any particular case.

8. The following provisions shall apply to the connection with earth of systems for use at high voltage :—

(i) Unless otherwise allowed by the Electricity Commissioners and subject as hereinafter provided, a point of every such system shall be connected with earth.

(ii) The connection with earth shall, subject as hereinafter provided, be made at one point only in each system and the insulation of the system shall be efficiently maintained at all other parts.

(iii) In the case of a system as aforesaid comprising electric lines having concentric conductors, the external conductor shall be the one to be connected with earth.

(iv) Where the Undertakers propose to connect with earth at one point only an existing system for use at high voltage which has not hitherto been so connected with earth, the Undertakers shall give notice and particulars to the Postmaster-General of the proposed connection with earth and such notice shall be deemed to be a notice of works served upon the Postmaster-General within the meaning and for the purposes of Section 14 of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899, or corresponding provision in any Act or Order relating to the undertaking of the Undertakers.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

(v) Where a system having a point connected with earth is used for affording a supply of energy at high voltage to an electrode boiler which is also connected with earth, the following conditions shall have effect:—

(a) The metal work of the electrode boiler shall be efficiently connected to the metal sheathing and metallic armouring (if any) of the high voltage electric line whereby energy is supplied to the electrode boiler.

(b) The supply of energy at high voltage to the electrode boiler shall be controlled by a suitable automatic circuit-breaker so set as to operate in the event of the phase currents becoming unbalanced to the extent of 10 per cent. of the rated current consumption of the electrode boiler under normal conditions of operation:

Provided that if in any case a higher setting is essential to ensure stability of operation of the electrode boiler, the setting may be increased to but shall in no circumstances exceed 15 per cent. of the rated current consumption of the electrode boiler under normal conditions of operation.

(c) An inverse time element device may be used in conjunction with the aforesaid automatic circuit-breaker to prevent the operation thereof unnecessarily on the occurrence of unbalanced phase currents of momentary or short duration.

(d) The Undertakers shall serve a notice on the Postmaster-General at lease seven days prior to the date on which such supply of energy is to be afforded specifying the location of every point (including the earth connection of the electrode boiler) at which the system is connected with earth.

(vi) It shall not be permissible for the Undertakers to interconnect electrically systems for use at high voltage which are each connected with earth at one point, or, except as hereinbefore provided, to connect any such system with earth at more than one point, unless electrical interconnection as aforesaid or connection with earth at more than one point is for the time being approved by the Electricity Commissioners with the concurrence of the Postmaster-General and is made in accordance with the conditions, if any, of that approval.

Nothing in this Regulation or in any approval given by the Electricity Commissioners thereunder shall affect any rights or remedies of the Postmaster-General in relation to injury to or injurious affection of his telegraphic lines, or confer any exemption from any liability or penalty in respect of any such injurious affection.

Transformation and Control of Energy at High Voltage.

9.—(a) Where energy at high voltage is transformed, converted, regulated or otherwise controlled in substations or switch stations (including outdoor substations and outdoor switch stations), in street boxes constructed under ground, or in fire-resisting casings on the premises of a consumer, the following provisions shall have effect:—

(i) Substations and switch stations shall preferably be erected above ground, but where necessarily constructed under ground there shall be due provision for ventilation and drainage.

(ii) Outdoor substations and outdoor switch stations shall (unless the apparatus is completely enclosed in a metal casing connected with earth, the said apparatus also being connected with the system by armoured electric lines) be efficiently protected by fencing not less than eight feet in height or other means so as to prevent access to the electric lines and apparatus therein by any unauthorised person.

(iii) Underground street boxes (other than substations) which contain transformers shall not also contain switches or other apparatus, and any switches, fusible cut-outs or other apparatus required for controlling or other purposes shall be fixed in separate receptacles preferably above ground.

(iv) Fire-resisting casings on the premises of a consumer, preferably of metal connected with earth, shall completely enclose all electric lines (other than overhead lines) and apparatus on the premises designed to be electrically charged at high voltage and shall be secured so as to prevent access by any unauthorised person.

(b) Wherever energy at high voltage is transformed, converted, regulated or otherwise controlled, the works of the Undertakers shall be labelled with an appropriate danger notice, with the name of the Undertakers and with the address of their local office at which an officer or servant of the Undertakers will be in attendance.

10. The following provisions as to constructional details shall have effect where energy at high voltage is transformed, converted, regulated or otherwise controlled—

(a) In street boxes or similar structures or in fire-resisting casings on the premises of a consumer.

All doors or covers shall be so secured that they cannot be opened except by means of a key or special appliance. The enclosed conductors and apparatus shall be so constructed, protected and arranged that when the door or cover giving access to an operating or switch panel is opened, it shall not be possible for the person opening the door or cover to come into accidental contact with metal electrically charged at high voltage. Unless the conditions of supply are such that the whole of the enclosed conductors and apparatus may be made dead at the same time for the purpose of cleaning or for other work thereon, the conductors and apparatus shall be so arranged that they may be made dead in sections, and the sections shall be so separated by divisions or screens from all adjacent live metal that work on any section made dead may be carried on by an authorised person without danger. Every fusible cut-out shall either be capable of being made dead by a switch or shall be so constructed and placed that it can be handled without danger by an authorised person for the purpose of renewal.

(b) On the supports of overhead lines or in other suitable positions (other than outdoor substations or outdoor switch stations) adjacent to the electric lines of the system concerned.

Conductors and transforming or switching apparatus, unless completely enclosed and connected with the system by armoured electric lines or effectively screened, shall be so arranged that no live metal with which contact can be made shall be at a less distance than 15 feet from the ground or less than 15 feet from any place accessible to an unauthorised person or less than the appropriate distance specified in Table IV of British Standard Specification No. 162, 1934, from any operating or inspecting platform upon which it is intended that any authorised person may stand while live metal is exposed. Provision shall be made to prevent so far as reasonably possible unauthorised climbing; and where a portable ladder is used for the purpose of operating, special means shall be provided to secure the ladder in position and the arrangements shall be such that there is no danger to an authorised person when operating. The means provided for disconnecting a transformer, circuit-breaker or fusible cut-out from electric lines which are live at high voltage, and also the said fusible cut-out itself if intended to be renewed while the electric lines are live at high voltage, shall be so constructed and placed that they can be operated or renewed as the case may be by an authorised person without danger.

11. Where energy is transformed, suitable provision shall be made, either by connecting with earth a point of the system at the lower voltage or otherwise, to guard against danger by reason of the said system becoming accidentally charged above its normal voltage by leakage from or contact with the system at the higher voltage.

Electric Lines and Apparatus (General) other than Consumers' Installations.

12. The standard of construction of electric lines of the Undertakers (including service lines up to the supply terminals) shall unless otherwise allowed by the Electricity Commissioners be not lower than that prescribed in the appropriate specification (if any) of the British Standards Institution current at the time of their manufacture.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

13. Every circuit of the Undertakers (other than service lines from distributing mains) shall be protected against excess energy by a suitable fusible cut-out or automatic circuit breaker of adequate rupturing capacity which shall not be inserted in any conductor permanently connected with earth.

14.—(a) Where any electric line of the Undertakers (including a service line up to the supply terminals) at the time it is placed in position crosses or is in proximity to any pipe, line or other metal, precautions shall be taken by the Undertakers to prevent such pipe, line or other metal from becoming electrically charged.

(b) Any metal work enclosing, supporting or otherwise associated with electric lines and apparatus unless designed to serve as a conductor shall where necessary to prevent danger be connected with earth.

(c) The foregoing provisions of this Regulation shall not apply to overhead lines.

15. Overhead lines of the Undertakers (including overhead service lines up to the supply terminals) shall be erected and maintained in accordance with the provisions of any Regulations in that behalf made under the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1936, and in force and applicable at the date of the erection of the overhead lines, and also of these Regulations save in so far as the same are expressly excluded from application thereto.

Nothing in this Regulation shall relieve the Undertakers from the obligation of obtaining any necessary consent under the aforesaid Acts to the placing of an electric line above ground.

16.—(a) In delivering energy to a substation or switch station (including an outdoor substation or outdoor switch station) or to the premises of a consumer the Undertakers shall exercise all due precautions so as to avoid risk of causing fire therein.

(b) Where a substation or switch station is situated in any building so that a fire in the substation or switch station might involve risk to the said building and the said substation or switch station contains oil-immersed transformers or switches involving the use of more than 2,000 gallons of oil in any one oil tank, receptacle or chamber, provision shall be made for the draining away or removal of any oil which may leak or escape from the tanks, receptacles or chambers containing the same; special precautions shall be taken to prevent the spread of any fire resulting from the ignition of the oil from any cause; and adequate provision shall be made for the extinguishing of any fire which may occur. Spare oil shall not be stored in any such substation or switch station.

17.—(a) Where the Undertakers have prior to the prescribed date brought into use an electric line (other than an overhead line) which is not completely enclosed in a continuous metallic sheathing connected with earth and is insulated or protected in situ by composition or material of a bituminous character—

(i) any pipe, conduit or the like into which such electric line may have been drawn or placed shall, unless other arrangements are approved by the Electricity Commissioners in any particular case, be effectively sealed at its point of entry into any street box so as to prevent any flow of gas from or into the said pipe, conduit or the like into or from the said street box; and

(ii) such electric line shall be periodically inspected where accessible, and the result of each such inspection shall be duly recorded by the Undertakers.

(b) It shall not be permissible for the Undertakers after the prescribed date to bring into use any further electric line as aforesaid which is insulated or protected in situ by any composition or material known to be liable to produce noxious or explosive gases on excessive heating.

18. All conduits, pipes, casings, street boxes and similar structures used by the Undertakers as receptacles for electric lines or apparatus shall be constructed of durable material, and where placed under carriageways shall be of ample strength to withstand heavy traffic.

19.—(a) Street boxes shall not contain gas pipes, and means shall be taken to prevent as far as reasonably possible any influx of water or gas.

(b) Where electric lines forming part of different systems pass through the same street box they shall be readily distinguishable from one another, and all electric lines at high voltage in street boxes shall be adequately supported and protected so as to minimise risk of damage to or from adjacent electric lines.

(c) All street boxes shall be regularly inspected for the presence of gas and if any influx or accumulation is discovered the Undertakers shall give immediate notice to any authority or company who have gas mains in the neighbourhood of the street box; and in cases where a street box is large enough to admit of the entrance of a person after the electric lines or apparatus therein have been placed in position, ample provision shall be made (i) to ensure that any gas which may by accident have obtained access to the box shall escape before a person is allowed to enter and (ii) for the prevention of danger from sparking.

(d) The expression "street box" where used in this Regulation shall include an underground substation and an underground switch station.

(e) Nothing in this Regulation shall relieve the Undertakers from the obligation to comply with the requirements of Regulations 9 and 10 in relation to the use of street boxes for the transformation, conversion, regulation, or control of energy at high voltage.

20. Where access to any electric line is obtained through underground shafts, passages or the like not subject to regular inspection, no person shall enter any such shafts, passages or the like until the same shall have been tested by the Undertakers for the presence of noxious or explosive gases, and until any such gases discovered as the result of such test shall have been dispelled.

21.—(a) The lay-out of the electric lines of the Undertakers for the supply of energy throughout their area of supply shall under normal working conditions be sectionalised and so arranged, and provided where necessary with fusible cut-outs or automatic circuit-breakers so located, as to restrict within reasonable limits the extent of the portion of the undertaking affected by any failure of supply.

(b) During and in connection with the installation, extension, replacement, repair and maintenance of any of their works, the Undertakers shall take all reasonable precautions to avoid any accidental interruptions of supply, and also to avoid danger to the public or to any employee or authorised person when engaged on any operation as aforesaid not coming within the scope of the Home Office Electricity Regulations.

(c) The Undertakers shall send to the Electricity Commissioners notice of failures of supply of such kind as the Electricity Commissioners may from time to time require (a) to be notified to them, and such notice shall be sent by the earliest practicable post after the failure occurs or as the case may be after the failure becomes known to the Undertakers, and shall be in such form and contain such particulars as the Electricity Commissioners may from time to time prescribe.

Supply to premises of Consumers: Consumers installations.

22. Any service line of the Undertakers which is taken into the premises of a consumer at a point below the level of the ground shall be taken into the premises in such manner as to prevent as far as reasonably possible any influx of gas at the point of entry.

23. The separate conductors of service lines shall be permanently marked by colouration, labels or otherwise as close as practicable to the supply terminals so as to indicate in a distinctive manner the polarity of the conductors or the neutral and live phase conductors as the case may be.

24. For protection against excess energy, a suitable fusible cut-out or automatic circuit breaker of adequate rupturing capacity completely enclosed in a suitable locked or sealed receptacle of solid fire-resisting construction shall be inserted by the Undertakers in every service line as close as practicable to the supply terminals and in a position which, in the opinion of the Undertakers, is suitable for the purpose:

(a) See letters dated March 29th, 1939, and September 29th, 1939, post, pp. 2786, 2788.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Provided that no such fusible cut-out or automatic circuit breaker shall be inserted in any conductor which is permanently connected with earth:

Provided also that where a supply of energy is given at high voltage, provision shall be made whereby the fusible cut-out or automatic circuit breaker can be isolated from the service line and whereby the consumer is enabled to cut off all voltage from the supply terminals without risk of danger.

25.—(a) The Undertakers shall be responsible for all electric lines and apparatus placed by them on the premises of a consumer and either belonging to the Undertakers or under their control (whether forming the whole or part of the consumers installation or not) being installed and maintained in a safe condition and suitable for their respective purposes and being so fixed and protected as to prevent so far as is reasonably practicable leakage to any adjacent metal.

(b) The standard of construction and installation adopted by the Undertakers in complying with paragraph (a) hereof in so far as it relates to the whole or any part of a consumers installation shall not be lower than that which the Undertakers would be prepared to accept under Regulations 27 to 30 (inclusive).

(c) The obligation imposed by paragraph (a) of this Regulation in regard to the maintenance of any electric lines and apparatus as aforesaid situated on the consumers side of the supply terminals and forming the whole or part of a consumers installation shall be subject to the terms of any agreement entered into between the Undertakers and the consumer with respect to the letting on terms of hire or hire-purchase of the said whole or part of the consumers installation.

(d) Nothing in this Regulation shall relieve the owner or occupier of any premises, being a consumer within the meaning of these Regulations, from any obligation imposed on him by the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations.

26. The Undertakers shall not permanently connect a consumers installation with their electric lines unless they are reasonably satisfied that the connection, if made, would not cause a leakage from the consumers installation exceeding one ten-thousandth part of the maximum current to be supplied to the said installation.

27.—(a) The Undertakers shall not be compelled to commence or, subject to the provisions of Regulation 32, to continue to give a supply of energy to any consumer unless they are reasonably satisfied in respect of the consumers installation—

(i) That all conductors (including flexible conductors) and apparatus (including portable apparatus) are sufficient in size and power for the purposes for which the supply of energy is to be used and are constructed installed and protected so as to prevent danger so far as is reasonably practicable; and that all single-pole switches are inserted in live conductors only.

(ii) That every distinct circuit is protected against excess energy by means of a suitable fusible cut-out or automatic circuit breaker of adequate rupturing capacity suitably located and of such construction as to prevent danger from overheating, arcing or the scattering of hot metal when it comes into operation and as to permit of the ready renewal of the fusible metal without danger.

(iii) That every electric motor is controlled by an efficient switch or switches for starting and stopping and that the said switch or switches is or are so placed as to be readily accessible to and easily operated by the person in charge of the motor.

Provided that any consumers installation which complies with the provisions of the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations shall be deemed to fulfil the requirements of this Regulation.

28.—(a) The Undertakers shall not commence a supply of energy at low voltage to any consumer from more than one pair of conductors of a three-wire or multiphase system at medium voltage unless—

(i) the total rating in kilowatts of the apparatus (including electric lamps) connected or intended to be connected to the consumers wiring exceeds 8 kilowatts; and

(ii) the giving of the supply at low voltage from more than one pair of conductors of a system as aforesaid is necessary to avoid a variation in excess of the limits allowed by Regulation 34 in the voltage declared to that consumer or to any other consumer supplied from the same distributing main.

(b) The Undertakers shall not in any case be compelled to commence or, subject to the provisions of Regulation 32, to continue to give a supply of energy at low voltage to any consumer from more than one pair of conductors of a system as aforesaid unless they are reasonably satisfied in respect of the consumers installation—

(i) That the supply terminals are arranged in separate pairs in such a manner that so far as is reasonably practicable there shall be no danger of shock at medium voltage.

(ii) That the consumers wiring connected to the separate pairs of supply terminals is kept separate and distinct, or complies with the conditions applicable to a supply at medium voltage prescribed by Regulation 29.

(iii) That in the case of any room containing the different pairs of conductors, all socket outlets are connected to one and the same pair of conductors.

Provided that any consumers installation which complies with the provisions of the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations shall be deemed to fulfil the requirements of paragraph (b) of this Regulation.

(c) The provisions of paragraph (b) of this Regulation shall not apply in respect of the supply of energy by the Undertakers to any consumers installation to which the provisions of the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations as the case may be are applicable.

29.—(a) The Undertakers shall not be compelled to commence or, subject to the provisions of Regulation 32, to continue to give a supply of energy at medium voltage to any consumer unless they are reasonably satisfied in respect of the consumers installation—

(i) That all metal work enclosing supporting or associated with the consumers installation, other than that designed to serve as a conductor, is where necessary to prevent danger connected with earth.

(ii) That the consumers wiring is either completely enclosed in metal which is electrically continuous and adequately protected against mechanical damage; or, alternatively, is so constructed, installed and protected as to prevent danger so far as is reasonably practicable.

(iii) That the supply of energy to each motor or separate piece of apparatus is controlled by an efficient cut-off switch placed in such a position as to be readily accessible to and easily operated by the person in charge of the said motor or apparatus and so connected in circuit that by its means all voltage can be cut off from the motor or apparatus itself and from any regulating switch, resistance or other device associated therewith.

Provided that any consumers installation which complies with the provisions of the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations shall be deemed to fulfil the requirements of this Regulation.

(b) The foregoing provisions of this Regulation shall not apply in respect of the supply of energy by the Undertakers to any consumers installation to which the provisions of the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations as the case may be are applicable.

30.—(a) The Undertakers shall not commence a supply of energy at high voltage to any consumer unless—

(i) All conductors and apparatus intended for use at high voltage and situated on the premises of the consumer are inaccessible to the consumer, and all operations in connection with the said conductors and apparatus are carried out by the Undertakers by arrangement with the consumer; or

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

(ii) The consumer gives to the Undertakers a guarantee in writing that every portion of the consumers installation which is for use at high voltage will be maintained in an efficient state and, if so required, to the satisfaction of the Undertakers; that in cases where the said portion of the consumers installation is not enclosed in a building or other structure to which access can only be obtained by means of a key or special appliance, an authorised person will be available to cut off the supply in the event of emergency; and that instructions as to the treatment of persons suffering from electric shock will be affixed on or in the premises of the consumer.

(b) The Undertakers shall not in any case be compelled to commence or, subject to the provisions of Regulation 32, to continue to give a supply of energy at high voltage to any consumer unless they are reasonably satisfied in respect of the consumers installation—

(i) That no metal work designed to be electrically charged at high voltage will normally be exposed so that it can be touched.

(ii) That all conductors for use at high voltage (other than overhead lines) are completely enclosed in metal which is electrically continuous and adequately protected against mechanical damage.

(iii) That all metal work enclosing supporting or associated with the consumers installation, other than that designed to serve as a conductor, is where necessary to prevent danger connected with earth.

(iv) That the supply of energy to each motor or separate piece of apparatus is controlled by an efficient cut-off switch placed in such a position as to be readily accessible to and easily operated by the person in charge of the said motor or apparatus and so connected in circuit that by its means all voltage can be cut off from the motor or apparatus itself and from any regulating switch, resistance or other device associated therewith.

(v) That all windings at high voltage of motors or other apparatus within reach from any position in which a person may require to be are efficiently protected so as to prevent danger.

(vi) That where transforming apparatus is used, suitable provision is made, either by connecting with earth a point of the circuit at the lower voltage or otherwise, to guard against danger by reason of the said circuit becoming accidentally charged above its normal voltage by leakage from or contact with the circuit at the higher voltage.

(vii) That unless the conditions are such that the whole of the conductors and apparatus for use at high voltage may be made dead at the same time for the purpose of cleaning or for other work thereon, the said conductors and apparatus are so arranged that they may be made dead in sections, and that such sections are so separated by divisions or screens from all adjacent metal which is live that work on any section made dead may be carried on by an authorised person without danger.

(viii) That an adequate gangway or working space is provided in front of any switch board (other than panels for controlling circuits at low voltage) and at parts of the installation where live conductors can be exposed.

(ix) That adequate means are provided for preventing access by the public or any unauthorised person to any part of the consumers installation which is designed to be electrically charged at high voltage.

(c) The provisions of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Regulation shall not apply in respect of the supply of energy by the Undertakers to any consumers installation to which the provisions of the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations as the case may be are applicable.

(d) The Undertakers shall give to the Factory Inspector of the District concerned notice of their intention to commence a supply of energy at high voltage to any premises to which the Home Office Electricity Regulations apply.

31.—(a) The Undertakers shall not knowingly commence or, subject to the provisions of Regulation 32, continue to give a supply of energy to any consumer who proposes to transform or is transforming the energy to a higher voltage for the purposes of a luminous tube sign or the like on the outside of any premises unless the consumer gives to the Undertakers a guarantee in writing in respect of the consumers installation—

(i) That efficient cut-off switches on the lower voltage side of the transforming apparatus are provided both inside and outside any premises on which the said sign is placed and in such positions as to be readily accessible and easily operated without danger in an emergency and so connected in circuit that by their means all high voltage can be cut off from the sign itself and from any regulating switch, resistance, or other device associated therewith.

(ii) That no metal work designed to be electrically charged at high voltage will normally be exposed so that it can be touched.

(iii) That all conductors for use at high voltage (other than overhead lines and series wires connecting the parts in a luminous tube sign or the like) are completely enclosed in metal which is electrically continuous and where necessary to prevent danger adequately protected against mechanical damage, and that the said conductors are so arranged as to give a clear space of not less than three inches between the outside of their metallic coverings and the outside covering of any other electric line not forming part of the consumers installation or any pipe.

(iv) That all metal work enclosing supporting or associated with the consumers installation, other than that designed to serve as a conductor, is where necessary to prevent danger connected with earth.

(v) That all windings at high voltage of apparatus within reach from any position in which a person may require to be are efficiently protected so as to prevent danger.

(vi) That in respect of the transforming apparatus, suitable provision is made to guard against danger by reason of the circuit at the lower voltage becoming accidentally charged above its normal voltage by leakage from or contact with the circuit at the higher voltage.

(vii) That unless the conditions of supply are such that the whole of the conductors and apparatus may be made dead at the same time for the purpose of cleaning or for other work thereon, they are so arranged that they may be made dead in sections, and that such sections are so separated from all adjacent metal which is live that work on any section made dead may be carried on by an authorised person without danger.

(viii) That adequate means are provided for preventing any unauthorised person from coming into contact with any part of the consumers installation which is designed to be electrically charged at high voltage, and that an appropriate danger notice is displayed at points of access thereto.

(b) A guarantee in writing that any consumers installation complies with the provisions of the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations shall be deemed to fulfil the requirements of this Regulation save in so far as this Regulation specifies any requirements not contained in the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations.

(c) The foregoing provisions of this Regulation shall not apply in respect of the supply of energy by the Undertakers to any consumers installation to which the provisions of the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations as the case may be are applicable.

32.—(a) Where a supply of energy is being afforded to a consumer and the Undertakers after making such examination as the circumstances permit have reasonable grounds for supposing that a leakage exceeding the amount mentioned in Regulation 26 (hereinafter called the "specified amount") exists at some part of the consumers installation or that the said installation or any part thereof fails to fulfil any requirements of Regulations 27 to 31 (inclusive), the following provisions shall (subject as provided in paragraph (b) hereof) have effect:—

(i) In any case where the Undertakers are primâ facie satisfied that immediate action is justified as a work of emergency in the interests of the public safety or in order to avoid undue interference with the efficient supply of energy to other consumers, they may as a work of emergency forthwith discontinue the supply of energy to the consumers installation and shall give immediate notice in writing of the discontinuance to the consumer, specifying the matter complained of.

(ii) In any other case, the Undertakers may by notice in writing require the consumer within a reasonable time after the service of the notice to permit an officer or servant of the Undertakers duly authorised by them in writing to inspect and test the said installation at any time between the hours of 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. If the consumer does not give all due facilities for inspection and testing, or if, as the result of any such inspection or testing, the officer or servant makes a report confirming the existence of a leakage from the consumers installation exceeding the specified amount, or reports that the said installation or any part thereof fails to fulfil any requirements of Regulations 27 to 31 (inclusive), the Undertakers may forthwith by notice in writing specify the matter complained of; and if the consumer fails to show to the reasonable satisfaction of the Undertakers within such reasonable period as may be specified in that behalf in the notice that the said matter has been remedied, the Undertakers may, on the expiration of the said period but subject as hereinafter provided, discontinue the supply of energy to the consumers installation, giving immediate notice in writing of such discontinuance to the consumer.

(iii) Any difference which may arise between a consumer and the Undertakers in regard to any matter complained of or as to the period specified for remedying the same in any notice as aforesaid shall be settled in manner provided for by Regulation 33.

(iv) In the exercise of the powers conferred by paragraph (ii) hereof, the Undertakers shall not discontinue the supply of energy pending the settlement of any difference referred to in paragraph (iii) hereof, and shall in no case discontinue the supply of energy to the whole of the consumers installation where it is practicable to disconnect that portion in respect of which any matter is complained of:

Provided that nothing in this paragraph shall prevent the Undertakers from exercising the powers conferred by paragraph (i) hereof in the event of the development of a condition of emergency as therein provided.

(v) Where in pursuance of this Regulation the Undertakers have discontinued the supply of energy to the consumers installation or any part thereof, the Undertakers shall not recommence the supply of energy until they are reasonably satisfied in respect of the consumers installation that any requirements of Regulations 26 to 31 (inclusive) have been fulfilled or until it has been determined or decided in manner provided for by Regulation 33 that the Undertakers are not entitled under Regulations 26 to 31 (inclusive) to decline to recommence the supply, and thereupon the supply of energy shall be recommenced by the Undertakers.

(b) The foregoing provisions of this Regulation shall extend so far as applicable and with the necessary adaptations to any electric lines and apparatus situated on the consumers side of the supply terminals and belonging to the Undertakers or under their control within the meaning of Regulation 25; and where the supply of energy has been discontinued in pursuance of the said provisions the Undertakers shall, subject to the terms of any agreement entered into between the Undertakers and the consumer with respect to the letting on terms of hire or hire-purchase of any such electric lines and apparatus, forthwith remedy any defect in the said electric lines and apparatus and recommence the supply of energy.

(c) The foregoing provisions of this Regulation in so far as they relate to any requirements of Regulations 27 to 31 (inclusive) shall not apply in respect of the supply of energy by the Undertakers to any consumers installation to which the provisions of the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations as the case may be are applicable.

33.—(a) In any case where the Undertakers in pursuance of these Regulations decline to connect a consumers installation or any part thereof with their electric lines or to commence or continue to give a supply of energy thereto or decline to recommence the supply of energy after the same has been discontinued, they shall serve on the consumer a notice in writing stating their reasons for so declining.

(b) Any difference which may arise between a consumer and the Undertakers either with reference to any notice under paragraph (a) hereof, or under Regulation 32, or with reference to any consumers installation to which the provisions of Regulation 25 (a) and (b) apply, shall be determined by an Inspector nominated by the Electricity Commissioners on the application of the consumer or his authorised agent or of the Undertakers, as the case may be. The Electricity Commissioners shall prescribe the fee to be paid to such Inspector and the Inspector shall determine by which of the parties the costs of and incidental to the proceedings before him (including the prescribed fee) or any portion of such costs shall be paid:

Provided that in the case of any consumers installation (or any part thereof) which was connected with the electric lines of the Undertakers and supplied with energy prior to the prescribed date it shall not be competent for an Inspector nominated under this Regulation to determine that the Undertakers were or are entitled under Regulations 27 to 30 (inclusive) to refuse a supply of energy thereto if the Inspector is satisfied that—

(i) the said installation has continued to function satisfactorily up to the material time;

(ii) the installation is to be or is being continued in use only within the limits of the maximum power for which it was originally intended; and

(iii) there are no grounds for supposing that the installation will fail to continue to function satisfactorily for a further reasonable period without risk of danger.

(c) If the Undertakers or the consumer or his authorised agent are or is dissatisfied with the determination of the Inspector, they or he may appeal to the Electricity Commissioners and thereupon the Electricity Commissioners shall inquire into and decide upon the matter of the appeal and their decision shall be final and binding on all parties.

(d) This Regulation and Regulation 32 shall be endorsed on every notice given by the Undertakers to a consumer under the provisions of either of the said Regulations, or alternatively the notice shall be accompanied by a copy of each of the said Regulations.

34.—(a) Before commencing to give a supply of energy to any consumer, the Undertakers shall declare to that consumer—

(i) the type of current, whether direct or alternating, which they propose to supply;

(ii) in the case of alternating current, the number of phases and also the constant frequency at which they propose to deliver the energy to the supply terminals; and

(iii) the constant voltage at which they propose to deliver the energy to the supply terminals.

(b) The type of current, the number of phases and the frequency in the case of alternating current and the voltage declared as aforesaid shall be constantly maintained subject as respects the frequency to a permissible variation not exceeding one per cent. above or below the declared frequency and as respects the voltage to a permissible variation not exceeding 6 per cent. above or below the declared voltage, and shall not be altered or departed from nor shall the aforesaid permissible variations be exceeded except with the consent of the Electricity Commissioners and subject to such terms and conditions as they may impose:

Provided that any supply of energy at high voltage for the time being given by the Undertakers in accordance with a requirement of any prior Regulations that the energy should be supplied at a voltage not less than a declared minimum at the supply terminals and not exceeding the said minimum by more than 12½ per cent. shall unless otherwise agreed between the Undertakers and the consumer be continued by the Undertakers in accordance with that requirement unless the Electricity Commissioners otherwise allow in manner provided for in this Regulation.

(c) Public notice in such manner and for such period as the Electricity Commissioners may approve or require shall be given by the Undertakers of any application made by them for the consent of the Electricity Commissioners to an alteration of the declared type of current, or the number of phases or the frequency in the case of alternating current, or the voltage, as the case may be, or of the aforesaid permissible limits of variation in respect of frequency or voltage.

35. From the time when the Undertakers commence to supply energy through any distributing main, they shall maintain a supply of energy sufficient for the use of all consumers for the time being entitled to be supplied from that distributing main; and that supply shall be constantly maintained without change of the neutral conductor unless otherwise allowed by the Electricity Commissioners and subject to such terms and conditions as they may impose:

Provided that for the purposes of testing or for any other purposes whatsoever connected with the proper working of the undertaking, or in case of emergency affecting or liable to affect the proper working of any other undertaking from which the Undertakers receive a supply of electricity directly or indirectly, the supply of energy may be discontinued by the Undertakers for such period as may be necessary subject (except in any case of emergency) to not less than 24 hours notice being given by the Undertakers to all consumers likely to be affected by such discontinuance.

Miscellaneous.

36. The Undertakers shall within one month after they have become subject to these Regulations serve a printed copy thereof upon the local authority in cases where the local authority are not themselves the undertakers; and the Undertakers shall also keep printed copies of these Regulations at their principal office within the area of supply and shall supply a copy thereof to any person demanding the same at a price per copy not exceeding the price paid by the Undertakers themselves for the printed copies.

This Regulation shall not apply to the Central Electricity Board.

37. Officers and servants of the Electricity Commissioners duly authorised by them shall be entitled at all times to inspect and to make examination and tests of the works of the Undertakers and to examine and take records of the readings of any instruments, and the Undertakers shall afford all due facilities for any such inspections, examinations and tests:

Provided that the Undertakers shall not be responsible for any interruption in the supply of energy which may be occasioned by any such inspection, examination or test.

38.—(a) The Undertakers shall send to the Electricity Commissioners notice of any accident by explosion, or fire, and also of any other accident of such kind as to have caused, or to be likely to have caused, loss of life, or personal injury which has occurred in any part of the Undertakers works or their circuits, or in connection with those works or circuits, and also notice of any loss of life or personal injury occasioned by any such accident. The notice shall be sent by the earliest practicable post after the accident occurs, or, as the case may be, after the loss of life or personal injury becomes known to the Undertakers. If the Undertakers fail to comply with the provisions of this paragraph they shall be liable, for each default, to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

(b) The Electricity Commissioners may also, if they deem it necessary, appoint any Electric Inspector or other fit person to inquire and report as to the cause of any accident affecting the safety of the public, which may have been occasioned by or in connection with the Undertakers works, whether notice of the accident has or has not been received from the Undertakers, or as to the manner in which and extent to which the provisions of the Electricity (Supply) Acts and any Act or Order relating to the undertaking, and of any Regulations in force and applicable to the undertaking, so far as those provisions affect the safety of the public, have been complied with by the Undertakers; and any person appointed under this Regulation, not being an Electric Inspector, shall for the purposes of his appointment have all the powers of an Electric Inspector under any Act or Order relating to the undertaking.

(c) The foregoing provisions of this Regulation shall not apply to the Undertakers in respect of any undertaking authorised by an Act or Order which incorporates Section 38 of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899, or includes any corresponding provision.

(d) The Undertakers shall send to the Electricity Commissioners by the earliest practicable post after the happening becomes known to the Undertakers notice of any fatality on the premises of any ordinary consumer occasioned by or attributed to the consumers installation.

39. If the Undertakers make default in complying with any of the preceding Regulations, they shall, subject to the provisions of Regulation 38 (a) and of any Act or Order relating to the undertaking, be liable on conviction to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds for every such default and to a daily penalty not exceeding ten pounds. The recovery of a penalty under these Regulations shall not affect the liability (if any) of the Undertakers to make compensation in respect of any damage or injury which may have been caused by reason of the default.

These Regulations are made by the Electricity Commissioners in virtue of the powers exerciseable by them under the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1936, and Orders made thereunder and under local Acts relating to the supply of electricity and subject to the power of the Electricity Commissioners from time to time to make such further or other Regulations whether of a general or particular character as they may think expedient.

Signed by order of the Electricity Commissioners this 17th day of December, 1936.

ELECTRICITY SUPPLY REGULATIONS, 1937.

EXPLANATORY NOTES ON THE ELECTRICITY SUPPLY REGULATIONS, 1937, PREPARED BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS.

The accompanying Explanatory Notes on the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1937, have been prepared by the Electricity Commissioners for the information and assistance of Authorised Undertakers and others who are subject to or concerned with the provisions thereof.

While the Notes indicate the intentions of the Electricity Commissioners as regards the scope of various provisions, it is necessary to emphasise that they do not purport to give a legal interpretation of any of the Regulations, as that is a matter for the Courts.

December, 1936.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

The Electricity Supply Regulations, 1937, represent, broadly speaking, a re-issue of the prior consolidated Code of Regulations of the Electricity Commissioners, namely the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1934, with certain modifications, more particularly as regards their retrospective application.

The Regulations of 1934 came into force as from January 15th, 1934, in relation to all works brought into use and all supplies of energy commenced by authorised undertakers on and after that date ; and contained provision whereby they were also to become applicable to all prior works and all prior supplies on and after January 1st, 1935, in lieu of all prior Regulations.

As indicated in their Annual Reports, the Electricity Commissioners received representations for the amendment of the retrospective and certain other provisions in the Regulations of 1934, and decided to re-issue the Regulations in a modified form. Pending the settlement of the modifications, the application of the Regulations of 1934 to prior works and prior supplies was postponed until January 1st, 1936, and subsequently until January 1st, 1937.

The Electricity Supply Regulations, 1937, come into force as from January 1st, 1937 (the prescribed date); and as from that date all prior Regulations, including the Regulations of 1934, cease to have effect and are revoked without prejudice to anything done or suffered thereunder, subject to certain qualifications which are referred to later in these Notes.

DEFINITIONS.

The words and expressions which are defined in the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1937, for the purposes thereof are for the most part taken or adapted from the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1936, including the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899, and from the Board of Trade Regulations of 1909 as adopted by the Electricity Commissioners in 1920 and the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1934.

Appendix "A" to these Explanatory Notes indicates the particular Acts or prior Regulations from which the various words and expressions have been taken or adapted; and also draws attention to modifications which have been made either in the expressions themselves or in the definitions used in the new Regulations.

Short Title and Application of Regulations.

There are two underlying features of the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1937, namely:—

(i) their general application, as a consolidated Standard Code, to all authorised undertakers and undertakings and to all works and supplies of energy whether brought into use or commenced before or after the prescribed date (January 1st, 1937); and

(ii) the displacement (by revocation) of all prior Regulations (other than those relating to Overhead Lines) as from the prescribed date.

These features are subject in each case to certain qualifications, to which reference is made below.

With regard to the application of the new Regulations to existing works and to supplies which are being given at the prescribed date, provision is made—

(a) excepting certain of the Regulations from application to such works and supplies (see paragraph 2 (a) (i) of the Short Title, etc.);

(b) limiting the extent to which certain other Regulations are to apply to such works and supplies (see paragraph 2 (a) (ii) of the Short Title, etc.); and

(c) suspending for a period of two years the application of other Regulations to existing works and existing supplies (see paragraph 2 (a) (iii) of the Short Title, etc.), so as to afford the Undertakers concerned a reasonable opportunity of carrying out or making any necessary alterations or arrangements to bring the works or supplies into compliance or conformity with the new Regulations.

In the case of the Regulations whose application is suspended, namely Regulations 9 (a) (ii) and (iii), 10 (b), 16 (b), 19, 22, 23 and 31, it will be observed that, unless otherwise prescribed by the Electricity Commissioners in particular cases, the existing works and supplies concerned continue to be subject for the time being to the provisions of any corresponding prior Regulations which were applicable thereto before January 1st, 1937, until brought into compliance or conformity with the new Regulations, which must be done by January 1st, 1939.

Subject to the preceding qualifications, other existing works or existing supplies must be brought into compliance or be given in conformity with the provisions of the new Regulations as soon as practicable after the prescribed date.

With regard to the revocation of all prior Regulations (as defined) without prejudice to anything done or suffered thereunder, it will be observed that provision is made in the first proviso to paragraph 3 of the Short Title, etc. for deferring in individual cases the revocation of such prior Regulations as continue to apply to existing works and existing supplies during the period while certain of the Regulations of 1937 are suspended from application thereto.

The intention of the second proviso to paragraph 3 is to preserve the rights and obligations of the Undertakers in relation to consumers or other bodies under consents to or approvals of operations of a continuing character which have been given under prior Regulations and have not been fully exercised. For example, there are cases where undertakers in virtue of such consents are in process of changing over the type of current or the voltages declared to consumers and have not yet completed the whole of the change-over authorised by the consents.

General Scope of Regulations.

The Regulations are divisible into two main groups concerned respectively with—

(a) the electric lines and works of the Undertakers (Regulations 1 to 21 inclusive); and

(b) the supply of energy to consumers and consumers installations (Regulations 22 to 35 inclusive).

There are also certain additional Regulations of a miscellaneous character (Regulations 36 to 39 inclusive).

Electric Lines and Works of the Undertakers.

(Regulations 1 to 21 inclusive.)

With regard to the Regulations falling into the first main group, brief comment may be made on the provisions of the undermentioned.

Regulations 1 and 6 (Test for resistance of insulation).

These two Regulations are concerned with the testing of the insulation of electric lines for use at low and medium voltage (Regulation 1), and of electric lines and apparatus for use at high voltage (Regulation 6) before such lines and apparatus are actually brought into use by the Undertakers for the purposes of the supply of energy.

The Regulations are intended to ensure that the electric lines and apparatus shall be subjected to certain tests after they have been placed in position but before final jointing to or connection with a live system and before they are brought into use, although tests were carried out prior to the electric lines or apparatus being placed in position (for example while they were at the manufacturers works).

Regulation 1 does not apply to overhead lines unless the Electricity Commissioners otherwise prescribe in any particular case. With regard to this qualification, it should be noted that insulated cables are sometimes placed above ground in the open air (See Note on definition of " Overhead lines " on page 16).

Regulation 6 is not excepted from application to overhead lines.

Regulations 4 and 8 (Connection with earth).

By Section 10 (c) of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899, it is provided in effect that the Undertakers shall not permit any part of any circuit to be connected with earth except in the following circumstances:—

(i) So far as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of Regulations made under the Electricity (Supply) Acts; and

(ii) In virtue of an approval of the Electricity Commissioners with the concurrence of the Postmaster-General, and in accordance with the conditions, if any, of that approval.

Regulations 4 and 8 prescribe the circumstances in which and conditions under which it is necessary for the Undertakers to connect with earth certain systems for use at low and medium voltage (Regulation 4), and systems for use at high voltage (Regulation 8); and with the concurrence of the Postmaster-General, the Electricity Commissioners have extended these two Regulations so as to permit of certain kinds of multiple earthing, including that involved in giving a supply from an earthed system to an electrode boiler which is also connected with earth, subject to specified conditions.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

The attention of Undertakers is specially directed to the conditions which pla them under obligation to serve prior notice on the Postmaster-General giving certa particulars and also stating the location of all the points of earthing concerned in a multiple earthing carried out under these Regulations. The Electricity Comm sioners have ascertained that such notices may be served on the Post Office Section Engineer, or, where there is no Sectional Engineer, on the Telephone Manager.

Any multiple earthing other than that permitted by these two Regulations w necessitate the approval of the Electricity Commissioners and the concurrence of t Postmaster-General; and the Undertakers will accordingly have to make individu applications to the Electricity Commissioners for any desired approvals.

Attention is drawn to the new proviso to paragraph (vi) of Regulation 4. Sin the issue of the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1934, and as indicated in the Annual Reports, the Electricity Commissioners have dealt with a number of applic tions for consent to a modification of the requirements of paragraph (e) of Regul tion 4 thereof (corresponding to the above-mentioned paragraph (vi)) to permit the insertion of the secondary winding of a high frequency transformer in the con nection with earth of an alternating current distribution system for the purpose of th remote control of switches for street lighting. The new proviso embodies the con ditions which the Electricity Commissioners attached to their consents in a numbe of cases, and the object of the proviso is to obviate individual applications in th future.

Regulation 7 (Electric lines to be metal sheathed: Precautions against excess leakage)

This Regulation, the form of which has been revised, is intended to relate mor particularly to cable systems for use at high voltage, and does not apply to overhea lines unless the Electricity Commissioners otherwise prescribe in any particular case With regard to this qualification, it should be noted that high voltage insulate cables are sometimes placed above ground in the open air (see Note on definition o "Overhead lines" on page 16).

Regulation 9 (General conditions as to transformation, control, etc.).

The Electricity Commissioners are advised that a substation under a street is a street box within the meaning of the Electricity (Supply) Acts. In consequence o the words in brackets in paragraph (a) (iii) of Regulation 9, the provisions of that paragraph do not extend to any underground street box which by reason of its size and contents would be a substation as defined in the Regulations.

Regulation 12 (Standard of construction of electric lines).

While this Regulation does not preclude the Undertakers from installing electric lines which do not conform in all respects to British Standard Specifications, the standard of construction of the said electric lines must not be lower than that prescribed in such Specifications unless the Electricity Commissioners otherwise allow in any particular case.

Regulation 13 (Protection against excess energy).

This Regulation has been amended to make it clear that it does not require the insertion in a service line from a distributing main of a fusible cut-out or automatic circuit-breaker apart from that required by Regulation 24 (Protection of consumers installations against excess energy).

Regulation 14 (Precautions against metal work becoming electrically charged).

This Regulation, the form of which has been revised, is excepted from application to overhead lines. The Overhead Line Regulations of the Electricity Commissioners make provision for precautions to be taken in cases where line conductors cross over or under or are in proximity to other overhead wires; and in the case of high voltage overhead lines for all metal work other than conductors to be connected with earth.

Regulation 15 (Overhead lines).

In addition to those Regulations which are expressly excluded from application to overhead lines (for example Regulation 1), there are other Regulations which by their nature do not extend to overhead lines (for example Regulation 19).

Regulation 17 (Bituminous, etc., insulation or protection).

With regard to paragraph (b) of this Regulation, a prohibition against the bringing into use of any further mains insulated with bitumen or composition of a bituminous character has been in force since June, 1931, when a general Regulation dealing with this matter was made by the Electricity Commissioners as the outcome of an Inquiry into an explosion which occurred in connection with a main of that type.

Regulation 21 (Precautions against failures of supply, etc.; Notice of failures).

Attention is drawn to the new provisions contained in paragraph (b) of Regulation 21 placing an obligation upon the Undertakers to take all reasonable precautions during and in connection with constructional and maintenance work so as to avoid accidental interruptions of supply and also to avoid danger to the public or to any employees or authorised persons engaged on operations which do not come within the scope of the Home Office Electricity Regulations.

The notice to be given by the Undertakers to the Electricity Commissioners of failures of supply is to be in such form and to contain such particulars as the Commissioners may from time to time prescribe. If and when the Commissioners decide to modify the form at present prescribed, as set out in Appendix "B", due notification of the modifications will be given to all Undertakers (a).

Supply to Premises of Consumers: Consumers Installations.

(Regulations 22 to 35 inclusive.)

An important feature of the second main group of Regulations (which are broadly in accord with a corresponding group in the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1934) is the general relationship laid down as between the Undertakers and consumers of electricity.

The Regulations provide that the Undertakers shall not be compelled to commence, or subject to the provisions of Regulation 32 (Discontinuance of supply in certain circumstances) to continue to give, a supply of energy to any consumer unless they are reasonably satisfied as to the suitability and condition of the consumers installation, e.g. that the conductors and apparatus are sufficient in size and power for the purposes for which the supply is to be used, and are constructed, installed and protected so as to prevent danger as far as reasonably practicable.

The Regulations also accord official recognition to the Regulations for the Electrical Equipment of Buildings (Tenth Edition, September, 1934) issued by the Institution of Electrical Engineers by providing that consumers installations which comply with the provisions of the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations (as defined) shall be deemed to fulfil the requirements of Regulations 27, 28 and 29, as the case may be, as regards the suitability and condition of the installations.

It is important to emphasise that the Regulations of 1937 (as was indicated by the Electricity Commissioners in their Fourteenth Annual Report for the year ending March 31st, 1934, when commenting upon the analogous provisions in the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1934) do not provide as an essential requirement that a consumers installation must comply with the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations.

Neither do they entitle the Undertakers, in the absence of other adequate reasons, to decline to connect or give a supply to a consumers installation merely on the ground that the installation embodies materials, methods of wiring or appliances other than those specified in the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations.

The reasons for so declining must be stated in writing by the Undertakers to the consumer, as provided for by Regulation 33 (a); and it is then open to the consumer or his authorised agent in the event of disagreement with the reasons stated by the

(a) See letters of March 29th, 1939, and September 29th, 1939, post, pp. 2786, 2788.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

Undertakers, to have the matter determined in manner provided for by Regulation 33, namely, by an Inspector nominated by the Electricity Commissioners with a further right of appeal to the Electricity Commissioners.

While the Regulations thus enable all Undertakers to accept the provisions embodied in the Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations as a standard for consumers installations, they do not prescribe those provisions as an absolute standard from which no departure is permissible. At the same time the Regulations enable consumers effectively to resist any demand by the Undertakers for a standard of installation in excess of the provisions of the Institution Regulations.

It should be noted that the Regulations do not apply in respect of the supply of energy to any consumers installation to which the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations apply.

Special consideration was given by the Electricity Commissioners to the bearing of Regulations 27 to 30 (inclusive) in relation to the supply of electricity to existing installations.

Owing to developments in technical practice, many existing installations may not be in accord in all respects with the generally accepted standards of construction or installation now current. On the other hand, it appeared to the Electricity Commissioners that unnecessary expense and inconvenience would be caused if an existing supply of electricity to such an installation could be discontinued, or if a new supply to such an installation could be refused in the event of the present occupier leaving the premises and a new consumer coming into occupation, merely on the grounds that the installation was not fully in conformity with current technical practice and irrespective of whether it was otherwise functioning satisfactorily without risk of danger.

With the view of obviating such a condition of affairs, the Electricity Commissioners have included in Regulation 33 (Notices by Undertakers: Procedure as to settlement of differences: Appeals) a protective provision in respect of consumers installations which were connected up and supplied by the Undertakers prior to the prescribed date.

If any question arises of discontinuing an existing supply or of refusing a new supply to such an installation, and the existing consumer or new consumer who has taken over the installation satisfies an Inspector that the installation is in a satisfactory and safe condition although not in accord with current technical practice, it is not competent for the Inspector to decide that the Undertakers were or are entitled under Regulations 27 to 30 (inclusive) to refuse a supply of electricity to the installation.

In addition to the foregoing general observations, comment may be made on the provisions of the undermentioned Regulations.

Regulation 25 (Undertakers lines, etc., on consumers premises).

This Regulation relates to electric lines and apparatus placed by the Undertakers on the premises of consumers and either belonging to or under the control of the Undertakers.

Paragraph (a) extends to all such electric lines and apparatus whether on the supply side or on the consumers side of the supply terminals; and therefore applies to wiring installations and apparatus provided by the Undertakers on terms of hire or hire-purchase. In so far as the agreements between the Undertakers and consumers make provision with respect to the maintenance of such wiring installations and apparatus, paragraph (c) of the Regulation provides for a corresponding adjustment of the obligations of the Undertakers under the Regulation.

Attention is drawn to the new provisions of paragraph (b) which are directed to ensure that the standard of construction and installation adopted by the Undertakers in cases where they provide the consumers wiring and apparatus shall not be lower than the standard which the Undertakers would be prepared to accept for the purposes of Regulations 27 to 30 (inclusive) if the wiring and apparatus had been provided by the consumer.

Any difference which may arise between a consumer and the Undertakers with reference to the standard of construction and installation adopted by the Undertakers in providing the consumers wiring and apparatus can, under the provisions of Regulation 33, be determined by an Inspector, with a right of appeal to the Electricity Commissioners.

Regulation 28 (Supply at low voltage from more than one pair conductors of system at medium voltage).

This Regulation relates to cases where, in effect, separate supplies each at low voltage are given to separate circuits on the premises of an individual consumer from more than one pair of conductors of a three-wire or multi-phase system at medium voltage, so that in the event of the too close proximity of the separate low voltage circuits or of apparatus connected thereto there is the possibility of danger of shock at medium voltage.

It should be noted that both of the requirements (i) and (ii) specified in paragraph (a) of the Regulation must be complied with to entitle the Undertakers to commence a supply of energy at low voltage to a consumer from more than one pair of conductors of a medium voltage system. The provisions of paragraph (a) relate to supplies commenced on or after the prescribed date and do not apply to supplies commenced by the Undertakers before the prescribed date. (See paragraph 2 (a) (i) of the Short Title, etc.)

The Regulation is not concerned with supplies at medium voltage, for example with a supply at 400 volts to an electric motor. Such medium voltage supplies come within the scope of Regulation 29 (Supply at medium voltage), and this does not prescribe any limitation as to the rating in kilowatts of any apparatus which may be supplied at medium voltage.

Attention is drawn to the amended form of paragraph (b) (iii) of Regulation 28.

Regulation 31 (Supply for luminous tube signs on outside of premises).

This Regulation in its amended form provides that the Undertakers shall not knowingly commence, or, subject to the provisions of Regulation 32, continue to give a supply which is to be or is being transformed to a higher voltage for the purposes of a luminous tube sign or the like on the outside of any premises unless the consumer gives a guarantee in writing as to the suitability and condition of the consumers installation.

Regulation 32 (Discontinuance of supply in certain circumstances).

This Regulation is concerned with the circumstances in which a supply of energy may be discontinued by the Undertakers, and deals with cases of emergency and other cases.

Where the Undertakers are primâ facie satisfied that immediate action is justified as a work of emergency in the interests of the public safety or in order to avoid undue interference with the efficient supply of energy to other consumers, immediate discontinuance of the supply as a work of emergency is authorised by the Regulation.

In all other cases where the question of possible discontinuance arises, provision is made for due notification to the consumer of the matter complained of by the Undertakers, and for the settlement of any differences that may arise between a consumer and the Undertakers (in manner provided for by Regulation 33). Pending the settlement of any such difference, the Undertakers are not entitled by the Regulation to discontinue the supply except in the event of the development of a condition of emergency.

Every notice given to a consumer under this Regulation (as well as every notice under Regulation 33) must be endorsed with or be accompanied by a copy of Regulations 32 and 33.

In making a Regulation conferring upon the Undertakers the important right to discontinue a supply in circumstances other than those of emergency, the Electricity Commissioners were necessarily concerned to ensure as far as possible that consumers should be safeguarded against the risk of any unreasonable exercise of the right.

Where the question of the discontinuance of supply arises and the issue turns on the alleged non-compliance of the consumers installation with the provisions of particular Regulations, it is apparent that there may be legitimate grounds for differences between the consumer and the Undertakers as to the matters complained of or as to the time specified for remedying the same. Even when these matters have been settled either by eventual agreement between the parties or in manner provided for in Regulation 33, there is still the possibility of subsequent differences as to whether defects have been properly rectified and the installation brought into compliance with the relevant provisions of the Regulation concerned.

It has thus been necessary to have regard to a variety of different circumstances in laying down the conditions under which a supply may properly be discontinued by the Undertakers in cases other than those of emergency.

Regulation 33 (Notices by Undertakers: Procedure as to settlement of differences: Appeals).

This Regulation places an obligation on the Undertakers to give notice in writing to a consumer in any case where in pursuance of the Regulations the Undertakers decline to commence, to continue, or to recommence a supply of energy thereto. The notice must state the reasons of the Undertakers for so declining; and every notice given to a consumer under this Regulation (as well as every notice under Regulation 32) must be endorsed with or be accompanied by a copy of Regulations 32 and 33.

Provision is then made for the settlement of differences which may arise between a consumer and the Undertakers in connection with such notices, or on certain other matters, by an Inspector nominated by the Electricity Commissioners on the application of the consumer or his authorised agent or of the Undertakers, with a right of subsequent appeal to the Electricity Commissioners.

Reference has already been made to the protective provisions included in this Regulation for cases where consumers installations which were connected up and supplied prior to the prescribed date are shown to be in a satisfactory and safe condition although not fully in accord with the generally accepted current standard of technical practice (see pages 9–10).

MISCELLANEOUS.

Of the Regulations and provisions under this heading, attention may be drawn to the following.

Regulation 38 (Notice of accidents: Inquiries by Electricity Commissioners).

The provisions of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Regulation are closely in accord with the provisions of Section 38 of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899. The Acts or Orders of the great majority of authorised undertakers incorporate Section 38 or include a corresponding provision, and the object of paragraphs (a) and (b) of Regulation 38 is to apply similar provisions to all remaining Undertakers, the said paragraphs being excepted from application to Undertakers who are already subject to Section 38 (or corresponding provision).

The new provisions contained in paragraph (d) of Regulation 38 apply to all Undertakers, and are directed to ensure that the attention of the Electricity Commissioners shall be drawn to all cases of fatalities occasioned by or attributed to installations on the premises of ordinary consumers. The expression "ordinary consumer" is intended to mean the general body of consumers, such as domestic consumers, as contrasted with particular consumers (such as large power consumers) supplied under special agreements to whom as a general rule the provisions of the Home Office Electricity Regulations or the Mines Department Electricity Regulations would probably be applicable.

It should be noted that in virtue of the concluding paragraph of the Regulations, it is open to individual Undertakers to make application to the Electricity Commissioners from time to time for the making of a special Regulation.

A corresponding paragraph was included in prior Codes, and special Regulations have been made by the Electricity Commissioners in cases for example where a new technical development (such as the use in connection with overhead line systems of coils for suppressing arcing to earth) could not be brought into operation without some modification of the then-current Regulations, or where the Undertakers showed good cause for some variation in the provisions of a particular Regulation in its application to their undertaking.

APPENDIX A.

DEFINITIONS.

The words and expressions which are defined in the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1937, for the purposes of those Regulations may be grouped into the following classes :—

(1) Expressions which are also defined in the same terms in the Electricity (Supply) Acts or the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899, (subsequently referred to as the Schedule of 1899) for the purposes of those Acts.

This group includes the following word and expressions :—

"Consumer."
"Daily penalty."
"General supply."
"Service line."
} All defined in Section 1 of the Schedule of 1899.

"Electric line." Defined in Section 32 of the Electric Lighting Act, 1882.

"Generating station." As defined in Section 36 of the Electricity (Supply) Act 1919, and not as defined in Section 25 of the Electric Lighting Act, 1909.

(2) Expressions which are also defined but in somewhat different terms in the Electricity (Supply) Acts or the Schedule of 1899 for the purposes of those Acts.

This group includes the following expression and words :—

"Distributing main." The definition in Section 1 of the Schedule of 1899 has been adapted for the purposes of the Regulations by the addition of the words " or intended to be used."

"Energy." The definition in Section 1 of the Schedule of 1899 has been adapted, the words " applying the provisions of the principal Act to the Special Order " having been replaced in the Regulations by the words " applying the provisions of the Electricity (Supply) Acts, 1882 to 1936, to any Act or Order relating to the undertaking of the Undertakers."

"Main." The definition in Section 1 of the Schedule of 1899 has been adapted by the omission of the words " which may be laid down by the Undertakers in any street or public place and." A main as defined in the Regulations for the purposes thereof is thus not limited to a main laid down in any street or public place.

"Works." The definition in Section 32 of the Electric Lighting Act, 1882, has been adapted, the words " object of the Undertakers under this Act " have been replaced in the Regulations by the words " object of the Undertakers under the Electricity (Supply) Acts."

(3) Expressions which have been adapted from somewhat analogous expressions in the Electricity (Supply) Acts or the Schedule of 1899.

This group includes the following expressions :—

"Supply of electricity in bulk." The definition in Section 25 of the Electric Lighting Act, 1909, has been adapted. The definition in the Regulations does not include a supply of electricity by an authorised undertaker to a local authority authorised to undertake or contract for the lighting of streets, bridges or public places.

"Supply terminals." The definition of " Consumer's terminals " in Section 1 of the Schedule of 1899, has been adapted by the omission of the words " and belonging to him." The wiring on the premises of many consumers is provided by and belongs to the Undertakers and forms part of their authorised undertaking. See Section 16 of the Electric Lighting Act, 1909; and Section 23 of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1919.

(4) Expressions which were defined either in the same or in somewhat different terms in the Board of Trade Regulations of 1909 as adopted by the Electricity Commissioners in 1920 and subsequently included in their Electricity Supply Regulations, 1934.

This group includes the following words and expressions :—

"Connected with earth." The present definition was included in the Regulations of 1934 and accords closely with that of the expression " efficiently connected with earth " contained in the Codes of 1909 and 1920.

"Consumers wiring." The present definition was included in the Regulations of of 1934 and was adapted from the definition of " Consumers wires " in the Codes of 1909 and 1920 so as to accord with the definition of " Supply terminals."

"High voltage." The present definition, which was also included in the Regulations of 1934, covers all voltages normally exceeding 650 volts, whereas the

ECTRIC
AND

corresponding definition in the Codes of 1909 and 1920 covered voltages normally exceeding 650 volts but not exceeding 3,000 volts.

"Low voltage." The present definition, in conformity with those contained in the Codes of 1909 and 1920 and also in the Regulations of 1934, covers voltages normally not exceeding 250 volts.

"Medium voltage." The present definition, in conformity with those contained in the Codes of 1909 and 1920 and also in the Regulations of 1934, covers voltages normally exceeding 250 volts but not exceeding 650 volts.

"Overhead line." The definition accords with that in the Codes of 1909 and 1920 and also in the Regulations of 1934.

"Substation." The present definition was included in the Regulations of 1934 but differs somewhat from that contained in the Codes of 1909 and 1920.

"Voltage." The present definition is in more detailed terms than that of the definition of "Voltage" in the Regulations of 1934 or of the corresponding definition of "Pressure" in the Codes of 1909 and 1920.

(5) Other expressions which were defined for the first time in the Regulations of 1934, and are retained in the Regulations of 1937 with or without modifications.

This group includes the following words and expressions :—

"Apparatus."
"Circuit."
"Conductor."
"Consumers installation."
"Dead."
"Home Office Electricity Regulations."
"Insulation."
"Live."
"Mines Department Electricity Regulations."
"Switch station."

} Definitions retained without modification.

"Authorised person."
"Outdoor substation."
"Outdoor switch-station."
"System."

} Definitions retained in an amended form.

(6) Expressions which appear for the first time in the Regulations of 1937 themselves.

This group includes three expressions namely :—

"Electrode boiler."
"Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations."
"Prior Regulations."

COMMENTS ON PARTICULAR DEFINITIONS.

In addition to the preceding observations of a comparative nature, comments by way of explanation may be made on the undermentioned Definitions.

"Electrode boiler." This expression has been defined for the purposes of Regulations 4 and 8 (Connection with earth) in which it is employed.

"Institution of Electrical Engineers Regulations." This expression is defined as meaning the Tenth Edition (September, 1934) of the Regulations for the Electrical Equipment of Buildings issued by the Institution of Electrical Engineers, with the alterations or additions current at the date of the Electricity Supply Regulations, 1937. It should be noted that any subsequent Regulations, alterations or additions issued by the Institution do not come within the scope of the expression unless they are approved by the Electricity Commissioners for the purposes of the Regulations of 1937.

"Overhead line." The definition covers any electric line which is placed above ground and in the open air. It is therefore not confined to ordinary overhead lines with bare conductors, but extends to cases where insulated cables are erected above ground and in the open air. Attention is drawn to Section 10 (b) of the Schedule of 1899, which refers to "any electric line above ground."

"Prior Regulations." Regulations relating to Overhead Lines are excluded from the scope of this expression.

"System." This expression where used throughout the Regulations is intended to mean the individual electrical systems which collectively make up the complete network. For example, the secondary circuit of a double-wound transformer and all the conductors and apparatus electrically connected to the said secondary circuit together constitute an individual electrical system within the meaning of the expression; while the primary circuit of the transformer and all conductors and apparatus electrically connected to the said primary circuit together constitute another individual electrical system.

APPENDIX A.

Requirements as to the Construction and Performance of new Standard and Substandard Apparatus to be used for the purposes of Section 2 of the Act of 1936.

For resistance standards having rated currents up to and including 100 amperes, the error in the resistance shall not exceed 0·03 per cent. for any current up to the rated current.

For resistance standards having rated currents exceeding 100 amperes, the error in the resistance shall not exceed 0·05 per cent. for any current up to the rated current.

The thermal electromotive force of a resistance standard when it has been in circuit at the rated current for half an hour shall not exceed 0·01 per cent. of the voltage drop at rated current.

[Notes.—

(i) An independent section for balancing against the standard cell is desirable from the point of view of convenience.

(ii) A voltage drop of 1·5 volts at rated current is a convenient value for standard resistances for measurement of currents up to 100 amperes, but lower values are employed and are satisfactory.

(iii) Secondary batteries of adequate rating and in good condition are essential adjuncts to the accurate use of a potentiometer.]

2.—SPECIFICATION FOR SUBSTANDARD WATTMETERS.

(a) Type.

Wattmeters shall be dynamometer instruments, and, unless of the torsion-head type, shall have scales not less than 5 inches long, knife-edged pointers, and anti-parallax mirrors.

(b) AC/DC Changeover.

The corrections on alternating current at the declared frequency and unity power factor and on direct current shall be identical within the accuracy of reading. The correction on direct current shall be taken as the mean of two values obtained with opposite polarities.

(c) Level Error.

The change of correction due to a variation of 1 degree from the level position in any direction shall not exceed 0·15 per cent. of full scale reading. Any change of zero due to the variation of level shall be corrected before each test is made.

The requirements of this paragraph shall not apply to suspended-coil torsion-head wattmeters.

(d) Stray Field Error.

The change of correction at unity power factor due to an alternating magnetic field of 5 C.G.S. units in phase with the current in the wattmeter current coil, and having any direction relative to the wattmeter, shall not exceed 0·75 per cent. at the full scale point.

(e) Zero Power Factor Error.

The error of the wattmeter at rated volts and rated amperes and zero power factor (lagging) shall not exceed 0·3 per cent. of full scale reading.

(f) Zero Change.

The " zero " obtained by breaking the voltage circuit at the terminal having the greater potential to the current circuit (or by using the press-key if one is provided) shall not differ by more than 0·1 per cent. of full scale reading from the " zero " obtained by breaking the current circuit when the voltage element is energised at the marked voltage.

(g) Self-heating Error.

The change of correction at unity power factor due to the application for half an hour of rated voltage alone, rated current alone, or rated voltage with rated current, shall not exceed 0·2 per cent.

(h) Mechanical Defects.

(i) Instability of Corrections.

Instruments shall not exhibit any instability exceeding 0·1 per cent. of full scale reading when the testing conditions are maintained constant.

(j) General.

Substandard Wattmeters shall comply in all other respects with British Standard Specification No. 89–1929 for substandard-grade dynamometer wattmeters (not " Special Dynamometer Wattmeter "), except that there shall be no limitation on the number or rating of the current ranges.

(B) SUBSTANDARD ALTERNATING CURRENT WATT-HOUR METERS.

(a) Limits of Error.

The errors of a meter at 15° C. and at marked voltage and frequency shall not exceed the following values :—

Conditions of Test.		Limits of Error.

at 5	1·0	± 1.5
125 to 20	0·5 (lagging)	± 1·0
at 10	0·5 (lagging)	± 2·0

There shall be a permissible tolerance of 0·5 per cent. which may be applied in one direction only for all the conditions of test specified above (i.e. as a plus tolerance or as a minus tolerance, but not both) so that the overall range of error remains unchanged.

If the meter is marked for a range of voltage, the errors must be within the above limits at all the voltages within the range.

(b) Variation of Voltage.

A variation of 10 per cent. above or below the marked voltage at any load from full load to one-tenth of full load at unity power factor shall not cause a change of more than one per cent. in the error of the meter.

If the meter is marked for a range of voltage, the above requirements shall apply to all the voltages within the range.

(c) Variation of Air Temperature.

The temperature co-efficient shall not exceed 0·1 per cent. per degree centigrade at any load between full load and one-quarter of full load at any power factor between unity and 0·5 (lagging).

(d) Variation due to Stray Fields.

The change in the rate of registration of the meter when subjected to the magnetic field defined below shall not exceed 1·5 per cent. at any load between full load and one-quarter of full load at unity power factor.

The magnetic field shall be produced by a coil one metre in diameter having 100 ampere-turns. The meter shall be placed in the centre of the coil and the plane of the coil shall be vertical and perpendicular to the plane containing the back of the meter case.

The currents in the meter current-circuit and in the magnetising coil shall be (i) in phase, (ii) 60° apart with the current in the magnetising coil leading.

The change in the rate of registration of the meter from the time the marked current is switched on to the main circuit to the time at which the rate of registration becomes constant at that current shall not exceed 0·3 per cent. at unity power factor and 0·5 per cent. at 0·5 power factor (lagging). The total errors in the rate of registration shall not exceed those set out in the preceding paragraph headed "(a) Limits of Error."

(f) Variation due to Heating by Voltage Circuit.

The change in the rate of registration of the meter from the time the marked voltage is switched on to the voltage circuit to the time at which the rate of registration becomes constant at that voltage shall not exceed 0·75 per cent. at any load from one and one quarter times full load to one quarter of full load at unity power factor.

If the meter is marked for a range of voltage, the requirements of this paragraph shall apply to the highest voltage in the range.

(g) Variation of Frequency.

A variation of 5 per cent. above or below the marked frequency shall not cause a change in the rate of registration of more than 0·5 per cent. at unity power factor and 1·0 per cent. at 0·5 power factor (lagging).

(h) Non-Registration with Current alone.

A meter shall not register with its voltage circuit open when the marked current is flowing in the main circuit.

(i) Registering Mechanism.

(i) Meters intended for long-period "dial tests" shall be fitted with registering mechanisms complying with Clause 35 of British Standard Specification No. 37–1930, except that the three dials of highest denominations may be omitted.

(ii) Meters intended for tests other than long-period "dial tests" shall be provided with registering mechanisms of the pointer type, and sufficient dials shall be provided to indicate at least 50 revolutions of the rotor. The last dial shall be divided into 100 parts and its diameter and the rotational speed of the pointer shall jointly be so proportioned that at full load at unity power factor, the pointer tip shall traverse the scale at a speed of not less than 100 inches per minute. A divided meter disc complying with these requirements will be acceptable in lieu of the last dial above referred to.

(j) Instability of Errors.

Meters shall not exhibit any instability exceeding 0·2 per cent. at any load between one and one quarter times full load and one quarter of full load when the testing conditions are maintained constant.

(k) General.

A meter shall comply in all other respects with the requirements of British Standard Specification No. 37—1930 as far as they apply to meters of the "Substandard Grade," except that meters having a marked current of one ampere may be approved.

(l) Polyphase Rotating Meters.

Substandard Polyphase Rotating Meters shall comply with the preceding requirements as far as they are applicable.

[NOTE.—It is laid down in Appendix B in connection with the testing of meters that the load on a Substandard Rotating Meter shall not be less than one quarter of its full load. In these circumstances, it is not intended in the generality of cases to require that Substandard Rotating Meters of the small current rating of one ampere (see paragraph (k) above) should comply with the limits of error specified in paragraph (a) above at loads below 10 per cent. of the marked current (i.e. below 0·1 ampere).]

4.—SPECIFICATION FOR CURRENT TRANSFORMERS.

The corrections on alternating current at the declared frequency and on direct current shall not differ by more than 0·3 per cent. The correction on direct current shall be taken as the mean of two values obtained with opposite polarities.

(d) General.

Alternating current voltmeters shall comply in all other respects with British Standard Specification No. 89-1929 for Substandard Voltmeters.

6.—SPECIFICATION FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT CIRCUIT CONTROL APPARATUS.

The circuit control apparatus for use in connection with the testing of alternating current meters shall be such that the peak factor of the voltage wave form of the main supply is not varied by more than 3 per cent.

[NOTE.—Apart from this requirement in respect of Alternating Current Circuit Control Apparatus, it is not proposed to lay down a definite specification for the control apparatus to be used in Testing Stations. It is expected, however, that the control apparatus will be such as to give suitable regulation for the Method of Testing adopted at the Station, and the Meter Examiners will be required to satisfy themselves on this point.]

7.—SPECIFICATION FOR SUBSTANDARD DIRECT CURRENT AMMETERS AND VOLTMETERS.

(a) Type.

Direct Current Ammeters and Voltmeters may be of any type but shall have scales not less than 5 inches long, knife-edged pointers and anti-parallax mirrors, and shall comply with the limits of error specified in British Standard Specification No. 89-1929 for sub-standard-grade permanent-magnet moving-coil instruments.

(b) Level Error.

The change of correction due to a variation of 1 degree from the level position in any direction shall not exceed 0·15 per cent. of full scale reading. Any change of zero due to the variation of level shall be corrected before each test is made.

(c) Stray Field Error.

The change of correction due to a constant magnetic field of 1 C.G.S. unit having any direction relative to the instrument shall not exceed 0·5 per cent. at the full scale point.

(d) Self-heating Error.

(f) Mechanical Defects.

Instruments shall be free from mechanical imperfections such, for example, as bent or unduly thick pointers or unduly stiff zero-adjusters.

(g) Instability of Corrections.

Instruments shall not exhibit any instability exceeding 0·1 per cent. of full scale reading when the testing conditions are maintained constant.

(h) General.

Instruments shall comply in all other respects with British Standard Specification No. 89-1929 for Substandard-grade instruments except that the voltage drop on ammeter shunts for full scale reading may have any value.

8.—SPECIFICATION FOR SUBSTANDARD ELECTROLYTIC AMPERE-HOUR METERS.

Substandard Electrolytic Ampere-hour Meters shall be of the mercury-deposition type. Maximum reading shall be obtained in less than 250 hours at rated current. The scale shall be readable to an accuracy of 0·3 per cent. of full scale. The error of the meter at any scale point between half-scale and full-scale shall not exceed 0·5 per cent. when determined at any current between one-quarter of rated current and full rated current. ELECTRICITY SUPPLY (METERS) ACT, 1936.

Electricity Commission,
Savoy Court,
Strand,
London, W.C.2.

June, 1937.

The accompanying Explanatory Memorandum has been prepared by the Electricity Commissioners for the information and assistance of Authorised Undertakers and others who are concerned with the examination, testing and regulating of electricity meters with a view to the certification thereof under the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (a).

The Memorandum refers to the provisions of the Approval issued by the Electricity Commissioners on June 4th, 1937, embodying particulars of the Standard and Sub-standard Apparatus for use in Meter Testing Stations, and to the general procedure contemplated by the Electricity Commissioners in connection with the testing and certification of meters.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM CONCERNING THE TESTING OF ELECTRICITY METERS; THE APPARATUS APPROVED FOR USE IN METER TESTING STATIONS; AND THE PROCEDURE CONTEMPLATED BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS IN CONNECTION WITH THE CERTIFICATION OF ELECTRICITY METERS UNDER THE ELECTRICITY SUPPLY (METERS) ACT, 1936.

1. By Section 1 of the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1936"), Meter Examiners appointed by the Electricity Commissioners under the Act of 1936 are charged with the examination and certifying of meters used or intended to be used in connection with the supply of electricity by authorised undertakers. The Section provides that the Meter Examiners shall comply with any Directions given by the Electricity Commissioners as to the exercise and performance of their powers and duties.

2. The principal provisions concerned with the examination and certification of meters and with the settlement of disputes as to the correctness of meters are those contained in Sections 49 to 51 and Section 57 of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899 (or corresponding provisions in Acts or Orders which do not incorporate the said Schedule), as amended by subsequent Acts (hereinafter referred to as "the Schedule").

3. By Section 49 of the Schedule, which relates to the ascertainment of the value of the supply by means of an appropriate meter, the expression "value of the supply" is defined as meaning the amount of energy supplied by the undertakers to any ordinary consumer or the electrical quantity contained in the supply (according to the method by which the undertakers elect to charge). The expression appears to be intended to connote the electrical (and not the financial) value of the supply according to whether the supply is measured as energy (kilowatt hours), or as quantity (ampere hours) at a declared constant voltage. Similarly, Sections 50, 51 and 57 of the Schedule are also concerned with meters for ascertaining the "value of the supply," that is to say, with the ascertainment of the amount of electrical energy or the quantity of electricity supplied to ordinary consumers.

4. These provisions are not extended to the supply of electricity to particular consumers under special agreements who, as a class, are distinguished from ordinary consumers in the definition of the expression "general supply" in Section 1 of the Schedule. Supplies to particular consumers often involve special metering equipment, sometimes embodied in switchgear; and the special agreements generally contain clauses dealing with the provision of meters and with the settlement of any disputes as to the accuracy thereof.

5. Prior to the passing of the Act of 1936, the powers and duties connected with the examination and certification of meters and the settlement of disputes as to the correctness of meters were exerciseable by Electric Inspectors appointed under the individual Acts or Orders of authorised undertakers. The power of appointment rested initially with the individual local authorities for each district in an area of supply where they were not the undertakers. Where an Electric Inspector was not appointed by the local authority, or where the local authority were themselves the undertakers, an Electric Inspector could be appointed by the Electricity Commissioners but only on the application of a consumer or of the undertakers.

(a) 29 Halsbury's Statutes 133.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

6. The Act of 1936 provides that the powers and duties referred to in the preceding paragraph shall be exercised by Meter Examiners appointed by the Electricity Commissioners under that Act instead of by Electric Inspectors, except that in the case of the Administrative County of London the settlement of disputes as to the correctness of meters remains the duty of Electric Inspectors appointed under the provisions of the Acts or Orders of the undertakers concerned. In effect, the Act of 1936 repeals the powers formerly possessed by local authorities (not being undertakers) of appointing Electric Inspectors for the examination and certification of meters, subject to the preceding qualification as regards the Administrative County of London.

7. With regard to the certification of meters, in virtue of Section 50 of the Schedule an electricity meter is considered "duly certified" if it is certified by a Meter Examiner appointed under the Act of 1936 to be—

(a) capable of ascertaining the value of the supply within such limits of error as may (as respects meters of the class to which the meter belongs) be allowed by the Electricity Commissioners; and

(b) of a construction and pattern approved by the Electricity Commissioners (or by the Board of Trade prior to 1920).

8. It will be observed that in so far as the statutory duties of Meter Examiners in connection with the certification of meters are concerned with the accuracy of a meter, they are confined to the question whether the meter is capable of ascertaining the value of the supply within certain limits of error. Such duties do not extend to an examination or certification of the accuracy of any attachments for other purposes, such as prepayment mechanism or two-part tariff attachments associated with a meter.

9. The limits of error at present allowed by the Electricity Commissioners are the same as those which were prescribed by the Board of Trade in 1913, and have been continued in force by the Electricity Commissioners since their appointment in 1920. These limits of error relate to direct current meters and to single-phase alternating current meters. The Electricity Commissioners have under consideration the question of modifying the present limits of error and of prescribing new limits covering all types of meters, including polyphase meters. A separate communication will be addressed to all authorised undertakers on this matter in due course.

10. A schedule of meters of constructions and patterns which were being manufactured at the end of 1936, or which had been manufactured at any time during the ten years up to that date, and have been approved under the Electricity (Supply) Acts has already been circulated by the Electricity Commissioners to all authorised undertakers. In addition, there are in use meters of types which were approved in earlier years but are no longer manufactured; while further constructions and patterns have been approved since the end of 1936.

11. Meters (whether already in use or new) of constructions and patterns which have not hitherto been approved should not be submitted to Meter Examiners for certification unless and until the construction and pattern has been approved under the Electricity (Supply) Acts. The Electricity Commissioners understand that manufacturers of various existing types of meters which have not hitherto been approved or of types which have been modified subsequent to an approval are taking steps in cases where they consider it warranted to submit specifications, drawings and pattern meters to the National Physical Laboratory for examination and test with a view to making application for an approval under the Electricity (Supply) Acts.

12. By Section 2 of the Act of 1936 and subject to the qualifications therein, it is the duty of authorised undertakers to provide and maintain in proper condition such suitable apparatus as may be prescribed or approved by the Electricity Commissioners for the examination, testing and regulating of meters used or intended to be used in connection with the supply of electricity, and to afford to Meter Examiners all necessary facilities for the use of the said apparatus for the purpose of the exercise and performance of their powers and duties in relation to such meters.

13. By reason of the qualifications in Section 2 of the Act of 1936, it is not made obligatory upon every authorised undertaker to provide suitable apparatus for the testing of meters. For example, the Act enables voluntary arrangements to be made with the approval of the Electricity Commissioners for the provision of such apparatus and for the examination, testing and regulating of meters by one authorised undertaker on behalf of others; and also empowers the Electricity Commissioners to require such arrangements to be made between authorised undertakers on such terms and conditions as may, in default of agreement, be settled by them.

14. Particulars of the apparatus approved by the Electricity Commissioners as Standard and Substandard Apparatus for use in Meter Testing Stations for the purposes of Section 2 of the Act of 1936, are set out in an Approval dated June 4th, 1937. The details of the Approval were settled by the Electricity Commissioners after consultation with representatives of the Electricity Supply Associations and of Manufacturers of apparatus of the kinds involved.

15. The Approval specifies the requirements as to construction and performance with which all Standard and Substandard Apparatus acquired after June 1st, 1937 (referred to as " new apparatus "), must comply to secure approval. The Approval does not embody a definite specification of requirements as to the construction and performance of existing apparatus contained in Testing Stations on June 1st, 1937, but due regard will be had to the specified requirements for new apparatus before existing apparatus can secure approval (see paragraph 6 (a) of the Approval).

16. The Approval is so worded that it is not made compulsory for every Testing Station to be provided with the whole of the approved Standard and Substandard Apparatus, or to carry out the retesting of the whole or any portion of its own Substandard Apparatus (see paragraphs 3 and 7 of the Approval). For example, the provision of a Standard Direct Current Potentiometer is optional, although such apparatus will require to be provided in the larger Testing Stations which undertake the periodical retesting of their own Substandard Apparatus and possibly that belonging to smaller neighbouring testing stations where arrangements to that effect are made.

17. The type and number of Substandard instruments required in a particular Testing Station will depend upon the methods of meter testing adopted in the Station (see paragraph 21 below), and also upon the types and numbers of meters to be dealt with; but in every case a Testing Station will require to be provided with at least one suitable Substandard Voltmeter. Additional instruments used for rough adjustments of loads do not require approval.

18. The Approval also provides that existing apparatus contained in Testing Stations on June 1st, 1937, and new apparatus may be brought into use as Standard or Substandard Apparatus for meter testing purposes on a temporary or continuing basis if approved by the Electricity Commissioners after the observance of certain procedure (see paragraphs 4 and 6 of the Approval). With regard to existing apparatus which may not comply in all respects with the requirements as to performance laid down for new apparatus but may nevertheless be considered suitable for use for the time being on a continuing basis, the Electricity Commissioners contemplate that their approval in such cases will be for a limited period such as five years.

19. Provision is made in the Approval whereby it is open to the Electricity Commissioners to prescribe or approve a modified or other specification of requirements in respect of Standard or Substandard Apparatus either generally or in individual cases (see paragraph 9 of the Approval).

20. The Meter Examiners will be directed to satisfy themselves from time to time that the apparatus in Testing Stations is properly maintained and in proper functioning order, and for this purpose they may make such check tests as they may consider necessary. It will not form part of the statutory duties of Meter Examiners to carry out any of the periodical retestings prescribed in paragraph 7 of the Approval.

21. The Approval sets out the methods of meter testing and the actual meter tests for the time being approved by the Electricity Commissioners for the purposes of the certification of meters by Meter Examiners (see Appendix "B" to the Approval). The Electricity Commissioners may in appropriate cases modify the methods of testing or actual tests for the time being approved or may approve other methods and tests, such for example as the separate testing of meters and their transformers or shunts. This may or may not involve a modified Approval in respect of apparatus.

22. The general procedure contemplated by the Electricity Commissioners with regard to the testing of meters at the various Testing Stations by or on behalf of authorised undertakers and the subsequent certification of the meters by Meter Examiners is as follows:—

(i) The meters will be tested at the Testing Stations in accordance with the aforesaid approved methods of meter testing, or such modifications thereof as may be allowed in particular cases.

(ii) The meters when tested and before being eligible for certification will require to be duly sealed by or on behalf of the undertakers in a manner approved by the Electricity Commissioners. The question of an approved form of Seal or manner of sealing is under consideration and a communication on this matter will be sent to all authorised undertakers in due course.

(iii) Particulars of each meter and the results of the tests set out in a form approved by the Electricity Commissioners will then require to be submitted to the Meter Examiners for examination (see paragraph 23 below).

(iv) If and when a Meter Examiner is satisfied (a) as the result of such examination and after such tests as he may deem necessary or as he may be directed by the Electricity Commissioners to make, that the meters have passed the tests for the time being in force in relation to the Testing Station; (b) that the meters are duly sealed; and (c) that the meters comply with the two requirements previously mentioned (see paragraph 7 above), the Meter Examiner will be entitled to certify the meters. The certificate will be given in a form prescribed by the Electricity Commissioners.

23. Specimen copies of the Forms for the time being approved by the Electricity Commissioners in which the description of a meter and particulars of the tests thereon made at the Testing Station by or on behalf of the undertakers are to be submitted to Meter Examiners with a view to certification of the meter, are in course of preparation and will be circulated to all authorised undertakers. The Electricity Commissioners wish to emphasise the necessity for uniformity in the style and size of the Forms and desire all undertakers to adopt Forms strictly in accord with the specimens.

ELECTRICITY COMMISSION.

ELECTRICITY SUPPLY (METERS) ACT, 1936.

SUPPLEMENTARY NOTES IN AMPLIFICATION OF THE EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM CONCERNING THE TESTING OF ELECTRICITY METERS, ETC., ISSUED BY THE ELECTRICITY COMMISSIONERS IN JUNE, 1937, AND FORWARDED TO ALL AUTHORISED UNDERTAKERS WITH A COVERING LETTER DATED JUNE 10TH, 1937.

(i) Limits of Error.

1. With regard to paragraph 9 of the Explanatory Memorandum, the Electricity Commissioners have, in consultation with representatives of the principal Supply Associations and Meter Manufacturers, brought under review the permissible limits of error for the various kinds of D.C. and A.C. meters—both old and new—including prepayment and polyphase meters; and for the varying conditions of temperature and possible loading in excess of the marked current under which they may operate when in actual service.

2. The new prescribed limits namely an error not exceeding 2½ per cent. plus or 3½ per cent. minus at any load at which the meter may be operatihg have been fixed with due regard to these matters and are applicable to all meters submitted for certification without requiring any compensating allowances for varying conditions.

(ii) Constructions and Patterns of Meters.

3. With regard to paragraphs 10 and 11 of the Explanatory Memorandum, the Electricity Commissioners have had under consideration the question whether or not their approval could be given to the construction and pattern of certain specific types of meters which are not at present approved.

4. Under the provisions of Section 3 of the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (a), meters installed prior to the appointed day, to be fixed for the purposes of that Act, are deemed for all purposes to be proper meters for ascertaining the value of supplies until first disconnected and removed after the beginning of the appointed day or at the expiration of 10 years from the beginning of that day whichever first occurs.

5. With a view to enabling any authorised undertakers concerned to make suitable arrangements in due course for replacing by meters of an approved type any existing meters which will not become approved types, the following particulars indicate the types of meters which the Electricity Commissioners are not prepared to approve.

(a) Commutator Ampere-hour and Watthour Meters.

The Electricity Commissioners are advised that these meters though theoretically sound in principle would in the majority of cases not be able to comply with the tests specified in British Standards Specification No. 37. The Electricity Commissioners will not be prepared to consider these types of meter for approval either as regards existing meters or meters for future manufacture unless they can comply with the said tests laid down by B.S.S. No. 37.

(b) Single phase meters with two current windings for single phase three-wire circuits.

(c) Single phase meters with two current windings for three phase three-wire circuits.

The Electricity Commissioners are advised that meters of these types are unsound in principle, and they are not prepared to approve the types either as regards existing meters or meters for future manufacture.

(d) Double Circuit or "power and light" meters.

The Electricity Commissioners are advised that meters of this type which do not record the actual number of units consumed under all conditions, are not capable of ascertaining the value of the supply within the meaning of Section 49 of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899. It would not therefore be competent for such meters to be certified by a Meter Examiner. The Electricity Commissioners are accordingly not prepared to consider this type of meter for approval either as regards existing meters or meters for future manufacture.

(e) Two element three-phase four wire meters.

The Electricity Commissioners are prepared to consider giving approval to this type of meter as regards existing meters but not for future manufacture.

(f) Non-standard connections and other details.

The Electricity Commissioners are not prepared to approve for future manufacture types of meters with non-standard connections. They would be prepared however, to consider for approval types of meters which are sound in principle and of good performance, although differing from British Standards Specification No. 37 in regard to other constructional details of a minor character.

(iii) Standard and Substandard Apparatus.

6. In paragraph 18 of the Explanatory Memorandum, reference was made to the procedure laid down in the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937, for the bringing into use on a temporary or continuing basis of Standard and Substandard Apparatus for meter testing purposes. In accordance with the requirements of Paragraph 6 of the Approval, many instruments have already been submitted to the

(a) 29 Halsbury's Statutes 133.

National Physical Laboratory for examination and for report to the Electricity Commissioners.

7. As a result of consideration of such Reports the Electricity Commissioners consider it desirable to draw attention to the necessity for care in the handling and operation of such instruments and in avoiding their use or storage in unsuitable (e.g. damp) conditions.

8. It is anticipated that instruments of the non-shielded type may be submitted for examination and report. As these instruments are liable to errors due to stray fields, the Electricity Commissioners may find it necessary when deciding to approve any such instrument for use on a continuing basis to attach qualifying conditions.

9. With regard to Standard Direct Current Potentiometers, the Electricity Commissioners appreciate that it may be difficult in certain circumstances to obtain accurate results by the use of a single potentiometer for the periodical testing of Substandard Indicating Wattmeters as prescribed in paragraph 7 of the Approval of Apparatus. For such testing, the Electricity Commissioners have decided to allow as from the date of these Supplementary Notes of the use of a substandard voltmeter with a twelve-inch scale in conjunction with a potentiometer. The necessary addition will be incorporated in the next reprint of the Approval of Apparatus.

10. With regard to the procedure laid down in the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937, for the bringing into use on a temporary basis of Standard and Substandard Apparatus, application for approval to the use of such apparatus on a temporary basis should be made on forms which have been issued by the Electricity Commissioners. The forms should be completed in duplicate and should be forwarded to the Electricity Commissioners as soon as possible.

11. It will be appreciated that any apparatus in respect of which a certificate of approval is issued either under paragraph 4 or 6 of the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937, will thereupon become subject to the requirements of paragraph 7 of the said Approval with regard to the periodical re-testing of standard and substandard apparatus.

(iv) Methods of Meter Testing: Actual Tests.

12. With regard to paragraph 21 of the Explanatory Memorandum, it has been necessary to make certain amendments in the Methods of Testing and Actual Tests set out in Appendix "B" to the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937, partly as a consequence of the simplified form of the new prescribed limits of error, and of the omission therefrom of any specific reference to percentages or fractions of the marked current. Such fractions were referred to in the former limits of error.

13. The necessary amendments will be incorporated in the next reprint of the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937; but in the meanwhile the Electricity Commissioners have approved as from the date of these Supplementary Notes of the following alterations on pages 14 and 15 of the Approval of Apparatus, namely:—

(i) Method C.

In place of paragraph (b) substitute the following amplified paragraph:—

(b) One long-period dial test.

In the case of alternating current meters—to be made in accordance with and of a duration not less than that prescribed under Method A.

In the case of direct current motor meters—to be of a duration not less than that prescribed under Method A.

(ii) Actual Tests.

In place of paragraphs 1 (a) and 1 (c) on pages 14 and 15, substitute the following paragraphs:—

(a) At 5 per cent. of its marked current, or in the case of a direct current meter having a marked current of less than 10 amperes, at 10 per cent. of its marked current.

(c) At 100 per cent. of its marked current, or in the case of an alternating current meter, at 100 or 125 per cent. of its marked current.

14. Attention is drawn to the requirement prescribed in paragraph (a) of Method C of the Methods of Testing, namely, that the load on any Substandard instrument is to be such as to give a reading of not less than 40 per cent. of its full scale reading. This requirement applies irrespective of the length of the scale of the Substandard instrument.

15. In connection with the actual tests of each meter to be carried out and recorded by authorised undertakers, allowance must necessarily be made for some margin in repeating particular tests. Having regard to the new prescribed limits of error the Electricity Commissioners would not expect meters to be submitted for certification if their recorded error as ascertained in the Testing Station is in excess of 2 per cent. plus or 3 per cent. minus.

(v) Sealing of Meters.

16. With regard to paragraph 22 (ii) of the Explanatory Memorandum, the Electricity Commissioners have in contemplation that the sealing of meters will be undertaken by the Meter Examiners at the time of certification, but the arrangements in that behalf are not yet finally settled. The question of the provision of a special seal for use by the authorised undertakers in cases where mechanical adjustments have to be made to prepayment meters whilst on circuit is also under consideration. A further communication will be addressed to all authorised undertakers on these matters in due course.

(vi) Forms for Meter Tests.

17. With regard to paragraphs 22 (iii) and 23 of the Explanatory Memorandum, it will be necessary for all authorised undertakers to make the necessary arrangements for the printing of their own Forms. Separate Forms will require to be provided for the different classes of meters, in accordance with the Specimen Forms issued by the Electricity Commissioners.

18. It is also essential that the Forms to be submitted to the Meter Examiners in connection with the certification of meters should conform in all respects with the Specimen Forms not only as regards size of sheet style and details of printing and number of meters to be recorded on each Form but also as regards the colours for the different Forms and the position and distance apart of the perforations for filing purposes. The co-operation of all undertakers is specially requested in this matter.

19. The Forms will require to be completed in duplicate for submission to the Meter Examiners. One completed copy of each Form will be subsequently retained by the Testing Station when signed by the Meter Examiner as evidence of certification. The other completed copy will be retained by the Meter Examiner and transmitted to the Electricity Commissioners for the purposes of record and for use in levying the fees chargeable.

20. It is necessary that each Testing Station should number its Forms (after completion) consecutively, irrespective of the type or types of Forms which may be submitted to the Meter Examiner at any one time (except as indicated below). The numbering of the Forms would continue throughout the year until December 31st, and then be recommenced on January 1st for the succeeding year.

21. The special Form coloured pink recording the mechanical adjustments made to prepayment meters on circuit should be consecutively numbered separately from the other Forms and for the same period (January 1st to December 31st).

22. With regard to the completion of the Forms at the Testing Station it should be noted—

(i) that the Serial Number of the meter of which particulars are given should be the maker's number. There would be no objection, however, to the inclusion in the Form of any additional number which the undertakers may have assigned to the meter for their own purposes.

(ii) that the headings of certain columns make provision for the insertion at the Testing Station of the percentage of the marked current at which the various tests are made. (See paragraph 13 above.)

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

(vii) Certification of Meters.

23. It is necessary to ensure that when the appointed day is fixed for the purposes of the Act, the organisation for the testing and certification of meters is already in effective operation throughout the Country so that undertakers will be in possession of stocks of certified meters and thus in a position to comply with the provisions of the Act without inconvenience to themselves or to prospective consumers.

24. The Electricity Commissioners have discussed and agreed with the principal Supply Associations that, with the above ends in view, the Meter Examiners should commence the actual certification of meters prior to the appointed day, involving the payment by authorised undertakers of such certification fees as may be prescribed under Section 1 of the Act.

25. In the general interests it is desirable that all necessary steps should be taken to enable certification to be started as soon as possible and the Electricity Commissioners accordingly ask for the fullest co-operation of all authorised undertakers in bringing into practical operation the provisions of the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act.

Electricity Commission.

S. R. & O., 1938, No. 484.

THE ELECTRICITY SUPPLY (METERS) ACT, 1936 (APPOINTED DAY) ORDER, 1938. DATED APRIL 20TH, 1938.

Whereas by Subsection (1) of Section 1 of the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (a), it is, inter alia, enacted that not later than the appointed day the Electricity Commissioners shall appoint and thereafter keep appointed a sufficient number of competent and impartial persons as meter examiners.

And whereas by Section 4 of the said Act "the appointed day" means such day as the Minister of Transport may by order appoint.

Now therefore the Minister of Transport in exercise of the powers so conferred upon him and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf hereby orders as follows:—

1. The appointed day for the purposes of Subsection (1) of Section 1 of the said Act shall be the first day of July, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-Eight.

2. The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies for the purpose of the interpretation of this Order as it applies for the purpose of the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

3. This Order may be cited as "The Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (Appointed Day) Order, 1938."

Given under the Seal of the Minister of Transport this twentieth day of April, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-Eight.

THE ELECTRICITY SUPPLY (METERS) ACT, 1936 (APPOINTED DAY) ORDER (NO. 2), 1938. DATED MAY 2ND, 1938.

Whereas by the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (Appointed Day) Order, 1938 (b), it is ordered that the appointed day for the purposes of subsection (1) of

(a) 29 Halsbury's Statutes 133.
(a) S. R. & O., 1938, No. 484, supra.

Section 1 of the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (a), shall be the first day of July, 1938, and it is desirable that the same day should also be appointed for the purpose of ascertaining the meters to which Section 3 of the said Act applies.

Now, therefore, the Minister of Transport in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the said Act and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf hereby orders as follows:—

1. The first day of July, 1938, shall be the appointed day for the purposes of sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the said Act, as well as for the purposes of sub-section (1) of Section 1 of that Act.

2. The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies for the purpose of the interpretation of this Order as it applies for the purpose of the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

3. This Order may be cited as "The Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (Appointed Day) Order (No. 2) 1938," and this Order and the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (Appointed Day) Order, 1938, may together be cited as "The Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (Appointed Day) Orders, 1938."

Given under the Seal of the Minister of Transport this second day of May, One thousand nine hundred and thirty-eight.

ELECTRICITY SUPPLY (METERS) ACT, 1936.

FURTHER EXPLANATORY NOTES CONCERNING THE TESTING AND CERTIFICATION OF ELECTRICITY METERS, ETC.

Appointed Day.

1. The Minister of Transport has fixed July 1st, 1938, as the Appointed Day for the purposes of the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936 (a).

Obligations of Undertakers.

2. The attention of all Undertakers is drawn to the fact that the transitional provisions of Section 3 of the Act of 1936 which apply to all meters (other than certified meters or meters which are the subject of special agreements with consumers) installed on the premises of a consumer before the appointed day (in this paragraph referred to as existing meters), will not apply to meters installed after the beginning of that day, including any existing meters which are disconnected and removed after that day and subsequently reused. All meters (other than meters which are the subject of special agreements) installed on the premises of ordinary consumers after the appointed day should therefore be certified.

3. By the appointed day it is therefore essential that all Undertakers should have made provision for the examination testing and regulating of meters in accordance with subsection (1) of Section 2 of the Act of 1936, or alternatively, should have come to an arrangement (approved by the Electricity Commissioners) with some other Undertakers or person under subsection (2) of Section 2. Any Undertakers who have not yet completed such provision or arrangement should at once get in touch with the Area Meter Examiner (b).

4. The attention of those Undertakers who have not yet submitted meters for certification on a voluntary basis is directed to paragraphs 23 to 25 of the Supplementary Notes dated September 14th, 1937, and to paragraphs 1 to 4 of the Further Notes dated December, 1937.

(a) 29 Halsbury's Statutes 133.
(b) See letter of December 7th, 1939, post, p. 2788.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

5. Furthermore, such Undertakers should take the earliest possible steps to bring their meter testing apparatus and organisation into full use so as to gain experience and enable any practical and technical difficulties which may be found to arise to be overcome and thus ensure that testing up to certification stage is working smoothly and efficiently to the Undertakers full requirements.

6. In this connection the Electricity Commissioners wish to emphasise that the provision of standard and sub-standard instruments and accessories in accordance with the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937, is not in itself sufficient to ensure a high standard of accuracy in testing and consistent results. Control apparatus and sundry equipment should be designed for the particular purpose of meter testing and should be of a first class standard of manufacture. The employment of efficient and fully trained personnel is essential and those engaged on the periodical calibration and checking of sub-standard apparatus should be specially selected for their proficiency in testing.

7. Experience shows that greater care is necessary in recording particulars on the certification forms and that closer attention should be paid to submitting meters which are at least 0·5 per cent. within the percentage limits of error allowed, for the reasons given in paragraph 15 of the Supplementary Notes dated September 14th, 1937. Inattention to these matters has resulted in the avoidable rejection of meters which have been submitted for certification. It would also appear that some Undertakers may find it necessary to devote more time and care than they have hitherto done in re-conditioning meters taken off circuit if such meters are to be brought to the standard required for certification.

8. As it will not be practicable for all undertakings or testing stations to be visited by a Meter Examiner on the appointed day for the purpose of certifying the meters which the Undertakers will require for installation on consumers premises on and after the appointed day, the Undertakers should take the necessary steps to ensure that they are in a position to submit meters for certification in adequate time before the appointed day in order that stocks of certified meters may be available.

Approved Apparatus.

9. Before apparatus can be brought into use for the purpose of testing meters to be submitted for certification, such apparatus must have been approved either for use on a temporary basis under paragraph 4 of the Approval of Apparatus, etc., dated June 4th, 1937, or for use on a continuing basis under paragraph 6 of that Approval.

Sealing of Meters.

10. Attention is also drawn to paragraphs 8 to 14 of the Explanatory Notes dated December, 1937, in regard to the sealing of meters submitted for certification, and in particular to paragraph 11 concerning the notification to the Chief Meter Examiner of the name and status of the officer charged with responsibility for the custody, issue and use of the sealing instruments at a testing station, and paragraph 13 as to the requirement that the prescribed form of seal must be used after March 1st, 1938.

Fees.

11. As indicated by the Electricity Commissioners in their letter of December 8th, 1937, and in paragraph 15 of the Explanatory Notes dated December, 1937, they have prescribed that the fee for the examination and/or certification of meters shall for the time being and until further notice be 3*d.* (three pence) for each meter examined and/or certified.

12. In paragraph 16 of the said Explanatory Notes it was stated that during the period of voluntary certification prior to the appointed day a fee would not be charged for the re-certification of prepayment meters and electrolytic meters where necessitated by the breaking of their seals while on circuit for minor adjustments not affecting the electrical registration or for re-setting. The Electricity Commissioners have since decided not to prescribe a fee for the re-certification of such meters for a period of twelve months from the appointed day. The position will be further considered at the end of that period.

Electrolytic Meters.

13. It has been represented to the Electricity Commissioners that if electrolytic meters are sealed before certification, the seals will in the majority of cases require to be broken again for the purpose of fixing the meters on consumers' premises owing to the holes for the fixing screws being within the meter, and that it is necessary to reset such meters on installation in the consumers' premises. After consideration of certain suggestions which have been made, the Electricity Commissioners see no practical alternative but to require such meters to be sealed before certification and for a pink certification form to be completed for the purpose of re-certification when the seals of such meters are broken on installation in the consumers' premises.

Approved Constructions and Patterns of Meters.

14. As indicated in paragraph 7 of the Explanatory Notes issued in June, 1937, with the Approval of Apparatus, an electricity meter in order to be eligible for certification must be of a construction and pattern approved by the Electricity Commissioners (or by the Board of Trade prior to 1920).

15. In paragraph 5 of the Supplementary Notes dated September, 1937, it was pointed out that there were certain types of meters which the Electricity Commissioners were not prepared to approve. During the last few months the Electricity Commissioners have approved the pattern and construction of the majority of types of meter which are at present in use, including, on reconsideration, ampere-hour and watt-hour meters of the commutator type.

16. If Undertakers are in doubt as to whether any of the meters which they still use are of an approved pattern and construction they can obtain information on this point either from the Meter Examiners or by communicating direct with the particular manufacturer concerned. In many cases the Electricity Commissioners in approving a particular pattern of meter have limited such approval to existing meters and have not extended it to meters for future manufacture.

17. Furthermore in the case of ampere-hour and watt-hour meters of the commutator type, it has been the practice of the Electricity Commissioners to attach a further condition to their approvals to the effect that such meters shall cease to be of an approved pattern and construction (and therefore not eligible for certification) at the expiration of a period of ten years from the appointed day.

18. The Electricity Commissioners have received representations from certain Undertakers who have in use a large number of double coil meters (a type which has not hitherto been approved by the Electricity Commissioners) that hardship would be caused if such meters could not be submitted for certification and re-used even as single coil meters once they have been disconnected and removed from consumers' premises after the appointed day.

19. The Electricity Commissioners understand that it would be feasible for one of the coils to be cut out so that the meter could be used as a single coil meter directly registering kilowatt hours. After consideration of all the circumstances, the Electricity Commissioners are prepared to consider for approval modified meters which register kilowatt hours directly on the dials (but not meters involving the use of a multiplying factor to arrive at the number of kilowatt hours consumed). Any approval which may be given would, however, only apply to existing meters and not to meters for future manufacture. Meter manufacturers have been informed that if they desire to obtain approval of the Electricity Commissioners for this type of meter on the basis of a single coil meter they should communicate with the National Physical Laboratory accordingly.

20. Another question concerning meters which has been brought to the notice of the Electricity Commissioners is whether an approved type of meter ceases to be an approved type in cases where the manufacturers name-plate is covered or replaced by a plate bearing the name of another firm. The Electricity Commissioners feel that in future the practice of covering or replacing the manufacturer's name-plate should be discontinued, as the name of the makers to whom the approval has been given should be identifiable by the Meter Examiners in connection with any certification of a meter. They are advised, however, and are prepared to agree, that existing meters of an approved type continue to be so approved if they continue to bear the name of the manufacturer to whom the approval for that type was issued notwithstanding that the name is obscured by another plate, but provided that the obscuring plate may be easily removed for inspection of the inscription beneath. The Electricity Commissioners also understand that in certain cases Undertakers themselves fix name-plates, etc., to meters after purchase. In such cases care should be taken that this is done in such a manner as not to cause damage to the meter.

Standard and Substandard Apparatus.

21. In paragraph 9 of the Supplementary Notes of September 14th, 1937, the Electricity Commissioners indicated that for the periodical testing of substandard indicating wattmeters, the use of a substandard voltmeter with a 12-in. scale in conjunction with a potentiometer would be allowed; and a Specification for such voltmeters was included in the Further Notes dated December, 1937.

22. In this connection it was brought to the notice of the Electricity Commissioners that prior to the publication of that Specification, certain Undertakers had ordered substandard direct current voltmeters of the dynamometer (and not the moving coil) type. Where construction was too far advanced when the Specification was issued for the order to be cancelled, the Electricity Commissioners are prepared to consider such instruments for approval subject to their complying with the Specification in Appendix "A" hereto.

23. Representations have been made by the owners of certain testing stations that for the purpose of voltage measurement in the testing of substandard wattmeters they should be allowed to make use of existing potentiometers which do not comply in all respects with the Specification for Standard Apparatus. The Electricity Commissioners will be prepared to consider for approval re-conditioned potentiometers for this limited use subject to their complying with the Specification in Appendix "B" hereto and to the owners of the testing station complying with the Methods of Use prescribed in Appendix "C" hereto.

24. A "Voltage Standardiser" for use in conjunction with a standard potentiometer in the calibration of substandard watt-meters has recently been brought to the notice of the Electricity Commissioners, and a report with regard to this Instrument has been received from the National Physical Laboratory. The Electricity Commissioners will be prepared to consider such "Voltage Standardisers" for approval subject to their complying with the Specification set out in Appendix "D" hereto.

25. It is necessary to emphasise that both substandard potentiometers and substandard direct current (dynamometer and moving coil) voltmeters must be calibrated on each occasion immediately before use at the voltage for which they are to be used and held to that voltage during use.

Testing of Disputed Meters.

26. The Electricity Commissioners have had under consideration the procedure to be adopted in connection with the testing of disputed meters in cases where the Undertakers or consumers make application under Section 3 of the Act of 1936 or under Section 57 of the Schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899 (or corresponding provision in Acts or Orders) to have a dispute determined by a Meter Examiner. The matter has formed the subject of a preliminary discussion with representatives of the Supply Associations, but the Electricity Commissioners are not yet in a position to make a general announcement as to the methods of testing to be observed in such cases.

APPENDIX A.

SPECIFICATION FOR SPECIAL DIRECT CURRENT VOLTMETERS (DYNAMOMETER TYPE) FOR USE WITH POTENTIOMETERS.

The Voltmeter shall comply—

(i) with the Specification for Special Direct Current Voltmeters (Moving Coil Type) set out in the Schedule to the Explanatory Notes dated December, 1937, exclusive of Clause " (a) Type " thereof, and

(ii) with the following additional requirements, namely—

(a) Polarity Effect.

The instrument shall exhibit no change of correction due to reversal of polarity greater than 0·1 per cent. at the full scale point.

(b) Conditions of Use.

The Voltmeter shall be connected across the voltage supply to the wattmeters under test. At the commencement of any set of observations, the voltage shall be set to the required value by means of the Potentiometer. The reading of the Voltmeter shall then be observed. Throughout the remainder of the tests the voltage shall be held to that particular voltmeter reading. The Voltmeter shall not be disconnected or reversed without rechecking from the Potentiometer.

APPENDIX B.

SPECIFICATION FOR SUBSTANDARD POTENTIOMETER FOR D.C. VOLTAGE MEASUREMENT.

(a) Range.

The potentiometer shall have a range of at least 0 to 1·5 volts.

In the slide-wire type one division of the slide-wire shall correspond to 0·001 volt or less and shall have a length of not less than 2 millimetres. In the non-slide-wire type, one step of the lowest reading dial shall correspond to 0·0005 volt or less.

(b) Accuracy.

No section of the potentiometer shall depart from its nominal resistance at a temperature of 20° C. by an amount sufficient to cause an error exceeding 0·001 volt.

(c) Construction.

A rheostat or rheostats providing smooth and adequate adjustment of the potentiometer current shall be fitted.

A selector switch giving a choice of not less than two external circuits shall be fitted unless an independent section is provided for balancing against the standard cell.

(d) General.

A substandard potentiometer shall be used in conjunction with an approved standard cell and an approved voltage dividing resistance having such ranges that the voltage applied to the potentiometer terminals in any test is not less than 0·75 volt; and its use shall be limited to the maintenance of constant voltage on the voltage terminals of wattmeters during calibration.

If any exposed material used for insulating purposes is of a type which is adversely affected by light, a plate shall be fitted to the potentiometer embodying an instruction to the effect that the potentiometer is to be protected from light when not in use.

Ordinary black ebonite will be regarded as material of this type.

APPENDIX C.

METHOD OF USE OF AUXILIARY VOLTMETER OR SUBSTANDARD POTENTIOMETER IN CONJUNCTION WITH A STANDARD POTENTIOMETER.

(a) Calibration of wattmeter employing an auxiliary direct current voltmeter.

The voltmeter and an approved voltage dividing resistance shall be connected to the voltage terminals of the wattmeter. Prior to the calibration the voltage shall be set to the required value by means of the standard potentiometer one pair of circuit terminals of which are connected to the appropriate terminals of the voltage dividing resistance. The reading of the voltmeter under these conditions shall be observed and thereafter during the calibration the voltage shall be maintained at the value corresponding to this reading while the standard potentiometer is switched over to measure the current through the current coils of the wattmeter under test.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

(b) Calibration of wattmeter employing a substandard potentiometer.

An approved voltage dividing resistance shall be connected to the voltage terminals of the wattmeter. The substandard potentiometer and one pair of circuit terminals of the standard potentiometer shall be connected to the appropriate terminals of the voltage dividing resistance. Prior to the calibration the voltage shall be set to the required value by means of the standard potentiometer. The substandard potentiometer shall be balanced under these conditions and the reading observed. Thereafter during the calibration the voltage shall be maintained at the value corresponding to this reading while the standard potentiometer is switched over to measure the current through the current coils of the wattmeter under test.

APPENDIX D.

SPECIFICATION FOR "VOLTAGE STANDARDISER" FOR USE IN CONJUNCTION WITH STANDARD POTENTIOMETER.

The term "Voltage Standardiser" in this specification refers to a piece of apparatus the object of which is to enable the direct current voltage employed in the calibration of wattmeters to be maintained accurately at a known value. The "Voltage Standardiser" thus serves the same purpose as a standard potentiometer used with a voltage dividing resistance, but whereas the latter can normally be used at any voltage up to the highest rated voltage of the dividing resistance, the "Voltage Standardiser" can be used only at the relatively few fixed voltages for which it is designed.

(a) General.

The "Voltage Standardiser" may be either of the constant current or of the constant resistance type. In the constant current type the resistance shall be not less than 50 ohms per volt and not more than 100 ohms per volt. In the constant resistance type the current taken from the line on any range shall be not less than one milliampere and not more than 20 milliamperes.

(b) Standard Cell.

The "Voltage Standardiser" shall be used in conjunction with a standard cell having an electromotive force not less than 1·01815 international volts and not greater than 1·01835 international volts at a temperature of 20° C.

Neither of the two cells referred to in paragraph 1 (f) of Appendix A to the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937, shall be used for this purpose.

(c) Accuracy.

The error in the ratio of voltage division shall not exceed 0·02 per cent. at rated voltage on any range. In the absence of an adjustment to allow for variations in the electromotive force of the standard cell, it shall be assumed for the purpose of testing to this clause that the "Voltage Standardiser" will be used with a standard cell having an electromotive force of 1·01825 international volts.

(d) Construction.

Any exposed material used for insulating purposes shall be of a type which is not adversely affected by exposure to light. Ordinary black ebonite will not be regarded as suitable.

ELECTRICITY SUPPLY REGULATIONS, 1937.

Notification of Failures of Supply.

SIR,—The Electricity Commissioners have had under consideration the provisions of Regulation 21 (c) of the above-mentioned Regulations concerning the notification to them by authorised undertakers of failures of supply of such kind as may from time to time be required to be notified.

The present prescribed Form of Notice and also the nature of the failures of supply at present required to be notified are set out in Appendix B to the Explanatory Notes dated December, 1936, which were issued with the said Regulations.

It appeared to the Commissioners expedient that the existing requirements, namely, that undertakers should only notify complete failures of supply affecting the whole of their undertaking, should be extended and that undertakers should be required to notify certain other kinds of failure of supply. The matter formed the subject of discussion with representatives of the principal Electricity Supply Associations, and the Commissioners have given careful consideration to the various suggestions put forward as to the nature of the other kinds of failures which should be notified.

As a result, the Commissioners have decided, in pursuance of the provisions of Regulation 21 (c), to require for the time being the notification of failures of supply of the kinds specified in the Notes under the prescribed Form of Notice enclosed herewith, the Form of Notice itself being the same as that set out in Appendix B to the Explanatory Notes dated December, 1936.

The revised requirements apply to all undertakers and have effect as from April 1st, 1939.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER

ELECTRICITY SUPPLY (METERS) ACT, 1936.

SIR,—The Electricity Commissioners desire me to refer to the penultimate paragraph of their letter of August 25th (A.950/785/7) concerning the procedure to be adopted with regard to the certification of electricity meters under war emergency conditions.

As it is essential that these statutory obligations should be performed on the most economical basis, from the point of view of man power and other considerations, the Commissioners have decided that the testing and certification of all new meters (other than those already in the possession of undertakings) shall be undertaken in the Meter Manufacturers' own Testing Stations. This new arrangement will come into operation as and when each Meter Manufacturer intimates that he is in a position to undertake the testing of his meters for certification.

New meters already in the possession of undertakings, and meters on circuit brought in for repair and certification, will for an interim period continue as far as practicable to be dealt with as at present and the Meter Examiners will endeavour to visit testing stations as and when required on the general basis of their usual itineraries until it is seen how the situation develops.

Testing station owners will, however, appreciate the necessity for limiting travelling to a minimum and they are accordingly asked to keep in close touch with Meter Examiners and to inform them when sufficient meters are ready for certification, or whether projected visits could be postponed in cases where sufficient stocks of certified meters are in hand.

Owing to other demands on staff for various reasons it may not prove practicable to continue to operate all existing testing stations. Undertakers operating testing stations are therefore urged to explore the possibility of coming to an arrangement with another undertaker whose testing station is likely to continue in operation, for the testing and certification of meters taken off circuit.

Where testing station owners require meters to be certified as a matter of urgency and it is not practicable for a meter examiner to visit the testing station, the certificates (in duplicate) should be posted to the examiner. Provided the recorded tests show results within the prescribed limits of error, the meter examiner will have discretion to certify the meters; and the signed certificates will be returned to the testing station owners. This procedure must only be adopted in exceptional cases.

While duplicate certificate forms will continue to be made out by testing station owners, the present practice of forwarding one of the forms to Savoy Court will be discontinued. To facilitate the accounting arrangements in connection with the recovery of the certification fees, each meter examiner will at the conclusion of a visit to a testing station prepare a summarised statement of the number of meters examined and/or certified. This Summary Form will be signed by the meter examiner and by a responsible officer of the testing station.

In the exceptional cases where meters are certified by post, the meter examiner will not be in a position to obtain a signature by an officer of the testing station on the Summary Form, but will forward a copy of the summary to the owners of the testing station when returning the certificates.

With regard to the approval of testing apparatus in pursuance of Section 2 of the Electricity Supply (Meters) Act, 1936, and for the purposes of the Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937, all existing apparatus which has already been approved on a continuing or a temporary basis will continue to be so approved so long as it complies with the requirements specified in the said Approval of Apparatus dated June 4th, 1937.

New apparatus proposed to be used on a continuing basis must be submitted to the National Physical Laboratory for examination, in accordance with paragraph 6 of the Approval of Apparatus. If the owners receive a satisfactory certificate from the National Physical Laboratory the Commissioners will regard the apparatus covered by such certificate as approved by them from the date of the certificate, and a separate approval will not be issued by the Commissioners as hitherto.

This decision will also apply to apparatus which has already been submitted to the National Physical Laboratory for examination. Any such apparatus approved on the foregoing basis will continue to be so approved so long as it complies with the requirements specified in the Approval of Apparatus.

The position will be further reviewed as the situation develops and the Commissioners feel sure that they can rely on the co-operation of all testing station owners in carrying into effect these and any other emergency arrangements for meter certification which may be found to be necessary.

(2) An inspector of a local authority whose mark has been approved by the Minister shall not affix or impress the same to or on any part of the carcase of an animal slaughtered for the food of man unless he has inspected the whole carcase with the organs in position and such part has appeared to him to be free from disease, sound, wholesome and fit for the food of man.

HOUSING.

S. R. & O., 1919, No. 1429.

THE HOUSING TRUSTS (FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE) REGULATIONS, 1919. DATED OCTOBER 6TH, 1919 (a).

Whereas by sub-section (1) of section 19 of the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919, (b) it is enacted that where a housing trust as defined by that Act has submitted to the Local Government Board a scheme for the provision of houses for the working classes and the scheme is approved by the Board, then, if the scheme is carried out within such period after the passing of that Act as may be specified by the Board, with the consent of the Treasury, the Board may pay or undertake to pay out of moneys provided by Parliament such contributions towards the cost of carrying out the scheme as may be determined to be payable under regulations made by the Board, with the approval of the Treasury, subject to such conditions (including conditions as to audit of accounts by district auditors) as may be prescribed by those regulations;

And whereas by sub-section (2) of the said section it is enacted that the regulations shall provide that the amount of any annual payment to be made under the section shall be equivalent to thirty per centum of the annual loan charges which would have been payable in accordance with the regulations on the total capital expenditure incurred by the housing trust for the purposes of the scheme if the amount of that expenditure had been borrowed from the Public Works Loan Commissioners;

And whereas by section 40 of that Act the expression "housing trust" is defined as follows:—

> "The expression 'housing trust' means a corporation or body of persons which, by the terms of its constituent instrument, is required to devote the whole of its funds, including any surplus which may arise from its operations, to the provision of houses for persons the majority of whom are in fact members of the working classes, and to other purposes incidental thereto":

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, in pursuance of his powers under the recited enactments and under any other statutes in that behalf, hereby makes the following regulations:—

(a) See also the amending Regulations of 1920, 1921, and 1924, post, pp. 2853, 2857, 2858. See also as to the operation of these Regulations note (a) on p. 1821, ante.

(b) Printed ante, p. 1821.

HOUSING

ARTICLE I.—In these regulations, unless the contrary intention appears—

(a) The expression "the Minister" means the Minister of Health;

(b) The expression "the Act of 1919" means the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919;

(c) The expressions "housing trust" and "public utility society" have the same meaning as in the Act of 1919 (a);

(d) The expression "local authority" (b) means the local authority within the meaning of Part III. of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, for the district in which the houses are built or to be built by the housing trust.

ARTICLE II.—Subject to the provisions of these regulations and provided that these regulations are complied with:—

(1) An annual contribution out of moneys provided by Parliament (hereinafter referred to as "the Exchequer subsidy") may be made by the Minister towards the cost of carrying out a scheme submitted by a housing trust and approved by the Minister, and the amount of the Exchequer subsidy shall be calculated as herein-after provided.

(2) The amount of the Exchequer subsidy shall be [(c) the equivalent during the period ending on the thirty-first day of March, 1927, of fifty per cent. and thereafter of forty per cent. of the annual charges] and which would have been payable, in respect of interest and repayment of principal, on the capital expended by the trustees for the purpose of the approved scheme if that capital had been raised by way of a loan advanced by the Public Works Loan Commissioners, on the same terms as those granted for the time being to a public utility society for the like purposes:

Provided that the Minister may reduce the amount of the Exchequer subsidy in any case in which he is satisfied that the capital expenditure incurred by the trustees has been excessive.

(3) The Exchequer subsidy shall be payable in two half-yearly instalments or in such other manner as the Minister may think fit during the period of fifty years from the date on which the scheme is approved by the Minister, and for the purposes of sub-division (2) of this article that date shall be the date from which the annual charges therein referred to shall be deemed to become payable.

ARTICLE III.—(1) The Exchequer subsidy shall cease to be payable—

(a) [Revoked by amending regulations of July 21st, 1921, post, p. 2857.]

(b) in respect of any scheme or part of a scheme not carried into effect before the expiry of a period of three years from the passing of the Act of 1919, or such later date as the Minister may allow, regard being had to the supplies of labour and material available from time to time and all other local or general circumstances affecting the carrying into effect of the scheme.

(2) For the purposes of these regulations a scheme or part of a scheme shall be deemed to have been carried into effect when all the houses to be provided thereunder are let or available for letting.

ARTICLE IV.—(1) The scheme as submitted for approval, shall be accompanied by detailed plans, specifications, and estimates of the cost of the works.

(2) The carrying out of the works shall be subject to the supervision of the Minister, exercised either through his own officers or through the local authority.

ARTICLE V.—The capital expenditure in respect of which the annual charges referred to in Article II. (2) of these regulations shall be deemed to be payable shall not include any sum in respect of the professional charges to be paid by the trustees in excess of five per centum of the gross capital expenditure approved by the Minister.

(a) 13 Halsbury's Statutes 960.

(b) See now ss. 1 and 103 of the Housing Act, 1936, ante, pp. 1584 and 1711.

(c) Words substituted by Amending Regulations of January 2nd, 1924, post, p. 2858.

ARTICLE VI.—The rents to be charged for houses included in the scheme shall be subject to the approval of the Minister, and shall not be altered without the consent of the Minister.

ARTICLE VII.—The trustees shall not sell any land or houses included in the scheme, except with the consent of and subject to conditions laid down by the Minister.

ARTICLE VIII.—[The trustees shall permit any district auditor or other officer of the Minister at all reasonable times to have access to and inspect the books, deeds, documents and accounts of the trust] (a).

ARTICLE IX.—These regulations may be cited as "The Housing Trusts (Financial Assistance) Regulations, 1919," and shall, unless and until revoked or altered by the Minister, with the approval of the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, apply and have effect with respect to any scheme made by a housing trust and approved by the Minister in accordance with these regulations:

Provided that, in any case where a difficulty arises with regard to the application of these regulations, the Minister may, by Order, make such minor modification of these regulations as may be necessary, in regard to any particular scheme, for the purpose of giving effect to the intention of these regulations.

Government Board that the carrying out of any scheme approved by the Board for the provision of houses for persons in the employment of, or paid by, a county council, or a statutory committee thereof, has resulted or is likely to result in a loss, the Board shall, if the scheme is carried out within such period after the passing of that Act as may be specified by the Board with the consent of the Treasury, pay or undertake to pay to the county council, out of moneys provided by Parliament, such part of the loss as may be determined to be so payable under regulations made by the Board with the approval of the Treasury, subject to such conditions as may be prescribed by those regulations;

And whereas by sub-section (2) of the said section 7, as altered by section 4 of the Housing (Additional Powers) Act, 1919 (a), it is enacted that the regulations shall provide that the amount of any annual payment to be made under the section shall, in the case of a scheme for the provision of houses for persons in the employment of, or paid by, a county council, or a statutory committee thereof, be an amount equivalent during the period ending on the 31st day of March, 1927, to fifty per centum and thereafter to thirty per centum of the annual loan charges as calculated in accordance with the regulations on the total capital expenditure incurred by the county council for the purposes of the scheme:

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, in pursuance of his powers under the recited enactments and under any other statutes in that behalf, hereby makes the following regulations:—

ARTICLE I.—(1) These regulations may be cited as "The County Councils (Assisted Schemes for the Housing of Employees) Regulations, 1920."

(2) The County Councils (Assisted Schemes for the Housing of Employees) Regulations, 1919, are hereby revoked, without prejudice to any right, privilege or liability acquired, accrued or incurred thereunder.

ARTICLE II.—(1) In these regulations, unless the contrary intention appears:—

(a) The expression "the Minister" means the Minister of Health;

(b) The expression "the Act of 1919" means the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919; and

(c) The expression "county council" includes a statutory committee of a county council, the Lancashire Asylums Board, the West Riding of Yorkshire Asylums Board, and any other body constituted for the purpose of the administration of the Lunacy Acts on behalf of any combination of county councils and county borough councils.

(2) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of the regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

ARTICLE III.—Subject to the provisions of Article IV. of these regulations:—

(1) An annual contribution out of moneys provided by Parliament (hereinafter referred to as "the Exchequer subsidy") shall be made by the Minister towards the cost of carrying out a scheme submitted by a county council, and approved by the Minister, for the provision of houses for persons in the employment of, or paid by, the county council.

(2) The Exchequer subsidy shall be an amount equivalent during the period ending on the 31st day of March, 1927, to fifty per centum (b) [and thereafter to forty per centum of the annual charges] for interest and repayment of principal, in respect of the aggregate amount of the loans raised by the county council for the purposes of the approved scheme:

Provided that the Minister may reduce the amount of the Exchequer subsidy in any case in which he is satisfied that the capital expenditure incurred by the county council has been excessive.

(3) The Exchequer subsidy shall be payable in two half-yearly instalments or in such other manner as the Minister may think fit during the periods allowed for the repayment of the loans raised by the county council for the purposes of the approved scheme, and shall be reduced by the Minister so far as may be necessary as and when the period allowed for the repayment of any one of the said loans expires.

(4) For the purposes of this Article the annual charges in respect of the aggregate amount of the loans raised by the county council shall be ascertained by calculating the total amount which would be annually payable in respect of the several loans for principal and interest if the loans were repayable by equal annual instalments of principal and interest combined:

Provided that, save with the consent of the Minister, the rate of interest shall not for the purposes of this paragraph exceed the rate for the time being in force for loans advanced by the Public Works Loan Commissioners for the purposes of schemes to which section 7 of the Act of 1919 applies.

(5) The foregoing provisions of this Article shall apply to accumulated funds or capital moneys belonging to a county council and used by them for the purposes of an approved scheme as though such funds or moneys were loans, and for the purpose of the last preceding paragraph the rate of interest in respect of such funds or moneys shall be deemed to be—

(i) where moneys have been borrowed for the purposes of the scheme from sources other than funds or moneys belonging to the county council, the rate of interest payable in respect of the moneys last previously so borrowed; and

(ii) where no moneys have been borrowed for the purposes of the scheme from such sources as aforesaid, the rate in force for loans advanced by the Public Works Loan Commissioners for the purposes referred to in the last preceding paragraph at the date when the funds or moneys were so used.

ARTICLE IV.—(1) The Exchequer subsidy shall cease to be payable—

(a) in any case in which the Minister is not satisfied that reasonable progress has been made with the carrying into effect of the scheme within twelve months from the passing of the Act of 1919, or such later date as the Minister may allow, regard being had to the supplies of labour and material available from time to time and all other local or general circumstances affecting the carrying into effect of the scheme; and

(b) in respect of any scheme or part of a scheme not carried into effect before the expiry of a period of three years from the passing of the Act of 1919, or such later date as the Minister may allow, regard being had to the supplies of labour and material available from time to time and all other local or general circumstances affecting the carrying into effect of the scheme.

(2) For the purposes of these regulations a scheme or part of a scheme shall be deemed to have been carried into effect when all the houses to be provided thereunder are let or available for letting.

HOUSING ACTS.

GUARANTEES TO BUILDING SOCIETIES.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to invite the attention of local authorities to an arrangement recently concluded with the Building Societies'

(a) S. R. & O., 1919, No. 1429, ante, p. 2851.

(d) S. R. & O., 1920, No. 336, ante, p. 2853.

Association with regard to the guarantees which may be given by local authorities to building societies under section 5 (1) (b) of the Housing etc., Act, 1923, as amended by the Second Schedule to the Housing (Financial Provisions) Act, 1924, and applied to county councils by section 12 of the last-named Act (a). Many persons desiring to build houses for their own occupation are unable to find the difference between the cost of building and the loan which a building society will normally advance under its rules, and the object of the guarantee is to enable the building society to make an additional advance, and so help to bridge the gap. Such guarantees may be given both for houses for the working-classes which would qualify for subsidy assistance and also for houses of a larger type, provided that the local authority's valuation of the mortgagor's interest in the property does not exceed £1,500 (b). The houses for which guarantees may be given are new houses to be built either within or without the district of the local authority. The construction of the houses must not have been commenced before the 25th April, 1923.

The following is a summary of the arrangements which have been agreed between the Minister and the Building Societies' Association :—

(1) The guarantee will apply in respect of the difference between the total loan to be advanced by the society and the loan which might normally have been advanced by the society under its rules without guarantee.

(2) The total loan to be advanced by the society with guarantee must not exceed 90 per cent. of the value of the mortgagor's interest in the property as assessed after a valuation made by the local authority in agreement with the building society.

(3) The local authority's liability under the guarantee will arise only if, upon the sale of the property by the society under the power of sale conferred upon them by the mortgage, the proceeds of the sale are insufficient to cover the principal, interest and costs due to the society under the mortgage.

(4) The local authority's maximum liability will then be the difference between the deficiency so arising on the sale and the deficiency which would have arisen if the total original loan had been that which the society would normally advance under its rules without guarantee.

(5) Within one calendar month after the happening of any of the events giving rise to the exercise of the power of sale under the mortgage, the building society shall give notice to the local authority and shall, if so required by the local authority, demand payment of the principal and interest owing on security of the mortgage and in default of payment proceed to the exercise of such power of sale. Subject to this, the building society may allow time to the mortgagor for payment.

(6) At any time after receipt of the notice mentioned in the preceding paragraph and during the continuance of the mortgage, the local authority may acquire the interest of the building society in the mortgage by payment to the society of the principal, interest and costs then owing on security of the mortgage.

(7) The guarantee will be determined when the amount of the loan has been reduced by repayment to 45 per cent. of the valuation.

The Building Societies' Association has prepared a model form of guarantee which embodies the arrangements agreed with the Minister, and this form of guarantee has been circulated to the building societies. The Minister has not accepted any responsibility for the precise form of the guarantee because he considers that this is a matter for the legal advisers of the local authority. He would be prepared to consider favourably proposals submitted to him by a local authority for a guarantee in this form, or in any form which, in the opinion of the local authority's advisers, gives effect to the above arrangements, and he would further be prepared to consider any minor modifications of these arrangements which may be thought necessary in view of any special local requirements.

HOUSING

Many building societies have considerable sums available for investment and the Minister has no doubt that co-operation between building societies and local authorities may have very useful results in encouraging the building of houses for their own occupation by those who have a small amount of savings available for investment.

THE PUBLIC UTILITY SOCIETIES REGULATIONS, 1925, DATED 9TH MARCH, 1925, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 19 OF THE HOUSING, TOWN PLANNING ACT, 1919.

The Minister of Health in pursuance of the powers conferred on him by section 19 of the Housing, Town Planning Act, 1919, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following Regulations:—

General.

1.—(1) These Regulations may be cited as the Public Utility Societies Regulations, 1925.

(2) The Regulations named in the First Schedule to these Regulations are hereby revoked, so far as they relate to Public Utility Societies, without prejudice, however, to the validity of any undertaking given or other act or thing done thereunder.

2. In these Regulations, unless the contrary intention appears:—

"The Minister" means the Minister of Health;

"The Commissioners" means the Public Works Loans Commissioners;

"Society" means a Public Utility Society (a);

"The Act of 1919" means the Housing, Town Planning Act, 1919;

"Local Authority" means the local authority within the meaning of Part III. of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890 (b), for the district in which the houses are provided or are to be provided by the Public Utility Society;

"Scheme" means a scheme for the provision of houses for the working classes prepared by a society and approved by the Minister under sub-sect. (1) of section 19 of the Act of 1919 (c);

"House" means a house comprised in a scheme and includes any yard, garden, outhouses and appurtenances belonging thereto.

PART II.

Exchequer Subsidy.

(3).—(1) Subject to the provisions of these Regulations and to the discharge by a society of its obligations thereunder the Minister may make out of moneys provided by Parliament an annual contribution (in these Regulations referred to as "the Exchequer subsidy") towards the cost incurred by the society in carrying out a scheme.

(2) The Exchequer subsidy shall during the period ending on the 31st day of March, 1927, be an amount equal to 50 per cent. of the annual charges in respect of interest and repayment of principal on the capital raised by the society under the scheme, and thereafter shall be an amount equal to 30 per cent. of those charges, or, if the conditions set out in the next succeeding paragraph are complied with, an amount equal to 40 per cent.:

Provided that—

(i) in the case of the annual charges incurred by the society before the houses are completed if the balance of those charges, after deducting the Exchequer subsidy, is defrayed out of borrowed moneys, such moneys shall not, for the purposes of this article, be included as part of the capital raised by the society under the scheme;

(ii) the Minister may reduce the amount of the Exchequer subsidy in any case in which he is satisfied that the capital expenditure incurred by the society has been excessive; and

(iii) the Minister shall not be under any liability to pay to a society Exchequer subsidy at the rate of 40 per cent. so far as such subsidy is properly attributable to houses already sold by the society, in respect of which the liability of the Minister at the date of the sale has been or will be discharged by virtue of Article 16 of these Regulations.

(3) The conditions upon which the Exchequer subsidy shall, after the 31st day of March, 1927, be 40 per cent. instead of 30 per cent. of the annual charges are—

(i) that the society shall have paid all debts owing to the Crown in respect of materials supplied by the Department of Building Materials Supply; and

(ii) that in any case in which the Minister is satisfied that some person, firm, or body corporate carrying on business was instrumental in promoting the society for the purpose of providing houses for persons employed in such business, such person, firm, or body corporate shall, if the Minister so requires, guarantee by way of collateral security the repayment of any loan advanced by the Public Works Loan Commissioners and payment of interest thereon.

(4) The Exchequer subsidy shall be payable (and shall be deemed always to have been payable) half-yearly in arrear (or in such other manner as the Minister may think fit) during a period of 50 years commencing on the 1st day of April or the 1st day of October, as the case may be, immediately preceding such date as the Minister may have fixed or may fix, having regard to the dates on which the several items of capital expenditure on the scheme were from time to time incurred by the society, as the mean date of that expenditure.

(5) For the purposes of these Regulations the annual charges on the capital raised by the society shall be deemed to be the annual charges which would have been payable, by way of equal annual instalments of principal with interest combined, on the like amount of capital if it had been borrowed from the Commissioners on the terms granted for the time being to societies whether the capital has in fact been borrowed from the Commissioners or otherwise provided.

4.—(1) The Exchequer subsidy shall cease to be payable in respect of any scheme or part of a scheme not carried into effect before the expiry of a period of three years from the passing of the Act of 1919, or such later date as the Minister may allow, regard being had to the supplies of labour and material available from time to time and all other local or general circumstances affecting the carrying into effect of the scheme.

(2) For the purposes of these Regulations a scheme or part of a scheme shall be deemed to have been carried into effect when all the houses to be provided thereunder are let or available for letting.

5. The carrying out of the works shall be subject to the supervision of the Minister, exercised either through his own officers or through the local authority.

6. For the purposes of Article 3 (2) of these Regulations the sum to be included in the capital raised by the society under the scheme in respect of the professional charges paid or to be paid by the society, in connection with the building of the houses and the lay-out of the estate under the scheme, shall not exceed five per cent. of the gross capital expenditure approved by the Minister.

7. The rents to be charged for houses included in the scheme shall be subject to the approval of the Minister, and shall not be altered without the consent of the Minister.

8.—(1) The rules of the society and any amendment thereof shall be subject to the approval of the Minister.

HOUSING

Each tenant [or tenant member] shall be entitled to one vote at the election of the members of the said committee.

(d) The management of the business of the society shall be vested in a board of management, of whose members (as from the date of the first annual general meeting of the society after the approval of the scheme) at least one-quarter shall be tenant members appointed by the tenants' [or tenant members'] committee.

(e) At all general meetings of the society each fully paid-up share against which there is no set-off in the books of the society shall carry one vote, and not less than five times that amount of loan stock held by a member shall carry one vote:

Provided that the possession of loan stock apart from membership shall not entitle its holder either to a vote or to attendance at meetings of the society:

Provided also that a limitation may be imposed on the number of votes which may be recorded at any meeting by any one member.

Provided that the tenant shall not be given notice to quit by the board of management on the ground of conduct detrimental to good neighbourship except with the concurrence of the tenants' [or tenant members'] committee.

(g) Any profits remaining to the society after providing for—

(i) the annual charges, in respect of interest and repayment of principal, on the loans and loan stock raised by the society;

(ii) the taxes, rates, rents, insurance premiums, or other charges payable by the society in respect of any land or houses belonging to them;

(iii) the costs of administration and management and of repairs of property;

(iv) such allocations to a reserve fund as may be determined by the board of management;

(v) any other necessary expenses incurred by the board of management; and

(vi) a dividend not exceeding the rate authorised by the statutes in force, on the share capital of the society; shall be applied in such manner as may be determined by the board of management, for the benefit of the tenants generally.

9. If before the Exchequer subsidy has ceased to be payable the society has sold all the houses comprised in its scheme, and has commenced to take the necessary steps for dissolution under section 58 of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act,

1893 (a), the Minister may pay to the liquidator on behalf of the society, by way of a final payment of Exchequer subsidy, such sum (not exceeding the capitalised value of the Exchequer subsidy payable to the society) as may be required to pay off any net liabilities of the society:

Provided that nothing contained in this article shall relieve the society from any obligation imposed on them by an undertaking given under Article 9 of the Public Utility (Financial Assistance) Regulations, 1919.

PART III.

Sale of Houses.

10. In this Part of these Regulations the expression "sale of a house" includes the grant of a lease at a yearly rent not exceeding five shillings, and in the case of land in which the society has a leasehold interest only the grant of an underlease at a yearly rent not exceeding by more than five per cent. such portion of the rent payable by the society as is properly attributable to the land comprised in the underlease; and the words "sell" and "purchase" have corresponding meanings.

11. Before selling any house the society shall obtain the consent of the Minister and shall be satisfied that the proposed purchaser is the occupier or, if the house is unoccupied, the intending occupier of the house.

12.—(1) The conveyance or other instrument transferring the house to the purchaser shall contain covenants on the part of the purchaser in the terms set out in the Second Schedule to these Regulations with such modifications as may be required in the case of a lease or underlease and such other modifications, if any, as the Minister may approve.

(2) The society shall not, without the consent of the Minister, and subject to such conditions, if any, as he may impose, grant any licence with regard to the user of any house which they may be empowered to grant by any of the covenants referred to in the last preceding article.

13. Before selling or contracting to sell any house, the society shall prepare and submit for the approval of the Minister a schedule apportioning among the several houses included in the scheme the total approved cost of the scheme, such apportionment being based on—

(a) the value of the interest of the society in the site of the house;

(b) the amount expended by the society in the erection of the house; and

(c) a fair proportion of the general expenditure of the society in connection with the scheme:

Provided that in calculating the expenditure under the foregoing heads no account shall be taken of any expenditure by the society towards which no Exchequer subsidy is being made, and any such expenditure shall be shown separately in the schedule.

14. No house shall be sold at a price less than that approved by the Minister.

15. So much of the purchase money as is equivalent to the minimum price at which the house may be sold shall, unless the Minister otherwise directs, be applied by the society as follows:—

(a) First, to the repayment of so much of any outstanding loan borrowed from the Commissioners in respect of the house as will reduce the yearly payment to the Commissioners on account of principal and interest on the loan to an amount not exceeding an Exchequer subsidy equivalent, during the period ending on the 31st day of March, 1927, to 50 per cent., and, thereafter, to 40 per cent. or to 30 per cent. of the annual charges (at whichever rate the subsidy payable to the society is for the time being calculated) on the capital raised by the society and approved by the Minister in respect of that house; and

(b) Secondly, to the repayment of loans borrowed for the purpose of the scheme otherwise than from the Commissioners, or to the repayment or extinction of any shares or loan stock issued for the purpose of the scheme.

(a) 9 Halsbury's Statutes 720.

Every sale made by a society under these Regulations shall be made in accordance with rules to be made by the society and approved by the Minister.

16.—(1) Where a house included in a scheme is sold by the society or by the Commissioners as mortgagees of the house, the Minister may pay to the Commissioners or, if the Commissioners are not mortgagees, to any other mortgagee of the house a sum equal to the capitalised value as at the date of the sale of the Exchequer subsidy apportioned in respect of that house or to so much thereof as is required to discharge the liability of the society to the Commissioners or other mortgagee in respect of principal money and interest payable under the mortgage.

(2) A payment made by the Minister to the Commissioners or other mortgagee under this article shall pro tanto discharge any liability of the Minister to the society in respect of Exchequer subsidy and of the society to the Commissioners or other mortgagee under the mortgage.

17. Save as provided in the last preceding article nothing in this Part of these Regulations shall extend to the sale of a house by the Commissioners in the exercise of a power of sale as mortgagees of the property, or to the sale of a house by the society to any local authority.

PART IV.

Accounts and Audit.

18.—(1) The society shall keep and make up annually separate accounts relating to the scheme.

(2) Such accounts shall, so long as they relate to capital expenditure incurred for the purpose of the scheme, be audited by a district auditor in like manner, and subject to the same provisions, as the accounts of an urban district council, and during that period the enactments relating to the audit by district auditors of the last-named accounts and to all matters incidental thereto and consequential thereon shall for this purpose apply to the accounts of the society.

(3) So far as may be necessary for the purpose of his duties under this article the district auditor shall have access to all the books, deeds, documents, and accounts of the society.

19. The society shall permit any district auditor or other officer of the Ministry of Health, authorised by the Minister, at all reasonable times during the period in respect of which the Exchequer subsidy is payable as aforesaid to have access to and inspect the books, deeds, documents, and accounts of the society.

20. A balance sheet and summary of the accounts relating to the scheme for each financial year shall, during the ensuing financial year, be open to inspection by any person at the office of the society on payment of a fee of one shilling and a copy of the balance sheet and summary shall be sent to the Minister at the conclusion of the financial year to which it relates, and also, if they so request, to the local authority.

CIRCULAR 571.

Housing Authorities and County Councils (England and Wales).

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
12th March, 1925.

ASSISTANCE TO OWNER-OCCUPIERS.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to say that he is receiving many inquiries both from Local Authorities and others with regard to the means by which new houses may be purchased and individuals may become owners of their own homes.

He thinks that the financing of building by loans on mortgage is a method of relieving the housing situation which will make a wide appeal to Local Authorities. It is becoming increasingly evident that there is a large demand for this form of assistance, and that there are many people who will welcome the opportunity of building houses for their own occupation on a first payment of £50 to £100. The Local Authority, by advancing money on loan, will not be adding to the burden of the ratepayers; and they will be helping to create a class of owner-occupiers who will have the strongest personal interest in the proper upkeep of the houses.

The Housing Act of 1923 (as amended by the Act of 1924) conferred new powers (a) upon Local Authorities (including County Councils) which enable them to assist in financing the provision of new houses, and these powers are fully explained in the Ministry's circular No. 520. The Minister notes with satisfaction that there has been a growing desire on the part of Local Authorities to exercise these new powers, as is evidenced by the fact that, since the passing of the Act of 1923, sanctions have been given to 214 Local Authorities in England and Wales for loans amounting approximately to £4,000,000 under Section 5 of the Act of 1923, in addition to sanctions to 200 Authorities amounting in the aggregate to nearly £6,000,000 for advances under the Small Dwellings Acquisition Acts.

In view of the strong evidence of the demand for a still larger extension of these activities, the Minister has had a model pamphlet prepared for the use and guidance of Local Authorities, explaining and illustrating the method by which building may be financed and the individual citizen may be assisted to become his own landlord by advances on loan under the provisions of Section 5 of the Housing, &c., Act, 1923. A copy of this pamphlet is enclosed. The examples which are given will, of course, require adaptation to suit the requirements of individual districts. The rate of interest to be approved by the Minister, for instance, may be higher in some districts than the figure of 5 per cent. which is quoted by way of illustration. A model form of mortgage, Form Housing 50, has also been issued by the Department and published by the Stationery Office.

The Minister invites the Council to consider whether the method described in the pamphlet (if it has not already been adopted) should be put in operation in their area. A pamphlet on these lines would be suitable for distribution to builders and applicants, and the Minister thinks that the Council will also wish to consider what further steps should be taken, by the issue of handbills or in other ways, to ensure publicity for the facilities offered.

The Minister also hopes that Local Authorities will take the fullest possible advantage of the provisions of the Housing Acts, under which they may give guarantees to Building Societies to enable the Societies to make advances in respect of new houses in excess of the amounts which would be normally advanced. Details of the arrangements agreed between the Minister and the Association of Building Societies for the guidance of Local Authorities are set out in Circular 555 (a) recently issued to Local Authorities.

I am, etc.

THE HOUSING (LOANS BY COUNTY COUNCILS) ORDER, 1925, DATED 25TH JULY 1925, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 94 OF THE HOUSING ACT, 1925 (a).

The Minister of Health, in exercise of the powers conferred on him by section 94 of the Housing Act, 1925, and of all other powers enabling him, hereby makes the following Order :—

1. This Order may be cited as the Housing (Loans by County Councils) Order, 1925.

2.—(1) In this Order, unless the context otherwise requires—

"The Minister" means the Minister of Health ;

"The Act" means the Housing Act, 1925 ;

"Housing Loan" means a loan raised by a county council for the purpose mentioned in section 94 (a) of the Act, or, where a loan is raised partly for that purpose and partly for other purposes, such portion of the loan as is declared by the Minister to have been raised for the purpose of the said section 94.

(2) The Interpretation Act, 1889, shall apply to the interpretation of this Order as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

3. The Housing (Loans by County Councils) Order, 1920, is hereby revoked, but without prejudice to any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred under that Order.

(a) 13 Halsbury's Statutes 1056, repealed by the Housing Act, 1936, and replaced by s. 124 thereof, ante, p. 1728.

HOUSING

4. Where the proceeds of a Housing Loan have been lent to local authorities, the county council shall discharge or provide for repayment of such part of the loan as represents the money lent to each local authority within a term ending not later than one year after the date at which that local authority is required to pay off the money lent to it.

5. Money lent to a local authority shall be repayable by it to the county council by equal half-yearly instalments of principal and interest combined within the period for which the local authority has power to borrow:

Provided that where the money lent to a local authority has been raised by the issue of stock, the local authority shall repay to the county council not less than six months before the expiration of the maximum period of the currency of the stock any outstanding balance of the amount borrowed from the county council.

6. All sums received by the county council from a local authority representing repayment of principal shall be applied in or towards discharge of the Housing Loan, or where the Housing Loan was raised by the issue of stock, in or towards redemption of such stock.

7. All sums which under the last preceding Article are required to be applied in or towards redemption of stock shall be transferred to the fund or account to which, under the provisions of the Acts or Regulations for the time being governing the issue and redemption of stock by the county council, sums required to be applied in redemption of stock are to be paid, and notwithstanding anything in those provisions the county council shall not be under any obligation to transfer to that fund or account in any year any greater sum than the aggregate of the sums received during that year and required by this Article to be so transferred.

8. The rate of interest at which money may be lent by the county council to a local authority shall be subject to the approval of the Minister and shall be calculated so as to cover the interest payable by the council in respect of such money together with all expenses incurred by the council in raising the same, and all expenses incurred or to be incurred by them in connection with the management or redemption of any stock or local bonds by means of which the money was raised, including any loss incurred by the council by reason of the rate of interest received in respect of any portion of the proceeds of the Housing Loan and not immediately required for loans to local authorities or in respect of any investments of moneys standing to the credit of any fund or account for the redemption of the Housing Loan falling short of the rate at which interest is payable by the council upon the Housing Loan:

Provided that where the Housing Loan was raised by the issue of stock, the rate of interest payable by the local authority may, with the consent of the Minister, be the same as that payable by the county council on such stock, but in that event the mortgage to be entered into by the local authority shall, in addition to securing the repayment of principal and interest as provided in Article 4 of this Order, include the provisions specified in the Schedule to this Order.

9. This Order shall not apply to the London County Council.

SCHEDULE.

The following provisions shall apply to every mortgage made between a county council and a local authority for securing repayment of a loan where the rate of interest charged is the same as that payable on the stock issued by the county council, and the mortgage shall include such covenants and conditions as may be necessary to give effect to such provisions.

(a) The local authority shall pay to the county council by means of an annuity of an amount to be specified in the mortgage payable half-yearly during a period to be similarly specified not exceeding the maximum period of currency of the stock, a sum equal to the amount, if any, by which the nominal amount of that part of the stock of which the proceeds were applied in making the loan to the local authority exceeded the net proceeds of such nominal amount of stock with interest on that sum at the rate payable under the mortgage in respect of the principal money secured thereby. In ascertaining net proceeds for the purpose of this paragraph a proportionate part of the expenses of the issue of the stock and of any unaccrued interest payable under the terms of issue at the date of the first payment of interest shall be deducted from the proceeds.

(b) The local authority shall pay annually to the county council on a date to be specfied in the mortgage a proportionate part of the expenses incurred by the council during the previous year in connection with the management of the stock, including any composition for stamp duties and any remuneration payable to the Registrar of the said stock and other establishment charges in connection therewith.

(c) At a date within one year from the commencement of the loan to be specified in the mortgage and thereafter at the end of each year from that date during the continuance of the loan and until the redemption of the stock, the amount, if any, by which the total interest paid by all the local authorities (i) in respect of loans made to them out of the proceeds of the Housing Loan, and (ii) under paragraph (a) of this Schedule, together with any interest received by the county council either upon any portion of the proceeds of the Housing Loan which has not for the time being been lent to any local authority, or upon moneys representing principal previously repaid by any such local authority and forming part of the council's redemption fund account relating to the Housing Loan, exceeds or falls short of the amount required to pay interest on the Housing Loan shall be ascertained, and in the case of any excess a proportionate part thereof shall be set off against any sum payable by the local authority under paragraphs (a), (b), or (d), of this Schedule, and in the case of any deficiency a proportionate part thereof shall be paid by the local authority to the county council.

(d) (i) If upon the realisation of any investments standing to the credit of the county council's redemption fund account relating to the Housing Loan the net proceeds of the sale of such investments represent a profit or loss to the council, a proportionate part of the amount of such profit or loss shall in the case of a profit be set off against the sums payable by the local authority to the county council, and in the case of a loss be paid by the local authority to the county council.

(ii) If the county council redeem or purchase and extinguish stock at less than its nominal value by the application of any part of the money carried to the said redemption fund account, the difference between the price at which the stock is so redeemed or purchased and its nominal value shall be treated for the purposes of this Article as a profit made on the realisation of an investment.

(iii) The necessary adjustments between the county council and the local authority for the purpose of this paragraph shall be made annually upon a date to be specified in the mortgage.

(e) Upon the redemption by the county council of any stock issued for the purposes of the Housing Loan the local authority shall repay to the council a proportionate part of any expenses incurred by the council in connection with such redemption.

(f) All powers and remedies of the county council for securing and recovering payment of the principal and interest payable under the mortgage shall be exercisable in respect of any payment to be made by the local authority to the council under the foregoing provisions of this Schedule.

(g) For the purposes of this Schedule a proportionate part of any expenses, profit, loss, or other amount shall mean as regards any local authority a part of such expenses, profit, loss, or other amount bearing the same proportion to the whole as the nominal amount of stock represented by the moneys lent to that local authority bears to the total nominal amount of the stock representing the amount lent to local authorities issued for the purpose of Housing.
